The wedding day was announced Katherine was congragulated, and a little before midnight, with her lover's parting kiss still on her lips, singing softly, she went up to her room. Draped with rose-silk and laces, the carpet wreaths of rosebudson snow, puffy silken chairs, a Swiss music box playing tinkling tunes, fire-light and waxlight gleaming over all—how pretty—how pleasant it looked. And Katherine, in her dinner-dress of rich mazarine blue, and sapphire ornaments set in fine gold, sank down in the puffiest of the chairs with a tired sigh.

There came a soft tap at the door, not the tap of Ninon. Katherine lifted her dreamy eyes from the fire.

'Come in,' she said.

The door opened, and Mrs. Vavasor entered.

She too wore her dinner-dress—the rich sea-green glowed in the light far behind her. The diamonds that were not from the Palais Royal flashed splendidly on her neck, and arms, and ears, and fingers. Her shining, luxuriant black hair floated over her shoulders, and the smile that rarely left her was at its brightest on her face.

'Am I an intruder?' she asked gaily. 'What blissful visions of antenuptial felicity have I frightened away? You will forgive me, I know, my pet. I had to come. Kathie,dear you don't know how glad I am your wedding day is near.'

She took both the girls hands in hers. Katherine's first impulse was to snatch them impatiently away, but she remembered her father's warning. The odious, fulsome, fawning creature had some mysterious power over him; for his sake she must be civil.

'You are very good,' but, despite the best intentions, Miss Dangerfield's voive sounded cold. 'Will you sit down, Mrs Vavasor?'

'No love; I will stay but a moment. See, it is midnight. Weird hour!' with a shrill laugh. 'Are there ghosts, do you know, at Scarswood? Such a dear, romantic old house ought to be haunted, you know, to make it complete. I suppose every house, as the poet says, where men and women have lived and died, is haunted, and as we all carry our ghosts with us through life. But I won't turn prosy and metaphysical on this happy night. Ah! darling Kathie, what an enviable girl you are—how brightly your life has been ordered! Seventeen, rich, flattered, caressed, and beloved! I suppose you have never had a single wish ungratified in your life, and in two months you marry the man you love with your whole heart—a man like 'en's dream of the Olympian Appolo. And others of us go through life and don't find one completely happy day. It is the old nursery story over again; 'This little pig goes to market, and this little pig stays at home. Katherine Dangerfield, what a happy girl you ought to be.'

'I am happy, Mrs. Vavasor.'

Still Mrs. Vavasor stood, and looked at her. How strange the gleam in her eyes! how strange the smile on her lips! The firelight sparkled onher emerald silk,on her coils of satin black hair Katherine had never known fear inall her life—but something in that woman's face made her shrink away in a sort of terror.

'Mrs. Vavasor,' she said, rising and turning white, 'what is it you have come here to say to me?'

The widow laughed aloud—that shrill, metallic laugh that rasped upon the ear.

'What have I come to say? Why, to wish you joy, of course, and to tell you I am going away.'

'Going away!' Ah, Kathie, what a poor dessembler you are! The light of unutterable relief and gladness lights all your face at the words.

'Going away, my dearest; and if I dared harbour so inhospitable a suspicion, I should say you looked gladto hearit. But you're not, are you, Kathie, love?—and you will speed the parting guest with real regret? Yes, my pet, I am going—never to come back—well, not more than once again perhaps—on your wedding day. For I think I must really come to your wedding, little Kathie, and wish that beautiful Mr. Dantree joy. How well he loves yuo, Kathie! he is one of those artless, frank kind of men who wear their hearts on his sleaves,for all the world to read. Yes,I leave Scarswood just one week preceding your wedding day. You look as if you did not understand—but you are ever so much relieved, after all. By the bye Katherine, you grow more and more like your mother every day. Just at this moment, as you stand there in the firelight, in that lovely blue silk and sapphires,you are fearfully and wonderfully like her. Would you believe it, Miss Dangerfield—your mother once prevented my marriage?'

'Mrs, Vavasor?'

Yes, my dear,' the little widow said in her airiest manner, 'prevented my marriage. It is all for the best, you know—oh, very much for the best I am not speaking of Mr. Vavasor, poor dear—your mother never knew him. I was quite young when my little romance happened, a year or two older than you are now. He was scarcely older than myself, and very handsome—not so handsome as that devine Gaston, though, of course. And I was—well, yes—I was just as deeply in love as you, my impetuous darling, are this moment. The wedding day was fixed, and the wedding dress made, and at the last hour your mother prevented it. It is nearly twenty years ago, and if you will believe it, the old pain and dissappointment, and anger, and mortification come back now, as I talk, almost as sharply as they did then. For I suffered— as I had loved—greatly. I have seen him for twenty long years, and I never want to now. He is still alive, and married, with grown up sons and daughters, and, I dare say, laughs with his wife—a great lady, my dear—over that silly episode of a most silly youth, And I—I eat, drink and am merry as you see, I forgave your mother as a Christain should and married poor, dear Mr. Vavasor, and was happy. Your mother died in my arms, Kathie, and now I am comming to her daughter's wedding.'

She laid her hand—burning as though with fever—on the girl's rist and fixed her black, glittering eyes strangely upon her.

'Look for me on your wedding day, Katherine—I shall be there!'

The girl snatched her hand angrily away. 'Mrs. Vavasor,' she cried out. 'what do you mean? Why do you look at me so? You frightened me!'

'Do I?' with her mocking laugh. 'Now, I never meant to do that. I don't mean anything, how could I?—but best wishes to you. Good-night, Katherine—bride elect—heiress of Scarswood—baronet's daughter good-night, and pleasant dreams.

'The Morn is merry June, I trow,
The rose is budding fain;
But she shall bloom in winter snow
Ere we two meet again.
He turned his charger as he spoke,
Upon the river shore;
He gave the reins a shake, and cried,
Adieu for ever more,
My love!
Adieu for ever more!'

A last derisive glance of the black eyes, a taunting smile—singing Mr. Dantree's song—Mrs. Vavasor vanished.

Hours and hours after Katherine sat very still, very pale, and very unlike her bright, dashing, defiant self, before the flickering fire. What did it all mean? Mysteries in books were very nice, the thicker and blacker the better; but in everyday life—well, they were exasperating. What power did this woman hold over her father?—why could he not speak out and tell her? If he could not trust the daughter who loved him, whom could he trust! What did Mrs. Vavasor mean by her sneering taunts, only half hidden, her innuendos, her delusive smiles and glances, her ominous song? Was it in the power of this dark, evil woman to part her and her lover.

'No,' she said proudly, lifting her head with that haughty grace that was her chief charm; 'no man or woman on earth can do that. Nothing in this world can come between Gaston and me, unless he should prove—'

'False!' Not even to herself could she repeat that word. She got up shivering a little.

'It grows cold,' she thought; 'I will go to bed, and to morrow I shall tell papa, and beg him once more to explain. I cannot endure that woman's presence much longer.'

If early rising be a virtue Miss Dangerfield possessed it. She might dance all night, until, 'the wee sma' hours ayont the twal',' but she was prepared to rise at six next morning, as fresh as the freshest. When Sir John came out on the terrace for his morning smoke, he found his daughter pacing up and down slowly in the pale, chill sunlight. A scarlet bournous wrapped her, and her dark face looked wan and sombe from its glowing folds.

'You here, Katherine!' the baronet said, as he stooped and kissed her. He was very gentle with her of late; there was a sort of sad, abnormal tenderness in his face now. It did not surprise him to find her here so early, but looking again at her, he saw how heavy the bright eyes were, how slow the elastic foot-fall, the shadows of the tell-tale face. 'What is it, Kathie?' he asked. 'You look as though you hadn't slept any last night. Has anything gone wrong?'

'Well, no, papa; nothing exactly gone wrong, perhaps; but I feel unhappy, and cross, and mystified. I didn't sleep last night, and it's all owing to that detestable woman. Light your cigar, papa, and I will tell you as we walk up and down.' She clasped both hands around his arm, and looked up with dark, solemn eyes. 'Papa, I want you to send her away. She is a wretch—a wicked, plotting, envious wretch! I was very happy last night —I don't think I was ever happier in my life. What business had she to come and spoil it all? I hate to be unhappy—I won't be unhappy! and, papa, I insist upon your sending the odious little killjoy away!'

His bronzed face paled perceptibly; an angry glance came into his steel blue eyes.

'You mean Mrs. Vavasor, I presume? What has she done?'

'Done!' Katherine repeated, with angry impatience—'she had done nothing—she is too cunning for that; and it isn't altogether what she says, either; it's her look her tone, her smile that insinuate a thousand things more than she ever utters. That horrid, perpetual simper of hers says, plainer than words, "I know lots of things to your disadvantage, my dear, and I'll tell them, too, some day, if you don't use me well." I hate people that go smirking through life, full of evil and malice, and all uncharitableness, and who never lose their temper.'

'You seem to have decidedly lost yours this morning, my dear. May I repeat—what has Mrs. Vavasor done?'

'This, papa; she came to my room last night, instead of going honestly to bed like any other Christian, and began talking to me about my—mother.'

'About your mother!' he repeated, in a tense sort of voice. 'What did Mrs. Vavasor say about your mother, Kathie?'

'She said for one thing, that my mother once prevented her marriage. Now, did she?'

'Not that I am aware of. Was that all?'

'Well, that was all she accused her of, but there were volumes implied My mother died in her arms, she said and she had long ago forgiven her. Papa, if ever I saw a devil in human eyes I saw one in hers as she said it. She hated my mother; she hates me and if it is in her power to do me or you any harm, she will do it before she leaves Sussex as surely as we both stand here.'

'Katherine, for Heaven's sake—'

'She will, papa!' Katherine cried, firmly. 'All the harm she can do us she will do. But is it in her power to really harm us? The will is there fast enough, but is the way?

'My child,' he said, and there was a sob in every word, 'it is in her power to ruin us—to ruin you.'

Katherine looked at him, very pale, very grave, very quiet. You could see at once how this impulsive girl, ready to cry out lustily with impatient anger over little troubles, would bear great ones.

"Then Heaven help us!' she said, if that be true. I don't understand, and it seems to me that you will not explain until the blow falls. Perhaps I could bear it better if I knew beforehand what I had to endure. Just now it seems strangely impossible. You are a wealthy baronet and I am your only child—how can a woman like that injure or ruin us? Pappa,' suddenly, 'is there any flaw in your right of succession to Scarswood—is there any heir whose claim is better than your own?'

He looked at her, a look that haunted her for many a day, with eyes full of trouble.

'And if it were so. If there were a claimant whose right was better than my own—if some day, and very soon, Scarswood were taken from us, and we went out into the world poor, disgraced, and penniless, how would it be then? I have asked you before. I ask you again—could you bear to leave Scarswood and its splendours, and go forth among the women and men who work, and be happy?'

She set her lips close.

'I could go, papa, I suppose,' she answered, in a hard sort of voice. 'We can endure almost anything, and people don't break their hearts for any loss in this nineteenth century. But happy—that is quite another thing. I have told you many times, and I repeat it now, I would rather die than be poor.

She stopped and there was dead silence while they walked up and down the long stone terrace. Up in the bright October sky the sun rained its golden light, and up in the breezy turrets the great break-fast bell began to clang; very fair Scarswood Park looked in the amber radiance of the crisp early morning—the green and golden depths of fern, the grand old oaks, and elms, and beeches, the climbing ivy of centuries' growth, the red deer racing, and the stately old mansion with its eastern windows glittering like sparks of fire. Katherine's eyes wandered over it all—she had learned to love every tree, every stone in the grand old place.

'Papa,' she said at last, a sort of wail in her tone, 'must we go—must we give up all this? Was I right after all, and is this the secret Mrs. Vavasor holds?'

'Supposing it were—what then, Kathie?'

'Then,' her eyes flashed, 'order her out of the house within the hour, though we should follow her the next.'

'What—and brave ruin and exposure when we may avert them?'

'You will not avert them. That woman will not spare you one pang she can inflict. And if we must go'—she threw back her head with right royal grace—'I would rather we walked out ourselves, than wait to be turned out. So that I have you and Gaston left, papa, I can endure all the rest.'

His mouth set itself rigidly under his beard, and the soldier fire came into his eyes.

'Let us go in, papa,' Katherine said resolutely, 'and when breakfast is over, give Mrs. Vavasor her conge. It is for my sake you have been afraid of her—not for your own. Well, I hate poverty, I know, but I hate Mrs. Vavasor much more. Send her away, and let her do her worst.'

'She shall go!'

'Thank you, papa. It was not like you to be afraid of anybody. I will breathe freely again once she is outside of Scarswood, Shall she go today?'

'To-day—the sooner the better; and then, Kathie—'

'Then; papa, when you and I and Gaston go it will be together. If we are to be poor, I will work for you—turn actress, or authoress, or artist, or something free, and jolly, and Bohemian, and try and remember Scarswood and its glories only as people remember beautiful, impossible dreams.'

'My dauntless little girl! But we won't leave Scarswood!—no, not for all the little painted women this side of perdition. She shall go, and we will stay, and we let her do her worst. While I live, at least, you are safe; after that—'

'But, papa!' with a sort of a gasp, 'that other heir—'

The baronet laughed.

'There is no other heir, my dear—Scarswood is mine, and mine only. Mrs Vavasor shall go, and we will have our wedding in peace, and if in the future any great loss or worldly misfortune befall you, let us hope Gaston Dantree's husbandly love will make up for it. Yes,' he lifted his head, and spoke defiantly, as though throwing off an intolerable burden, 'come what may, the woman shall go.'

They found her in the breakfast parlour when they entered, looking out over the sunlit landscape, and waiting impatiently for her breakfast Late hours did not agree with Mrs. Vavasor—it was a very chalky and haggard face she turned to the baronet and his daughter in the garish morning light. Her admirers should have seen her at this hour—the seamed and sallow skin—the dry, parched lips—the sunken eyes with the bistre circles —even the perennial smile, so radiant and fresh under the lamps, looked ghastly in the honest, wholesome sunlight.

'Good-morning, dear Sir John—good-morning, dearest Kathie. How well the child looks after last night's late hours—as fresh as a rosebud, while I—but alas! I am five-and-thirty, and she is sweet seventeen. Well, regret for my lost youth and good looks shall never impair my appetite: "so queen rose of the rosebud garden of girls," the sooner you give me a cup of coffee, the sooner my nerves will be strung for the battle of life that we all poor wretches fight every day.'

MAKING A GOOD JOB.

Judge M——, a well known jurist living near Cincinnati, was fond of relating this anecdote: He once had occasion to send to the village for a carpenter, and a sturdy young man appeared with his tools.

"I want this fence mended to keep out the cattle. There are some unplaned boards, use them. It is out of sight of the house, so you need not take time to make it a neat job. I will only pay you $1.50."

The Judge went to dinner, and coming out, found the man planing each board. Supposing the man was trying to make a costly job of it, he ordered him to nail them on at once, just as they were, and then continued his walk. When he returned the boards were planed and ready for nailing.

"I told you this fence was to be covered with vines." he said angrily, "I do not care how it looks."

"I do," said the carpenter gruffly, carefully measuring his work. When it was finished there was no part of the fence as thorough in finish.

"How much do you charge?" asked the judge.

"A dollar and a half," said the man, shouldering his tools.

The judge stared. "Why did you spend all that labor on the job if not for money."

"For the job. sir."

"Nobydy would have seen the poor work on it."

"But I should have known it was there. No; I'll only take the $1.50." And he took it and went away.

Ten years afterward the judge had the contract to give for the building of certain magnificent public buildings. There were many applicants among master builders, but the face of one caught his eye.

"It was my man of the fence," he said. "I know we should have only good, genuine work from him. I gave him the contract and made a rich man of him."

"Dang it," said Gallagher, "Ragbag what do you want to tell such howling awful lies for? You were giving yourself dead away. Nobody believed you. You'll get the name of being the biggest liar in the city." "Do you really think so?" asked Ragbag. "Think so! I know it!" "Oh, rapture, That's what I want. I'm working to get the job of selling a lot of mining stock in the rural districts."

A man may always be right, yet in going for the tram he may be left.

NOTICE ...

"While in London, England, a short time ago," said the [illegible], "our Oxford-street wafer was made the victim of a practical joke. One morning, as this [illegible] artist sat reading his newspaper, he was startled by seeing a young man enter in a very excited manner, who throwing, rather than seating, himself in the chair, demanded a shave instanter. The barber, who was a ready fellow, at once set about obeying the commands of this excited and hurried guest. With a rapidity that surprised himself, he shaved the right side of his customers' face, and then immediately turned to the left. That side he also shaved with cleanliness and dispatch, but judge of his surprise, when his customer demanded to know in tones anything but pleased why he did not shave the right side. The poor bewildered barber was almost certain that he had done so, but perceived to his surprise that the side in question was covered with jet-black hair. Again he shaved it, but while he did so, to his surprise and horror, the hair was growing on the other side. Thus it continued for an hour. While he shaved one side, he could actually see the hair growing on the other side. Terrified beyond expression, he stood motionless; hereupon the young man leaped from the chair, and snatching the razor, drew it across his throat, and fell to the floor covered with blood. The barber flew into the street hallooing "Murder!" at the top of his voice. A crowd soon gathered, and, with the affrighted barber, beheld the supposed corpse quietly arranging his tie before the mirror—turning very pleasantly, he paid the barber and departed. A theatrical gentleman among the lookers on soon gave it out that it was Professor Hermann the Great American Magician. I went to my hotel and awoke next day to find myself the talk of London.' concluded the Professor, for it was I who did it. I gave the poor barber fits. "Did you ever hear how I gave a friend of mine the snakes?" asked the Professor. On receiving an answer in the negative, he said; "A friend of mine, who was as great a drunkard as an actor, and that is saying a great deal, was one morning seen by me to enter a drinking-saloon when he was almost on the verge of delirium tremens, and knowing his horror of 'snakes,' as mania-a-potu is vulgarly called, I resolved to save him. I entered just as he raised a glass of whiskey to his lips, and rushing forward I snatched the glass from his hand, crying at the same time: 'Hold, E., until I take this fly out.' Pretending to take the fly out, I held up a serpent. C. cried out: 'My God! that is a snake!' 'Not at all,' said I; 'it is a simple house-fly. See? you are covered with them,' saying which I approached, and from his sleeves, and hair, etc., I proceeded to pull snakes, protesting all the time that they were flies. 'They are snakes!' cried C. again. 'My God! that is a snake; I tell you, Hermann, they are snakes!' 'Nonsense,' said I, 'they are but flies.' 'Then,' said he, 'I have the snakes myself!' and he rushed from the saloon. He was not seen for more than a week after; but when next seen he was sober, and has been so since." "Professor," asked the interviewer, "were you, who are so fond of surprising others, ever surprised yourself?" "Once," was the answer: "then the surprise was a very great and agreeable one, I assure you. I came about in this way: I was for a number of years a sufferer from cramps in my left side, immediately under the heart. I suffered regularly at the close of each performance, and very often was compelled to cancel engagements which I had made, owing to my inability to fill them, being prostrated by cramps, and being in a very week condition. I entertained very serious thoughts of giving up my profession and spending some years in travel, and would have done so but for an attendant of mine, whose head I had cut off occasionally while performing my wonderful decapitation act. The individual to whom I complained of the pains and the cramps in my side on one occasion said it was curious—that I, who could decapitate another and replace the head at will, ought certainly be able to cure myself. I told him how some of the best Drs. in Europe and America had failed. He laughed at me, and said he could cure me in a week. That night he presented me with a bottle of St. Jacobs Oil, the Great German Remedy, saying that its use would produce an effect more magical than I could readily believe. I laughed at the idea of St. Jacobs Oil doing what had baffled the greatest doctors, but said that I would try it, simply to convince him that trying it would do no good. That night, on retiring, I rubbed my side with the Oil, and, sure enough, its good effect was instantaneous—magical, in fact; I felt relief at once. I slept better that night than I had done for a long time before. Again in the morning I rubbed with the Oil, and at the close of the afternoon performance I noticed a great diminution of the painful cramps. Was I suprised? Well, I was very much surprised, and I told my attendant so. In less than a week, and before I had finished using my third bottle, I was entirely and permanently cured. The effect of St. Jacob's Oil was indeed magical, so much so that I could scarcely believe my senses. I have never felt a cramp since—nor is there prophet, seer, soothsayer or magician who can perform such wonders as St. Jacob's Oil.

THE POLITEST MAN IN BOSTON.

The politest man in Boston has been discovered. He was hurrying along the other night, when another man, also in violent haste, rushed out of an alley way, and the two collided with great force. The second man looked mad, while the polite man, taking off his hat, said: "My dear sir, I don't know which is to blame for this encounter, but I am in too great a hurry to investigate. If I ran into you I beg your pardon; if you ran into me, don't mention it"—and he tore away at redoubled speed.

Wisconsin has been trying to destroy its wolves, wild cats and foxes by offering a reward for every one killed, and within six months has expended nearly $8,000 in this way. But those who seem to know, say that the only result has been to increase the number of these animals, the reward offered for their destruction being an incentive to breed and raise them.

THE T. G. & B. RAILWAY.

CHANGE OF GAUGE.

On Saturday night the first train on the Standard Gauge passed up on its way to Owen Sound, and notwithstanding the lateness of the hour (9.30 p.m.,) the larger portion of Markdale was at the station to witness its arrival. We passed over the Road on Tuesday last, and we cannot speak too highly of it. The old wooden bridges have been repaired by iron and stone structures, and all the road has been relaid with new ties and heavy steel rails, and at the Humber has been straightened and a magnificent stone and iron bridge thrown a cross that stream. So greatly is the change for the better, as regards comfort, speed &c., that we could hardly bring ourselves to believe that we were on the Toronto, Grey and Bruce Road, and fear we would wake up and find the whole thing a dream.

The change will be a great benefit to the whole country through which the road passes, and the company deserve the best thanks of those interested for the thorough manner in which the work has been done, and we sincerely hope to the immense outlay to which they put will be amply repaid them. The benefits to be derived by the public will be many such an increase speed, facilities for shipping goods to any part of Canada or the United States without breaking bulk, &c. &c.; and they will be well rewarded for the heavy bonuses they have granted to the company in days past. Although the gauge has been changed we are happy to say there has been no change in the staff and the old familiar and smiling faces stil greeted us on our trip to the city. We congratulate the company on their successful completion of the work, and re-iterate the hope that their outlay will be recouped to them an hundred fold.

FLESHERTON.

WE visited Flesherton on Monday last and noticed that considerable improvement had been made since our last visit.

The street lamps first attracted our attention, fourteen in number. They are so arranged that they light up the principle portion of the village. The cost we consider very low, being only $6 each, which amount covers the cost of post, lamp, and placing it in position and ready for use. Mr. Strain had the contract of supplying them. We suggest that Markdale should follow the example set us by our enterprising sister village.

Mr. Richardson's Block, which has been veneered with brick, and thoroughly refitted the past summer, adds materially to the appearance of that portion of the town. We congratulate Mr. R. in his having secured three such desirable tenants for his new premises, viz: Messrs. J. Gordon, A. McPherson, and W. F. Doll.

Mr. Gordon has a very tastily arranged Harness Shop, well supplied with all articles usually kept in a shop of that kind, and is doing a good safe business. In our business relations the past year we have found him an honourable man, and no doubt those who patronize him will bear out our assertion.

Mr. McPherson, manager of the branch of Wm. Lucas & Co's. Bank, occupies the centre portion of the building, and is comfortably and conveniently situated. The establishment of this institution in Flesherton has been a great convenience to the business men and we are happy to say its business is largely on the increase.

The other portion of the premises is occupied by Mr. Doll, and judging from appearances, times with him are booming. He has a very large and fine stock of Watches, Clocks, and Jewelry. It is not necessary for us to wish him success, as that much to be desired position has already been attained.

Mr. Richardson is doing a good business in the Drug Store. He has received his Christmas goods, and has a fine display. Mr. R. is too well known to require and recommendation at our hands.

Mr. R. J. Sproule is also a favorite with the public, at least we should judge so, from the crowd that throng in his store. His millinery Department is managed this season by our old friend, Miss Reid, of Orangeville.

We called on friend Fawcett, of the Advance, and found but half of him there, the better half however, he being at Maxwell on business.

EUGENIA.

From our own Correspondent.

AMONG THE LODGES.—Eugenia Grange to the front. Eugenia Grange No. 684, held their annual December meeting on the 2nd. and after routine business and a sumtious supper, which this grange is proverbial for, the election of officers for the ensuing year was then the order, when the following were elected:—J. M Webster, W. M; G. Latimore, O; R. Carruthers, Sec; J. Gordon, L; J. Pedlar, C; J. Fenwick, T; H. Williams, S; R. Plant, A. S; J. Williams, G. K; Sisters E. Williams, L. A. S; Sisters Carruthers Cerés; Webster, Flora; Pedlar; Pomona. Executive committee, Bros. D. Campbell, J. Pedlar, and G. Latimore. Delegate to Div. Grange, D. Campbell.

Two initations at this meeting bespeaks the general progress and prosperity of the order.

L. O. L. No. 1118, Eugenia, District of Artemesia, Co. Grey, Officers for 1882:—W.M., Bro. J. I. Graham; D. M., Bro. R. Campbell; Sec., Bro. J. G. Carson; Treas., Bro. J. Fenwick; Sen. Com. man, Bro. The season of the year for the shaking of hands and condescending smiles on the part of some people whom you have not had the same pleasure for nearly a year, is now dawning What does it all mean, you begin to think? oh yes, it is near Nomination day. and this is your council man, Give him a good shake off.

MEAFORD ROAD.

From a Correspondent.

It is rumored that Mr. Thomas Boland will be a candidate for councillor, and Mr. Kells for Reeve.

Mr. Joseph Buchanan, son of Wm. Buchanan, Esq., has returned from "Our Home," Dansville, Ohio, where he went last summer for the benefit of his health. We are glad to say his health is much improved.

Mr. and Mrs. P. Munshaw, who left a week ago for Michigan, have returned, not being satisfied with the country across the lines.

ARTEMESIA GRANGE—OFFICERS FOR 1882.—Master, Jno. Weber; Overseer, Thos. Boland; Secretary, Jas. Brodie; Treasurer, Wm. Buchanan Sr.; Lecturer, Jno. Boland; Chaplain, Wm. Buchanan; Auditors, John J. Graham and John Boland; Executive Committee, Wm. Buchanan Jr. W S. Bowler and James Brodie; Delegate to Division Grange, John J. Graham. The business of this Grange has been satisfactory the past year, $1,600 having been paid for goods during the past year.

JOTTINGS FROM MAXWELL,

From a Correspondent.

Slight showers of snow, but still the mud prevails.

The Maxwell Literary and Debating Society met last Friday evening.—From 'the turn out' and entertainment provided, the Society have strong hopes of increased success. A good programme is provided for next meeting.

Mrs. John Heron, of Artemesia, who died on Thursday last, was buried on Saturday.

Her remains were followed to their last resting place by a very large concourse of friends. The deceased was a daughter of Mr. Thos. Gamey of this place. The bereaved family have the heartfelt sympathy of the community.

OSPREY.

In Osprey we have a man by the name of John Fox, who is deranged in his mind. He has built a brush shanty in the woods belonging to W. Nash, 8th con., and intends living there this winter, his only furniture being a small pot and a sap bucket. He is frequently seen with an axe with which he defends himself. He lives principally upon flour porrige and boiled peas.

The weather still continues cold without snow.

St. Mary's Church, Maxwell, is being cleaned out this week, and will shortly be finished. A Christmas Tree for the children will be provided.

Missionary meetings were held yesterday in the C. M. Church throughout the Township, Revs. Messrs. Wilmot and Wilkinson giving lectures.

FIRE.

From the Dundalk Herald.

It is with feelings of regret that we have to chronicle the destruction by fire, of the Post Office Store, owned by G. R. Middleton, Esq. On Sunday morning Mr. Clure, a near neighbor, who has been poorly for some time past, saw the fire through the window of the back kitchen, and immediately gave the alarm, but too late to extinguish the fire. In a few minutes a large number of villagers were at work removing goods and furniture, and succeeded in saving a large quantity. The building being of wood, the fire spread very rapidly and took possession of every department. The amount of Mr. Middleton's loss is about $4,000. There is an insurance of $3,000, in the following companies Fire and Marine, Soverign and Western. Mr. Middleton cannot account how the fire originated.

Dr. McWilliams had a narrow escape, as his sleeping appartment was in the building, and was early entered by the fiery element. The most of the furniture was lost, but by the exertions of Mr. Gordon and some others, the Doctor succeeded in saving all his medicines and office furniture.

The Post Office for the present will be in Mr. J. B. Graham's establishment, next to Samuel McCullough's Hotel, in the shop lately occupied by Mr. Atkinson. Mr. Middleton succeeded in saving all the Post Office matter, so the public may feel easy as to the safety of their correspondence.

A CANADIAN SPEAKS.

When anything worth saying is spoken in that terse and pointed way that bears the impress of honest conviction, we like to have people know the nature of the communication. Of such a nature is the following from Mr. W. F. Haist, Campden P. O., Lincoln Co., Ontario. Mr. Haist says With great joy over my resorted health, I would write a few lines concerning that wonderful remedy, St. Jacobs Oil For the last six years I have been using various medicines internally and externally, but nothing would help me. Finally I procured a bottle of St. Jacobs Oil, which cured me after a few applications. My mother-in-law, who has always been a great sufferer from rheumatism, was also instantly relieved by the use of the Great German Remedy. St. Jacob's Oil is a great blessing to suffering humanity, and I shall do everything in my power to make known its merits.

INSTRUCTIVE AND INTERESTING COMPARISONS.

To the Editor.

SIR—As the time draws nigh for the submission of School accounts, and School affairs generally to the scrutiny and criticism of the electors, I deem it opportune to offer for their information and guidance the following facts and figures, which cannot fail to be both interesting and instructive to all concerned.

As the matter is purely local, perhaps an apology is due to your numerous readers outside, whose interests are in no way involved; still, when it is borne in mind that the annual revenue and disbursements of our school section is equal, if not greater, than the entire yearly controlable expenditure of the township of Artemesia, it will not be wondered at if those out of whose pockets this large sum of money comes manifest a lively interest in the subject under consideration.

It is now almost four years since the present union of School Sections No. 1, Artemesia, and No. 8, Glenelg, was formed; the first Board of Trustees for the United Section having been elected in 1878. At that time a magnificent opportunity lay before those gentlemen elected to the first Board to illustrate, by a judicious and economic management of the school affairs, the benefits which such union was designed to confer. That first Board then enjoyed to the full the entire confidence of the electors; every member of that Board was elected by a large majority.

Sir, how did that first Board fulfil the expectations, the just and reasonable expectations, of those who confided in its wisdom and probity? The question we propose, briefly, with your kind permission, to discuss as follows:

Financially the record stands thus:

1878,	Salaries,	1005 00
	Interest additional on Debentures,	12 00

From the foregoing it will be seen that the spirit of recklessness in the matter of expenditure which possessed the Board in '78, was continued in an aggrevated form in '79; but fortunately early in the latter year that spirit of extravagance was arrested, and thenceforth the actions of the Board were characterized by moderation and economy. Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for the space accorded, I leave the subject with the ratepayers for the present. WM. BROWN.

EUPHRASIA COUNCIL.

A meeting of the Township Council of the Township of Euphrasia was held pursuant to adjournment, on the 26th day of November, 1881.

Members all present.

Minutes of last session of Council read and approved.

One Dollar and sixty cents, arrears of taxes, charged against James Thurston; and 40 cents, arrears charged against Richard Howell, struck of the Collector's Roll, being charged in error.

The time of collecting the taxes of the current year was extended until the 31st day of December next.

The current year's taxes charged to William McElroy, with the exception of the school rates, struck off the Collector's Roll on account of his protracted illness and inability to work.

The proposal of E. E. Knott, regarding his fire safe was accepted, Mr. Knott to deliver the safe at the Clerk's office.

The Treasurer was authorized to pay the claim of Neely and Johnston vs. the corporation, amounting to $90.29.

The Treasurer was ordered to remit to T. Gilleland, Esq., P. L. S., Eugenia, $39, for services rendered surveying.

The Reeve's orders were issued on the Treasurer to pay as follows:—To Richard Snelgrove, Pathmaster, $8, to pay hands employed assisting surveyor on 28 and 29 side-road. John Hunter, $3, being the statute labor charged in error. Freeman Burritt, $6, for building culverts. Donald Wallace, $30.50, for cutting down hill on 12 and 13 side-line, con. 2. Jas. Clugston, $44, for work performed on 24 and 25 side-line.

On motion being made and seconded, the Council adjourned until the last Saturday in December next.
[illegible], Tp. Clerk.

ANOTHER LAKE DISASTER.

LOSS OF THE PROPELLER JANE MILLER.

Owen Sound, Ont., Dec. 4.—The Tug Tommy Wright left on Saturday morning in search of the missing steamer Jane Miller. At the time of writing (4 p.m.) she has not returned with any report. Yesterday afternoon Mr. Scales of the township of Kepple, whose son was a hand on the steamer, went out around Hay and White Cloud Islands. He returned with strong evidence of the steamer's wreck, having found three men's caps, two oars marked "Jane Miller," two tubs of butter, some miscellaneous pieces of furniture a portion of a mast, and a steamer's gang plank on White Cloud island. The Miller's last port of call was at Big Bay, where she took on freight and left for Spencer's dock, a short distance off, for fuel, after which she intended going to Lion's Head, for which place she had on board some ten tons of freight. It was blowing a strong gale from the south-west at the time, and as she never made this latter port it is supposed that she foundered near White Cloud island, and went down suddenly with all on board. It is said there were twenty-five persons on board, made up of crew and passengers, but it is impossible as yet to ascertain the exact number.

THE STEAMER.

The Jane Miller was built at Little Current, Manitoulin island, in 1879. She was purchased in the spring of 1880 by Captain Port, and has since been running between here and ports on the south side of Manitoulin island. She was classed by the Lloyd's as A 2½. The vessel was valued at eight thousand dollars, and insured in the Phœnix Insurance Co. for six thousand. The Miller was considered a staunch little propeller, and has weathered successfully a number of severe gales. Capt. Port was recognized as a most skillful officer, and a man of superior judgment in handling his boat. In February, 1879, he undertook a trip to Michael's Bay with the tug Prince Alfred, having on board Mr. R. A. Lyon, M.P.P., and Col. Farijana, of the Public Works Department. After battling with heavy gales and fields of ice for about a month, and creating grave apprehensions for his safety, he returned. It may be that his undaunted bravery, narrow escapes, and familiarity with the perils of the deep, led him on this occasion to over-estimate the capabilities of the vessel, which has resulted in such a deplorable catastrophe. Capt. Port leaves a widow and large family, as also does the engineer. Both of them resided at Wiarton.

OWEN SOUND, Dec. 5.—The sole topic of conversation to-day is the fate of the steamer Jane Miller and the consequent sacrifice of human life. Even mariners are not inclined to express any very decided opinions as to the probable cause of the disaster. The general public are profoundly appalled at the large number of disasters on our northern lakes this season. It is to be hoped some steps will be taken to place shipping on a sounder basis, to ensure the greater safety of those engaged in such pursuits, and to prevent the frequent recurrence of such horrible catastrophes as this fall has witnessed. The loss of life in the present case was at first thought to be about fifteen or twenty, but every few hours another is added to the list. The number at present can be fairly estimated at from twenty-eight to thirty. The tug Tommy Wright has been out all day cruising around the bay and grappling between Cameron's and Spencer's dock, Colpoy's Bay, where the vessel is supposed to have gone down, but without success. Every effort has been made to secure the names of those on board, but it is still incomplete. The following is as nearly correct as can be ascertained:—A. Port, R. Port, F. Port, J. Christison, Alex. Scales, Gilbert Corbet, and three deck hands unknown, passengers, J. B. Hallock, S. Thompson, J. Walker, Mr. Jestin, L. Vader, J. Gillespie, Capt. Malcolm McLeod, M. Hill, L. Butchart and wife, and ten labouring men going to a lumber shanty at Tobermoray.—Mail.

ZOPESA
(FROM BRAZIL.)

The New Compound, its wonderful affinity to the Digestive Apparatus and the Liver, increasing the dissolving juices, relieving almost instantly the dreadful results of Dyspepsia, Indigestion, and the TORPID LIVER, makes Zopesa an every day necessity in every house.

It acts gently and speedily in Billiousness, Costiveness, Headache, Sick Headache, Distress after Eating, Wind on the Stomach, Heartburn, Pains in the Side and Back, Want of Appetite, Want of Energy, Low Spirits, Foul Stomach. It invigorates the Liver, carries off all surplus bile, regulates the Bowels, and gives tone to the whole system.

Cut this out and take it to your Druggist and get a 10 cent Sample, or a large bottle for 75 cents, and tell your neighbor about it.

Another Victim.—We have to chronicle another desertion from the ranks of bachelordom, in the person of our genial friend Mr. George Grant, who, after due deliberation, has taken Miss Mary Ann Burch to be a partner of his joys and sorrows in the time to come. We hardly know which to congratulate the most—the gentleman in getting a good wife, or the lady in getting a good husband, therefore congratulate them both, and trust their journey through life will be a happy and prosperous one; when we say that we say we believe we but utter the wish of all who had the happiness of knowing them.

A Public Meeting Should be called of the citizens of every city, town and village in the Dominion, to consider what should be done to prevent the hair from turning Grey—and falling out. If this important question received their earnest consideration they would unanimously decide that science had at last discovered something that would answer this purpose and furthermore would recommend Cingalese Hair Renewer as being this something for restoring the hair to its natural color, and prevent its falling out. 50 cents per bottle. Now that winter has well commenced we would advise our readers against using pills containing Calomel and other injurious substance, as there is great danger of catching cold after their use. An excellent substitute for pills is a Vegetable Preparation known as Dr. Carson's Stomach and Constipation Bitters, a family medicine that, from all accounts, will soon take the place of every other purgative and blood purifier. A Turner and Co., Special Agent, Markdale.

We intend issuing 500 extra copies of the Standard and Herald the week before Christmas, for gratuitous distribution. This will be a splendid opportunity for advertisers to let the public know what they have for sale. Send in your advertisements at once, as the space is limited and is being fast taken up.

A FOUR THOUSAND DOLLAR FIRE AT CLARKSBURG.

Clarksburg, Ont., Nov. 24.—This morning, about half past one o'clock, a fire broke out in rear part of the premises owned by Mrs. Rowe, and lately occupied by Thomas Leary as a hotel. Before the inhabitants of the village were aware of the fire, it had gained such headway that there was no possibility of saving the building. The high westerly wind blowing at the time soon carried the flames into the stables, behind these to the Masonic Hall and the large frame dwelling to the east, long owned and occupied by the late F. Lefroy as a hotel, with the stables thereto belonging, and all were consumed. Had the building where the fire originated been wholly frame instead of strip and rough-cast, nothing could have saved James Campbell's and W. Johnson's premises. The loss is divided as follows:—Mrs. Rowe about $1,600, insurance for $1,000; the Masonic Hall and shed, $700, insurance for $300; James Campbell $200, insurance for $50; Solomon Olmsted $1,500, insurance unknown.

Mechanical Orguinette.

An Automatic Reed Organ.

"The Orguinette may now be called a celebrated instrument. In tone it is akin to the Cabinet Organ, but the organ must be manipulated by an artist in order to produce music; the Orguinette is on the other hand entirely mechanical in its action, and at a trifling expense it can be made to furnish an unlimited supply of all kinds of music. —Toronto Globe."

"The Orguinette is indeed a musical wonder. It is a minature reed organ, with as strong and melodious a tone as the Cabinet Size. It surpasses the Cabinet Organ for the reason that the ignoramus in music can play it as well as the most accomplished professor. The Orguinette is strong and accurate in its mechanism, and consequently not liable to get out of order."—Montreal Gazette.

"The Orguinette is the most perfect automatic musical instrument yet invented; its repertorie is unlimited, the tone is remarkably good."—Montreal Star.

MANHOOD

HOW LOST, HOW RESTORED.

WE have recently published a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical and nervous Debility, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage etc., resulting from excesses.

☞ Price, in a sealed envelope, only 6 cts., or two postage stamps.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicines or the use of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

☞ This Lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

THE QUESTION SETTLED.

There's no use in arguing the question of the potency of some substances for especial service in emergencies.—They will do all they promise, and more, if judiciously used. The following from Mr. P. Murphy, of No. 1 Fire Station, Ottawa, bears upon the point stated above. Mr. Murphy says: I had occasion to use St. Jacob's Oil recently, and must say that it is the best Liniment I ever saw used. I caught cold from getting wet at a fire, and it settled in my shoulder and down my back to my hip. I sufferred a great deal from the pain. I was advised to try St. Jacob's Oil. I did so, and after the fourth application I was entirely free from pain. I cannot speak too highly of it, and advise others to use it.

SUSPICIOUS SYMPTOMS.

A minister who was perhaps not too careful in his habits was induced by his friends to take the teetotal pledge. His health appeared to suffer, and his doctor told him to take one glass of punch daily.

"Oh!" said he, "I dare not. Peggy, my old housekeeper would tell" the whole parish."

"When do you shave?" the doctor asked.

"In the morning."

"Then," said the doctor, "shave at night; and when Peggy brings up your hot water, you can take your glass of punch just going to bed.'

The minister afterwards apeared to improve in health and spirits. The doctor met Peggy soon after and said:

"I'm glad to hear, Peggy, that your master is better."

"Indeed, sir, he's better, but his brain's affected; there's something wrang wi' his mind."

"How?"

"Why, doctor, he used to shave at night before going to bed, but now he shaves in the morning, he shaves before dinner, he shaves after dinner, he shaves at night—he's aye shavin'."

ONE EXPERIENCE FROM MANY.—I had been sick and miserable so long and and had caused my husband so much trouble and expense, no one seemed to know what ailed me, that I was completely disheartened and discouraged. In this frame of mind I got a bottle of Hop Bitters and used them unknown to my family. I soon began to improve and gained so fast that my husband and family thought it strange and unnatural, but when I told them what had helped me, they said "Hurrah for Hop Bitters! long may they prosper, for they have made mother well and us happy."—the Mother. —Home Journal.

HOW TO MAKE MONEY.

Most people are aware of the famous advice given by the thrifty laird of Dumbiedykes, on his death bed, to his son and heir: "Plant trees, Jock—they'll grow when ye'r sleepin'!"

The same may be modernized into: —"insert advertisements, ye men of business—they will work while you are sleeping." They will act in a thousand ways—they will go where you can't go—they will say a good word for you in places you least suspected.

What phosphates are to soil advertisements are to business.

Mural notification, while indispensible in some cases, is a relic of ancient days, when the bill-sticker and bellman reigned supreme, and is at best but rough and ready compared to the neat "ad," catching the public eye along with the pungent "leader," or the latest local news.

In short, the business man who doesn't advertise is like a fellow winkin behind spectacles—he may know what he is doing, but nobody else does.

WHAT TO STUDY.

Pope, the poetical philosopher said, "The proper study of mankind is man, and yet, how little is the real science of man studied. If people understood and heeded the laws of health, and if when out of sorts would resort to a common sense like Burdock Blood Bitters, many of the "ills that flesh is heir to" might be effectually remedied. It invigorates and regulates all the secretions to a healthy action.

GOOD MANNERS.

Mrs. D. H. Tuthill, a lady who wrote several charming books for young women, once said in speaking of good manners, that "Human nature resented the imparative mood." Think of this, girls. If you ask a child to wait on you, say "please." Be polite to servants and inferiors. Be courteous even to the cat. Why push her roughly aside, or invite her claws? If kindness, goodnature, and gentleness ruled every home, what sunlight would home enjoy. A great deal depends upon the girls—the sisters, the daughters.

A RELIABLE FACT.

It is an established fact that Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam is the best cure for coughs, colds, sore throat, asthma, croup, bronchitis, and all troubles arising from neglected colds. Price 25 cents.

A SCOTCHMAN ON MANITOBA.

The following epistle from Archy McCall a Scottish resident of Manitoba, to the Lang Kail Club, of Airdie, Scotland, was lately inserted in the Advertiser, published there:—

"DEAR FRIEND,—About three weeks after we parted with you at Kirkwood, we arrived in this country. But oh! dear, dear! it is a far awa place. What with the passage in the boat, and the passage by the land, it is a long road indeed—away over to the other side of the world altogether. It is not the place where the people walk with their heads down as you do think; but the place where they stick straight out like preens frae a preen cushion. Yet strange to say, we ken nae odds of oor sel's by what we did in Scotland. Our heads are just as they were, and the skies are above us, the same as they were before, an' we dinna stick oot like preens. We have taken up a section and a half of land, that is 960 acres, and we have called the place Achanmoor, which is a very good name tae, as you will understand. The first thing we did after we got to our land was to delve oor yaird, which we also did in first-class style. All the seeds we brocht oot were sown in due order, and are now brairded, and the kail and the cabbage are just wonderful to look at. We will transplant as many oot our beds as wad be able to feed a drove o' nout as big as the cattle market of Glasgow ony day. A big farmer not far from us said if we would give him twa days harrowing and twa days harvesting at the end of the season he wad lend us his twa ploughs for a week. So we got the twa ploughs, and the stots in them, and we have turned ower as much ground as will give abundance of everything we desire. We have in four acres of wheat, an acre of barley, and an acre of peas. We will plant twa acres o' tatties directly, and some turnips and Indian corn, say about an acre of each, and about an acre and a half of oats. Now did ever ye ken such good fortune, or such good luck? What way should folk whine and yammer ower imaginary ills? Gang oot and meet the ills o' life boldly, and they will flee away a long while afore ye come to them. In our case this has been so, and so will it be in everybody's case wha puts a "stout heart to a stey brae."

This is a fine country, as level as Glasgow Green for miles and miles. Will Ferguson says if the Heilans and this country had been mixed thegither it wad hae been o' some advantage to baith places; and Will's maybe no far wrang; for a ben every fifty miles or so here wad be a great improvement. The air is clear and pure, and you can see for thirty or forty miles at a stretch, just by a' the world gin ye we're looking ower the sea. Between poaching and fishing we are getting as much flesh, fish, and fowl as we can wire intae, and no a gamekeeper tae say—"What dost thou?' Jack M'Lean shot a moose yesterday morning which was as fat as butter, and we did bleed her, and did make the black puddin's and the white, just like as when a mart was killed in the Heilans. We brocht wi' us from Winnipeg to our farm a bag of oatmeal, a bag of wheat meal, a bag of Indian corn meal, and a bag of pease meal and we do have pease brose and bannocks, and scones, in galore. Our oatmeal bannocks we toast at the fire on stanes, and our Indian meal we make like parritch, and mixes it up with the wheaten flour which makes grand scones. All are most excellent as a king could desire to eat. We have got a cow, too, for which we paid £6, and so have milk in plenty, and we wonder if our friends in Old Monkland be as well off as we are, for we are literally in clover, though we have to eat and drink in a shanty wi' no a spoon in the house.

Other six o' ye may come oot about the end o' summer for we will have plenty to keep you till next year, when the whole club may come. It will not be beef and greens at Naerday then, but every day and all day long if we have a mind. Meanwhile your loving friend.

ARCHY M'CALL.

THE ELECTRIC LIGHT.

Superceding as it does all other modes of illumination, and rivalled only by the glorious sunshine, will not be hailed with greater joy by mankind, than is Burdock Blood Bitters, which is as far superior to all other blood purifiers and tonics as the electric light is superior to the old fashioned tallow dip. Burdock Blood Bitters cures Scrofula, and all foul humors and impurities of the blood.

Mr. C. R. Sing, Reeve of St. Vincent, was able to attend the council part of the time on Saturday last. We are pleased to know that he is steadily recovering from the effects of his late accident.—Monitor.

SURE CURE FOR A COUGH.

The most reliable remedy for a cough or cold, asthma, shortness of breath, sore throat, weak lungs bronchial troubles, is Hagyard's toral Balsam. Price 25 cents.

TWO MAILS.—We believe the Post Office authorities have definitely decided to give us two mails per day by the T., G. & B. R., the change to take effect as soon as the change of gauge on the road is made. The announcement is one that will be received with satisfaction by our merchants and citizens generally.—O. S. Times.

HAGYARD'S YELLOW OIL.

Will be found invaluable for all purpose of a family medicine. Immediate relief will follow its use. It relieves pain, cures chilblains, frost bites, scalds, burns, corns, rheumatism, neuralgia, &c. For internal use it is none the less wonderful, One or two doses frequently cure sore throat. It will cure croup in a few minutes. A few bottles has often cured asthma. Colic has been cured by a teaspoonful dose. It cures with the utmost rapidity, it is really a wonderful medicine.

BEWARE OF THEM.—Shoddy peddlars are now travelling through the country swindeling the farmers. The pedlars offer one or two articles cheap, and then charge big prices for worthless goods. A farmer will save his pocket by refusing to look at the ware of these oily-tongued agents. If you can not get rid of them any other way set the dog on them.—Echo.

HAGYARD'S YELLOW OIL.

Is at the head of the list for all purposes of a family medicine. It is used with unprecedented success, both internally and externally. It cures sore throat, burns, scalds, frost bites; relieves, and often cures asthma.

Cathartic Pills
Combine the choicest cathartic principles in medicine, in proportions accurately adjusted to secure activity, certainty, and uniformity of effect. They are the result of years of careful study and practical experiment, and are the most effectual remedy yet discovered for diseases caused by derangement of the stomach, liver, and bowels, which require prompt and effectual treatment. AYER'S PILLS are specially applicable to this class of diseases. They act directly on the digestive and assimilative processes, and restore regular healthy action. Their extensive use by physicians in their practice, and by all civilized nations, is one of the many proofs of their value as a safe, sure, and perfectly reliable purgative medicine. Being compounded of the concentrated virtues of purely vegetable substances, they are positively free from calomel or any injurious properties, and can be administered to children with perfect safety.
AYER'S PILLS are an effectual cure for Constipation or Costiveness, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Loss of Appetite, Foul Stomach and Breath, Dizziness, Headache, Loss of Memory, Numbness, Billousness, Jaundice, Rheumatism, Eruptions and Skin Diseases, Dropsy, Tumors, Worms, Neuralgia, Colic, Gripes, Diarrhœa, Dysentery, Gout, Piles, Disorders of the Liver, and all other diseases resulting from a disordered state of the digestive apparatus.
As a Dinner Pill they have no equal.
While gentle in their action, these PILLS are the most thorough and searching cathartic that can be employed, and never give pain unless the bowels are inflamed, and then their influence is healing. They stimulate the appetite and digestive organs; they operate to purify and enrich the blood, and impart renewed health and vigor to the whole system.

A WONDERFUL WOMAN.

In dead silence Katherine obeyed—in dead silence the baronet took his place. Her fate was sealed, her days at Scarswood numbered. She saw it at a glance.

'I frightened her last night,' she thought, 'and she has been laying in a complaint to papa this morning, and papa has plucked up courage from despair, and I am to get the route to-day. What a fool I grow! Having waited nineteen years, I might surely have waited two months more. Well, as I must hold in my hand that promised cheque for ten thousand pounds before I cross the threshold, what does it signify? I shall go to London or Paris—my own dear, ever new, ever beautiful Paris—until the last week of the old year, and enjoy myself instead of moping to death in this dull, respectable English house, among dull, respectable English people. It is just as well as it is.'

Mrs. Vavasor was as agreeably conversable as usual during breakfast, but as three-quarters of an hour's steady talking to people who only answer in tersely chill monosyllables is apt to be wearisome even to the sprightliest disposition, her dreary yawn at rising was very excusable.

'I believe I shall postpone my shopping expedition to Castleford, after all, this morning, and go back to bed. Oh dear!' another stifled yawn, 'how sleepy I am. And we dine this evening, do we not, dearest Kathie, at Morecambe?'

'Mrs. Vavasor,' Sir John interrupted, with cold, curt, decision, 'before you go to Castleford or to sleep, be kind enough to follow me into my study. I have a word to say to you.'

He led the way instantly; Mrs. Vavasor paused a moment and looked over her shoulder at Katherine with that smile the girl hated so.'

'I think I understand,' she said, slowly. 'My time has come. If I shall not be able to put in an appearance at the Morecambe dinner party this evening, you will make my apologies, will you not, dearest? And give my love to that perfectly delicious Mr. Dantree.'

And then she went, humming a tune, and entered the study, and stood before the grim old baronet.

He shut and locked the door, took a seat, and pointed imperatively for her to take another. All the time her eyes followed him with a hard, cold glitter, that seemed to set his teeth on edge. He looked her full in the face, and plunged headlong into his subject.

'Harriet Harman—Mrs. Vavasor—whatever name you please, you must leave this house at once! You hear—at once!'

'I hear,' she laughed. 'It would be a dull intellect indeed, my dear Sir John, that could not fail to comprehend your ringing military orders I must go, and at once. Now, that is hard when I made up my mind not to stir until after Christmas. Your house is elegant, your cook perfection, your wines unexceptionable, your purse bottomless, and your friends emient ly respectable. I'm not used to respectable people, nor full purses, and I like Scarswood. Now, suppose I insist upon spending Christmas here after all?'

She folded her arms, and looked at him exactly as she had done on the night of her arrival.

'I will suppose nothing of the sort—you must go.'

'Ah! I must! I like people, do you know, who say a thing, and stick to it. Well, you're master here, of course, and if you insist upon it, what can a poor little helpless widow do? But, Sir John, I wonder you're not afraid.'

'Beyond a certain point fear ceases, and desperation comes. I can endure your presence, your sneers, your covert threats no longer. Yo are no fit companion, as I told you before, for Katherine—a woman noted as the most notorious gambler of Baden and Homburg during the past ten years. The girl hates you, as you know, and you—how dared you go to her room as you did last night, and talk of her mother? How dared you do it?'

His passion was rising—there was a suppressed fury in his tone and look, all the stronger for being so long restrained. The widow met it with a second scornful laugh.

'How dared you do it? You have yet to learn what I dare do, Sir John. Don't lose your temper, I beg—it's not becoming in a soldier, a gentleman, and a baronet. How dared I talk to Katherine of her mother? Now, really, Sir John, that sounds almost wicked, doesn't it? What more filial—what more sacred subject could I talk to a child upon than the subject of her sainted mother?'

'Harriet, I thought I would never stoop to ask a favour of you again, but now I do. Tell me—'

'That will do, Sir John—I know what is coming, and I won't tell—never! never! never! It would be poor revenge indeed if I did. What you know now is all you ever will know or she either. I'll leave Scarswood to-day, if you like. After all, hum-drum respectability and stupid stuck up county families are apt to pall on depraved Bohemian palates used to clever disreputable nobodies. Yes, I'll go, Sir John. Give me that ten thousand pound cheque. Mon Dieu! the life I mean to lead in Paris on that; delightful, respectable, orthodox—and I'll shake the dust of Scarswood off my feet—for ever!'

'For ever! You swear never to trouble us more?'

'I will swear anything you like, baronet. Oaths or words—it's all the same to Mrs. Vavasor.'

'How can I trust you? How am I to tell that after I pay you the exorbitant price you ask for your secrecy, you will not go to Peter Dangerfield and betray me?'

Mrs. Vavasor laid her hand on her heart.

'On the honor of all the Vavasors, whose sang-azure flows in those veins, I swear it. You must take my word, baronet, and chance it. Have I not promised—am I not ready to swear—"by all the vows that ever men have broken!" What more do you want? Give me the money, and let me bid you—"oh, friend of my brighter days!"—one long, one last farewell!'

He went to the writing-case, and handed a crossed cheque for ten thousand pounds. Her eyes flashed with intense delight as she looked at it.

'Ten thousand pounds! Ten thousand pounds! and I never had ten thousand pence before in all my life. Sir John, a million thanks. May you be happy!—may your shadow never be less! May your children's children (meaning the future little Dantrees) rise up, and call you blessed! Those aged eyes of yours will never be pained by the spectacle of my faded features more. I go, Sir John—and I leave my benediction behind.'

She went up to her room singing. Ninon was summoned, a chambermaid was summoned, and Mrs. Vavasor worked with a right good-will. Two little shabby portmanteaus had held Mrs. Vavasor's wardrobe last September—now four large trunks and no end of big boxes, little boxes, and hand bags were filled. And with the yellow radiance of the noonday sunshine bathing park, trees, turrets, and stately mansion in its glory, Mrs. Vavasor was whirled away to Castleford station.

She looked back as the trap flew through the great gates, and under the huge Norman arch.

'A fair and noble inheritance,' she said; 'too fair by far to go to her mother's daughter. Your is sky without a cloud, now, but when I next come, my brilliant, happy, haughty Katherine, look to yourself. This morning's work is your doing—I am not likely to forget that.'

Mrs. Vavasor was gone. The news falls upon Mr. Peter Dangerfield like a blow. As suddenly and mysteriously as she had at first appeared, she had vanished, and where were all her vague promises and bewildering insinuations now?

Katherine was to be married, the wedding day was fixed, he had been bidden to the feast. She had insulted him, scorned him; he must pocket his rage, and live without his revenge. He was not prepared to break the law and commit a murder, and how else was he to pay off this insolent heiress, and her still more insolent lover? Mrs. Vavasor was gone, and all his hopes of vengeance went with her.

Something might happen, to be sure, between this and the wedding day. Gaston Dantree might be shown up in his true colors, as the unprincipled fortune-hunter he was. People die suddenly, too, occasionally. Katherine might break her neck even, in one of her mad gallops over highways and byways. While there is life there is hope.

He went to Scarswood pretty frequently, saw the lovers together happy and handsome, made himself agreeable, always in a cousinly way, and the week sped on. The trousseau was ordered, all was joy and gaiety at the house. Christmas week came and nothing had happened.

He sat moodily alone one evening—Christmas Eve it chanced to be—before his solitary bachelor fire, brooding over his wrongs. His solitary, bachelor dinner stood on the table—he had been invited to a brilliant dinner party at Scarswood, and hoping against hope. Nothing ever befell this insolent pair—Katherine grew happier—brighter—more joyous every day, and that upstart, Dantree, more good-looking. Nothing happened; luck was dead against him; nothing would ever happen. This night week was the wedding night—and what a life spread before those two in in the future. It drove him half mad to look at them at times. And he—he must go on grubbing like a worm in the clay, for ever and ever. Katherine and Katherine's children would inherit Scarswood, and all hope was at end for him. He was only a rickety dwarf. Never while life remained would he forget or forgive those cruel words.

'If I live for sixty years to come, I'll only live in the hope of paying you off, my lady,' he muttered, clinching his teeth; 'it's a long lane, indeed, that has no turning! Curse that Mrs. Vavasor! If she knew anything, why didn't she tell me?'

There was a tap at the door.

'Come in,' he called sulkily; 'it's time you came to clear away that mess.' He thought it was the servant, but instead a lady—dressed in black, and closely veiled—entered.

He rose in surprise, and stood looking at her. Who was this? She shut the door, turned the the key, advanced toward him, and held out her hands to the fire.

'It is cold,' she said, and I have walked all the way from the station. Have you dined? What a pity! And I am hungry. Well, give me a glass of wine, at least.'

He knew the voice. With a suppressed exclamation he drew nearer.

'It is,' he said—'surely it is—'

'Mrs. Vavasor!' She flung back her veil and met his his glance, with the old smile, the old malicious expression. 'Yes, it is Mrs. Vavasor, come all the way from Paris to see you and keep her word. A promise should be held sacred and I promised you your revenge, did I not? Yes, Mr. Dangerfield, I have travelled straight from Paris to you, to tell what is to make your fortune, and mine—Sir John Dangerfield's death.'

CHAPTER XI.

THE WEDDING NIGHT.

With a fierce, low cry of intense delight Peter Dangerfield grasped her by the wrist, his thin face close to hers, and flushed with eager joy.

'You will tell me!' he almost gasped—'you mean it this night!—you will tell me to-night!'

'To-night. Let go my wrist, Mr. Dangerfield; you hurt me. Be civil enough to hand me a chair; now a glass of wine—or brandy, if you have it. Ah! this is the true elixir of life!'

She sat down before the fire, put up her little Paris gaiters on the fender, lay back luxuriously, and took the glass of French brandy he offered her.

'You are sure there are no eavesdroppers in your establishment, mon ami? I don't care about being overheard.'

'There are none.'

She drew forth from her purse a slip of written paper—Peter Dangerfield's promise to pay her ten thousand pounds when Scarswood became his.

'You recognize this, Mr. Dangerfield, and are still willing to abide by it?'

'Perfectly willing. For Heaven's sake, don't keep me in this fever of suspense and curiosity—speak out!'

She replaced the slip of paper, finished the brandy, and produced a rose-scented cigarette.

'I always smoke when I talk, if possible, and the story I have to tell is a somewhat lengthy one. Won't you load and light up also?—I see your little black pipe up there on the chimney-piece. No? You're too anxious I perceive, and nobody can enjoy a pipe or manilla and listen thoroughly at the same time. Well, before I begin, I must extract another promise. No matter what I tell you, you are not to speak of it until I give you leave. Don't look alarmed—your prohibition will not last long—only until Katherine Dangerfield's wedding-day. Is it a promise?'

'It is. Go on—go on!

'Draw closer, then.'

He obeyed, and little Mrs. Vavasor, leaning back in the easy chair, shoes to the fire, cigarette in mouth, began, fluently and at once, the story she had come to tell.

The Christmas festivilies at Scarswood were very gay indeed, and Mr. Peter Dangerfield missed a very pleasant evening by staying away. Perhaps, though, on the whole, he enjoyed himself quite as much in his bachelor lodgings at Castleford, tete-a-tete with Mrs. Vavasor. The long drawing rooms were ablaze with light, and festooned with ivy and mistletoe, and gleaming with scarlet hollyberries. A very large company were assembled—it was an understood thing that Miss Dangerfield appeared in public no more until she appeared as a bride.

She was looking very well to-night—her large eyes full of lustrous light, animated face dimpling ever into radiant smiles. Her silken robe of white, shot with palest rose, blushed as she walked; large Oriental pearls clasped back the floating brown hair, and shone in cloudy splendour on her slim throat. Not hansome—never that—but bright with health, youth, and perfect happiness.

Since the day of Mrs. Vavasor's departure, the days and weeks lay behind her in a golden mist. Time never flew so fast before.

"How noiseless fall the feet of time
That only tread on flowers."

The only thorn in her rose crown had been removed—papa looked contented, or if not contented, resigned—Gaston was all in the way of a devoted Romeo the most exacting Juliet could wish. Then there had been the trousseau to order—a trip to London to make, endless new dresses, and bonnets, and presents, and all together Christmas eve had come with magical quickness. On New Year's Eve—just one week from to-night she would be Gaston's wife, and the happiest bride the wide earth held. They were to be married at eleven in the forenoon in Castleford Church. Edith Talbot to be first bridesmaid, and her brother chief groomsman, and after the wedding breakfast the "happy pair" were to start on their honeymoon journey—a long, delightful continental trip, which was to extend far into spring. Then would come the return, the bonfires, the bell-ringing, the feasting of tenantry, and she and Gaston would settle down seigneur and chatelaine of Scarswood, and life would go on for ever, a perpetual round of London seasons, presentations at court, Paris winters, autumns at Scarswood, operas, balls, and all the salt of life.

That was the programme. 'Man proposes"—you know the proverb. The ante matrimonial horizon just at present looked cloudless—a violet sky set with golden stars—not a cloud in all its dazzling expanse. And five miles away, at Castleford, a man and woman sat plotting her life-long misery, disgrace and ruin.

Mr. Dantree was in great force to-night—his voice, and looks, his whole worldly wealth, at their best. He had been the world's foot ball a long time—a scapegoat of society, fighting his way inch by inch, and now the goal was won. Fortune such as he had never dared dream of or hope for had come to him—eight thousand a year, and a title in prospective. And all, thanks to his suave, olive-skinned beauty and flute-like voice.

[TO BE CONTINUED]

ONE EXPERIENCE FROM MANY.—I had been sick and miserable so long and and had caused my husband so much trouble and expense, no one seemed to know what ailed me, that I was completely disheartened and discouraged. In this frame of mind I got a bottle of Hop Bitters and used them unknown to my family. I soon began to improve and gained so fast that my husband and family thought it strange and unnatural, but when I told them what had helped me, they said "Hurrah for Hop Bitters! long may they prosper, for they have made mother well and us happy."—the Mother.—Home Journal.

The Boston Daily Post has been established fifty years. Mr. Shillaber (Mrs. Partington) graduated in the office of the Post. He was in the habit of seeing in the editorial room George Bancroft, Horace Greeley, Mr. Peter Fessender, Franklin Pierce, and a host of other distinguished men.

The greatest cotton raisers in the world is Mr Edward Richardson, of Mississippi. He raises cotton, gins, spins and weaves it. He owns 52,000 acres of land, and last year raised over 12,000 bales of cotton. He raises 36,000 pounds of seed cotton every year, from which he makes oil at the rate of 35 gallons per ton, and oil cake which brings him $7 per ton. Mr. Richardson is worth from fifteen to twenty millions of dollars.

GIRLS WITH MOUSTACHES.

"Yes," said an eminent physician, when the topic was being discussed at a dinner table after the ladies had retired. "When you see a dark woman with large bushy eyebrows which nearly grow together, you may be pretty sure that she can grow an imperial if she will only take the necessary pains. Hirsute adornments are not so frequent in young women, although they sometimes occur. A girl often has a heavy growth of down upon the upper lip or the chin. It annoys her, and she keeps feeling it and pulling it continually. Perhaps she endeavors to clip it with scissors, or in some cases shaves it away. The result is a heavier growth next time, which becomes so prominent that it must be removed The most frequent place where the hair makes its appearance is on the upper lip or chin, although it some times appears on the side of the face and even on the throat. As a general thing, I believe those bearded women who are advertised by shows are frauds, but in the course of my practice I have seen more than one woman who could raise a heavey beard if she only wished to cultivate." Do many women shave?" "Why, yes, a great many more than is generally supposed. They hide the traces that the shaving leaves with heavy doses of powder and plaster. Whenever you see a lady especially if she be middle aged, wearing a heavy coating of lilly-white, one of the conclusions is that she has been shaving, although it is not the only inference. One thing is certain, a lady who shaves must use powder in large quantities, and there are many ladys who shave."

ON THE HIP.

This rather inelegant expression, used popularly to indicate that condition of things in which one person holds another securly by some circumstance, word or act, finds literal exemplification of the following narritave by Mr. John Rourk, of Ottawa, Canada. Mr. Rourk says: I have been subject to hip disease for 8 or 9 years, and I have tried all kind of remedies, but found nothing to give me any relief until a friend adyised me to try St. Jacob's Oil. I tried it, and after using 1¼ bottles I am entirely relived of pain, and have not been troubled since, now nearly six months. This is what people would call his getting hip disease "on the hip."

THE CHAMHION TRAMP.

The champion tramp turned up yesterday at the Castle Garden Emigrant Depot. His name is William Kelleher, he was born in Ireland 38 years ago, and came to this country May 6, 1880, as a stearage passenger on the steamer Greece, from Liverpool. Before coming to New York he had been in South Africa for several years, and while working on a new railroad there he lost the sight of an eye and sustained injury to the other by the premature discharge of a gunpowder blast. On arriving in New York City he failed to get employment, and set out on foot through New Jersey and Pennsylvania. At Uniontown, in the latter State, he obtained a week's employment in a quarry, but was then discharged.—Again setting out on a long walk, he turned eastward and fetched up in Boston. In a few days he was put in the workhouse for vagrancy and begging, and kept at the expense of the county for six months. Released from confinement, he started to walk to New York, and got as far as New Rochelle, Westcher county, when he was again apprehended as a vagrant, and sent to the county jail for a month. At the end of the confinement he made good time to the metropolis, but encountered ill-forune, could get no work, and drifted again to New Jersey. In an aimless series of wanderings he passed southward until he got as far as Charleston, S.C. If Kelleher tells the truth, there must have been some sort of "boycotting" practiced against him throughout the whole of his perigrinations, for he could obtain no work anywhere, and as a consequence, like Sherman's columns on their way to the sea, or like an army worm, he subsisted on the country through which he marched.—He says he did not like the climate or the business outlook of the South, and therefore started back for New York by a new route, not caring to repeat his levies for supplies on the exasperated communities who he had previously ravaged. He has finally made the grand tour, he thinks, now asks that the Emigration Commissioners will send him back to Enland. As Europe, nor Africa, nor America have yet been able to afford this gentleman the opportunity in life which he seeks it is surmised that he now cherishing some design against the Continent of Asia, with a view as an ultimate necessity to a descent on the Australian Islans.—New York Paper.

WHEN TO FEED GRAIN TO HORSES.

Horses are provided with an unusually lage developement of the salivary glands, and an enormous amount of saliva is secreted during the eating of a feed of grain or hay. This copious supply of saliva is amply sufficient to moisten and dilute the food, so that it can be digested perfectly without the help of water. Water is absorbed by coats of the stomach and enters the blood with such rapidity that a thirsty horse will drink more water than the stomach will contain at one time, and the water begins to pass off through the kidneys in such a case, after the lapse of a very few minutes. So that, knowing these facts, one may naturally infer that a horse may be watered a few minutes before feeding with more advantage than soon afterward, because in the former case the water has been absorbed before the food has been swallowed, and digestion cannot be interfered with by the presence of too much water in the stomach, as might happen in the latter case. The best practice is that usually followed, namely, to give the horse a little water [illegible] in the morning; to water on coming in at noon, in the evening, before unharnessing and feeding. This gives time for the absorption of the water before the food enters the stomach.—Exchange.

"I BEG YOUR PARDON."

A civil word is the cheapest thing in the world, and yet is a thing which the young and happy rarely give to their inferiors. See the effect of civility on a rough little street boy. The other evening a young lady abruptly turned the corner, and very rudely ran against a boy, who was small and ragged and freckled. Stopping as soon as she could, she turned to him and said: "I beg your pardon; indeed, I am very sorry." The small, ragged and freckled boy looked up in blank amazement for an instant; then taking off about three-fourths of a cap, he bowed very low, smiled until his face became lost in the smile, and then answered: "You kin hev my parding, and welcome, miss; and yer may run agin me and knock me clean down, an' I won't say a word." After the young lady passed on, he turned to a comerade and said, apologetically: "I never had any one ask my parding, and it kind o' took me off my feet."

ANOTHER THEATRE HORROR.

THE RING THEATRE IN VIENNA BURNED.

The Ring Theatre, formerly the Comic Opera House, took fire on the night of the 8th inst., just before the biginning of the opera. The fire was caused by the fall of a lamp on the stage. The house was tolerably full and the loss of life is very great. Up to 9.30, seventy bodys had been recovered. Many persons were injured. Sixty were saved with ladders, and by jumping into clothes held below. The greatest efforts were made to save life. The scene was terrible, the flames shooting up through the roof and eventually gutting the entire building.

At 11 p. m. a hundred and forty-five bodies had been brought out of the theatre, but the dead therein are still numerous, many bodies having been consumed in the galleries and other elevated parts of the building. The chief cause of the catastrophe was that in the confusion the iron partition separating the stage from the auditorium was not lowered. Thousands of people assemble in the neighboring streets, where they could hear the cries of agony of the people at the windows of the theatre praying to be saved. The rapidity of the flames prevented the people from taking advantage of the ordinary exits. Only a small portion of the audience saved themselves, which they did by leaping from the windows, three stories high, into the cloths held below.

MIDNIGHT.—The taking out of the bodies from the theatre continues. It is estimated that three hundred persons perished. Some of the bodies are fearfully disfigured. Several persons were injured springing from the windows. Among the missing a Fifie, Court Musical Director, a Hellmersperger. Most of the bodi identified up to the present are tho of tradesmen and minor officials. O the spreading of the news of the di aster the performances at the othe theatres were stopped.

LATER PARTICULARS.

Dec. 9.—Researches show that th upper gallery must have fallen in the pit, where the only remains fou are small fragments of bone. Beyon a doubt, 900 gallery tickets were iss ed; 100 holders of these jumped fro the windows. Competent judges fe that the loss of life will be fully 70 Nothing has been heard of the mem bers of the orchestra. The subscrip tion raised on the Bourse amounts t £28.000. All the newspapers hav opened subscription lists. The Em peror has gived a large sum. An off cial of the theatre states that it w absolutely impossible to lower t iron curtain owing to the frightful r pidity with which the flames spre The audience at the theatre last nigh was larger than usual, owing to th fact that it was a holiday. There w 200 persons on the stage and in th adjoining dressing rooms at the o break of the fire. The ballet co were only half dressed. On the e tinction of the lights all rushed to t stage door. Many were knocked do and trampled upon, but most of the reached the street without serious i jury.

In the panic the persons responsi ble for the safety of the theatre neg lected to use the means of telegraph ing to the fire engine station. The audience were consequently left ten minutes in the darkness of exit. Th life saving brigade then arrive wit ladders, torches and jumping sheets People jumped from the windows dozen at a time, in an hour and a hal the building was a roaring furnace.—The persons whose bodies were firs recovered died from suffocation, bu others presented a shocking spectacl Many have the heads or feet burne off. The building is still on fire. Th funeral of the victims is fixed for Su day. The managers of all the the tres announce special performanc for the benefit of the sufferers. number of persons actuall repor missing is 609. The superinten of machinery states that the machin ry became ignited as the lamps we being light by the electric current. The theatre was the property of t State lessees. The loss is one hu dred thousand florins. All the pe formers, except three of the chor were saved. Three professors and member of Parliament are missin Baron Rothschild subscribed 10,0 florins for the sufferers.

NEWS NOTES.

The Ontario Legislature is summoned to meet on the 19th of January.

Much damage and loss of life has been caused by a typhoon on the coast of Tonquin.

There is little doubt but that the jury in the Guitteau case will return a verdict of willful murder.

Another sub-marine telegraph company is being talked of in London, England, to lay cables to America and India.

Six car load of hogs were shipped to Manitoba, and seventeen car loads to East Cambridge, on Saturday, from Toronto.

A train-load of trucks for the Toronto, Grey and Bruce railway arrived at Toronto, on Saturday morning from London car works.

Mr. Edgar Dewdney, Commissioner of Indian affairs in the North-West has been appointed Lieut.-Governor of that Territory.

Several bills are to be introduced at the present session of Congress at Washington, tending to the suppression of polygamy in Utah.

The grand jury at Walkerton yesterday brought in a true bill against Mr. N. J. Clarke, license inspector for South Bruce, for embezzlement.

The machine shops of the New Brunswick Railway at St. Andrew's were destroyed by fire on Monday night. The loss is estimated at $60,000.

The Grand Trunk intend improving their line between Toronto and Bellville shortly. The steep grades will be reduced and the short curves straightened.

During the past week eighty car loads of grain, loaded at the Northern elevator, were freighted over the Grand Trunk railway to Quebec, en route to Europe.

Tobin, the Fenian arrested at Bradford for being connected with various Irish plots, has been committed on a charge of treason-felony and conspiracy.

Wallace Ross expresses a willingness to row Hanlan on Toronto Bay, and also will not greatly object to admitting Trickett if a sweepstakes race can be arranged.

A special general meeting of the stock holders of the Ontario Bank is called for the 24th January, 1882, to recieve the resignation of the Board of Directors.

In another column of our paper will be found an account of a horrible catastrophe, which occurred in Vienna, in which it is now stated that over 1,000 lives were lost.

Some hundred and sixty Canadian families at present living in the States of Michigan, Illinois, and New York, of more or less means, are about to remove to the Turtle Mountain district.

Mr. Wm. Hendrie, President of the Toronto, Grey and Bruce railway, has issued a card of thanks to the employes of the road for the successful efforts made by them in the work of changing the gauge on the 3rd inst.

Forty actions for $200 each has been entered against a returning officer in the Province of Quebec, for numbering and otherwise marking ballot papers at the recent election, thereby disfranchising a whole village. Thirty-five actions are yet to be entered.

The monument erected at Allandale station, by the employees of the Northern Railway, in memory of the late Colonel Gumberland was unveiled on Saturday last, with imposing ceremonies, and was witnessed by a large concourse of people.

The feeling against Guitteau, the murderer of President Garfield, is increasing daily. The jailor has received anonymous letters requesting him to remove all the other prisoners from the wing of the prison in which Guitteau is placed, as it is the intention of the writers to blow up the aforesaid wing by dynamite.

REPLY TO DR. McGREGOR'S A. O. U. W.

To the Editor.

SIR,—It has been asserted that the above Order is a fraud on the credulous public, and after due consideration, I am inclined to support the assertion—but still open to conviction.

Suppose we calculate on a membership of 4,000, and that each member receive $2,000, at death, whenever that may take place, which will amount to eight million dollars, ($8,000,000).

How does the Dr. intend to raise the above amount? Is it by a payment from each member of $18 a year? Let us see—average of the membership to-day, say 35 years; say that they will all reach seventy, that is, that they will live 35 years longer. If 4,000 members will pay $18 per annum, that would amount to seventy-two thousand Dollors ($72,000) yearly, and that the member continues those payments for the next 35 years, the total amount paid in would be two million five hundred and twenty thousand dollars, ($2,520,000), but to give each member $2,000 at death, we find that eight million dollars ($8,000,000) is required. How does the Dr. intend to make up the deficiency, which is five million four hundred and eighty thousand dollars ($5,480,000).

There are other matters that I would like to have light thrown upon, but the above will suffice for the present, as too much light might injure my already dull vision.

OSPREY NEWS.

From our Correspondent.

Very little took place here during the last few weeks which is worthy of publication. At Maxwell, however, things have been considerably re-adjusted.

Mr. Milne, who for many years successfully kept a general store, sold both it and the goods, and is to retire for some time, to his farm residence. But his many friends expect that his stay on the farm will be only temporary, and that before long he will resume his late business, if not at Maxwell, at some of the other business centres in the township. Mr. Hamlin, who has taken Mr. Milne's place, is doing a rushing business. He is good-hearted and obliging, and well deserves the public patronage.

The building lately occupied by Wright Davitt, as a furniture store, has been purchased by Mr. Stinson, of Singhampton, who is to occupy it as a general store about the beginning of the New Year.

Mr. R. Taylor, who is Mail carrier and proprietor of the stage line between Collingwood and Flesherton, refused to renew his contract with the Government unless they made it more remunerative. The result is that a man named Robert Brown has the contract for the ensuing year, and it is to be hoped that he will prove as universal a favorite as the one in whose hands it is at present.

We anticipate a little excitement at the approaching municipal election. There are three candidates in the field for the office of Reeve. Messrs. McGirr, Gamey, and Sing. Mr. Maxwell is going to attempt to defeat Archibald McIntyre in competing for the office of Deputy Reeve. We think it takes a good man to defeat Archy.

In the eastern part of the township things are very quiet. There was a shooting match at McIntyre last week, and no one could strike the bull's eye but Alexander McDougal, therefore he went home with the goose.

The new Church which is being built at the South line by the Episcopal Methodists is making slow progress. It will not be ready for opening this year.

POLITENESS ON THE CARS.—Two male passengers were seated on the Queen streets car going west last evening, when the entrance of several ladies led one of the gents to make the observation that ladies on the Toronto street cars never had the politeness to thank a man when he rose to give his seat to one of them. The first speaker insisted it was not so, and said that in this respect the American ladies were far ahead of their Canadian cousins. The discussion was proceeding when the car stopped at a crossing, and a respectably dressed coloured woman entered the car. "We'll try that case just here," said the second speaker, and he rose, leaving his seat for the woman. "Thank you!" she said in a low voice, and dropped into the vacancy beside the reluctantly converted anti-Canadian-lady traveller.—Globe.

WORK STOPPED.—Finding it impossible to finish the work on the Railway to Wiarton this season, the Company has discharged the laborers and discontinued all work on the construction of the line till spring.—Hanover Post.

By reference to our advertising columns it will be observed that Messrs. LeLaughlin & McCoy have disolved. The business will in future be carried on by Mr. McCoy. His new advertisement will appear next week.—Chesley Enterprise.

A committee has been appointed to canvass Arran Bruce, Elderslie, Saugeen and Greenock to raise money for the purchase of a first-class imported Clydesdale stallion. The step has been taken for the purpose of improving the breed of draught horses in these townships.—Chesley Enterprise.

On Saturday evening a young man named Davis and Wm. Graham undertook to settle their differences by a rough-and-tumble fight, in the yard of the Queen's Hotel here, and during its progress Davis succeeded in biting off Graham's hight ear, after which the combatants were seperated by their admiring friends. A warrant was issued for the arrest of Davis on Sunday, but so far he has eluded capture. —Shelburne Free Press.

FIRE IN GLENELG.—Between two and three o'clock on Saturday Morning, the 3rd inst., Godfrey Mcdonald's house, on lot 19, con. 4, was destroyed by fire, with nearly all its contents The inmates on being awakened by the fire had not time to put on their clothes. Mr. McDonald, in endeavering to save a few articles from the burning building, had his hands and feet badly burned and blistered; part of the hair was also burned off his head. The fire is believed to have originated from a barrel of ashes that had been left in the back kitchen. There was no insurance on the building or contents.—Durham Review.

The STANDARD is an excellent medium for advertising; over two hundred new subscribers have been added this fall to our list, and still they come. The DUNDALK HERALD is looking up and the circulation increasing fast.

Mr. Samuel McLean, of Proton, died at his residence, in that Township, on the 1st inst., after a short and severe illness, aged 57 years, 7 months and 10 days. He was well respected by all who knew him; he leaves a wife and large family well provided for. He was buried on the 3rd inst., with Orange honours by the District of Proton. He was W.D.M. of Proton for the present year.

There are superior Spectacles for weak or failing eyes at W. F. Doll's, Flesherton.

Another change will take place in the T., G. & B. Time Table, when a coach will run from Owen Sound direct to Hamilton, and one from Hamilton to Owen Sound each day. A switch is nearly completed at Mono Road where the T., G. & B. crosses the Hamilton & N. W. Railway where cars will be changed as above.

Don't all wait until Christmas day to get your picture. Why? Because there will be such a throng you will not be sure of getting so good a Photo.

A PUBLIC MEETING Should be called of the citizens of every city, town and village in the Dominion, to consider what should be done to prevent the hair from turning Grey—and falling out. If this important question received their earnest consideration they would unanimously decide that science had at last discovered something that would answer this purpose—and furthermore would recommend Cingalese Hair Renewer as being this something for restoring the hair to its natural color, and prevent its falling out. 50 cents per bottle. For sale by all Druggists.

Our ears were shocked on Tuesday night, by some very emphatic language, used by a couple of our esteemed citizens, the night was extremely dark and as the aforesaid citizens were wending their way homeward and when in front of the Reid-McDougal Block, one of them ran against a scantling which reaches half across the sidewalk. A few moments after the other fell over a block of stone lying just at the edge of the sidewalk, and measured his length on Mother Earth. Had any of the Police Trustees or Pathmasters been in the neighborhood we fear there would have been a pugilistic encounter. We would not like to answer for all the profanity caused by their not attending to their duty in seeing that the sidewalks are kept in such a condition that pedestrians are not in danger of breaking their necks or doing themselves some bodily harm.

ALIVE IN A COFFIN.

A YOUNG WOMAN SUPPOSED TO BE DEAD SCREAMS OUT WHILE MASS IS BEING SAID.

Quebec, Oct. 28.—A servant girl in the employ of Mr. Pierre Gauvreau of this city, named Josephine Gauvreau recently received information from a reliable source of the sudden death of a younger sister employed in a cotton factory at Lawrance, Mass. She accordingly donned mourning grab, but what was her surprise when on Wednesday she received a letter written in the hand written of the sister she had supposed to be dead. From the letter she learned that her sister had been ordered by the physician to use chloroform to induce sleep, and, taking an overdose, she had been overtaken by a sleep so profound that it was thought she was dead. She was accordingly prepared for burial, and the mass for the repose of her soul was being celebrated, when all who were in the church were horrified by hearing a scream from the coffin. It was immediately opened and the young woman taken to the presbytery adjoining the church, where under skilfull attention, she quickly recovered, and is now on her way to her birthplace, Quebec.

PERILS OF THE DEEP.

Special to the Chicago, Ill., Inter Ocean: The world-renowned swimmer, Captain Paul Boyton, in an interview with a newspaper correspondent at the seashore, related the following incidents in his experience:

Reporter:—"Captain Boyton, you must have seen a large part of the world?"

Captain Boyton:—"Yes sir, By the aid of my Rubber Life-Saving Dress, I have travelled over 10,000 miles on the rivers of America and Europe; have also been presented to the crowned heads of England, France, Germany, Austria, Belgium, Italy, Holland, Spain and Portugal, and have in my possession forty two medals and decorations; I have three times received the order of knighthood and been elected honorary member of committees, clubs, orders and societies."

Reporter:—"Were any of your trips accompanied by much danger?"

Captain Boyton:—"That depends upon what you may call dangerous. During my trip down the river Tagus, in Spain, I had to "shoot" one hundred and two waterfalls, the highest being about eight-five feet, and innumerable rapids. Crossing the Straits of Messina, I had three ribs broken in a fight with sharks; and coming down the Somane, a river in France, I received a charge of shot from an excited and startled huntsman. Although all this was not very pleasant, and might be termed dangerous, I fear nothing more on my trip than intense cold; for as long as my limbs are free and easy, and not cramped or benumbed, I am all right. Of late I carry a stock of St. Jacob's Oil in my little boat, (the Captain calls it "Baby Mine," and has stored therein signal rockets, thermometer, compass, provisions, etc) and I have had little trouble. Before starting out I rub myself thoroughly with the article, and its action on the muscles is wonderful. From constant exposure I am somewhat subject to rheumatic pains, and nothing would ever benefit me, until I got hold of the Great German Remedy. Why, on my travels I have met people who had been suffering with rheumatism for years; by my advice they tried the Oil, and it cured them. I would sooner do without food for days than be without this remedy for one hour. In fact I would not attempt a trip without it."

MAIL ARRANGEMENTS.

Among other advantages which our citizens expected to derive from the change of gauge on the T., G. & B. Railway, that of increased postal facilities was one of the most prominent. The Board of Trade has petitioned the Postmaster General for two mails per day by railway; and on the strength of a declaration by the Assistant Inspector that it had been decided on, we some weeks ago announced that we would have the two mails per day from the date of the change of gauge, which our citizens have since been confidently looking forward to. Judge of our suprize, then, when our Postmaster here received instructions that we were only to have one mail per day and that arranged so as to leave us infinitely worse than we were before!

By the new time table for the arrival and despatch of mails, published in this issue, it will be seen that the only mail arriving from Toronto is by train at 1.15 p. m., while the only mail leaving is closed at 2.45. Taking say fifteen minutes to come from the train, it will arrive at the Post Office about 1.30; and reckoning an hour for opening, merchants will receive their letters about 2.30, giving them just fifteen minutes to return to their shops, read their letters and mail their replies! Of course this would be utterly impossible, and replies would have to wait till the next afternoon, as there is no mail by morning train. Even were several hours given in the afternoon, business men do not want to answer correspondence in the busiest part of the day. By the present arrangement, a letter posted for Toronto on Monday evening would not leave here till Tuesday afternoon, could not be delivered in Toronto till Wednesday morning, and an answer could not be received here till Thursday afternoon. Surely a town like Owen Sound cannot be expected to put up with such mail arrangements as that!

Since the above was in type, D. Spry, Esq., P. O. Inspector, has arrived in town, in answer to the memorial of the Board of Trade, and at an interview with the Council of the Board of Trade and others, promised to meet the wishes of the town by endeavoring to have the mail train leave here in the morning. He also promised to report in favor of closed through bags on the evening train to Toronto and principal intermediate stations, and in favor of three street letter boxes. The gentlemen present were pleased with the promptitude with which the Post Office Department had acted, and passed a vote of thanks to the Postmaster General, as well as to Mr. Spry, for the courtesy with which he had met them and given his explanations.—*O. A MAIDEN'S VENTURE.

NOVEL MATRIMONIAL EXPERIENCE IN BELLEVILLE.

The Chief of Police was called on this morning to settle a matter, the particulars of which are as interesting as they are novel. It appears that one Thomas Barnhardt of this city, has been working during the past season for a farmer residing in the vicinity of Hay Bay. This farmer is the father of a buxom daughter. Thos. looked upon the fair one with amorous glances, and finally told his tale of love. "Barkus was willing" in this case, and so were her parents. Thos. however, was not so much in love as to be entirely blind. He did not want to bind himself for life, or for years, to a woman who might not be all his fancy had painted her. So he contracted to take the blushing damsel on trial for twelve days. If at the end of that time she satisfied him, he would marry her; if she did not, he would return her to her parents. To this decidedly novel matrimonial arrangement we are told the girl's parents consented, and the two lovers came to Belleville with the intention of testing their connubial qualifications. The twelve days expired last Saturday, when Barnhardt told the girl to return to her mamma as she did not quite come up to his idea of what a wife should be. He, however, kept some of her clothing, and this morning the girl's parents applied to the Chief for assistance to regain possession of the missing articles. They had no particular fault to find with the dismissal of their daughter by Thomas, as he did only what was aggreed as under conditions of disapproval, but they objected to his retaining what did not belong to him. While living here the girl, we are told, passed for Barnhardt's wife and resided with him as such. Those who knew the parties, but not the agreement, were considerably surprised when they heard the "wife" had been shipped back home as a "poor piece of goods." This is the latest matrimonial venture, and it is the oddest, too.—Belleville Ontario.

COAL OIL EXPLOSION.

A WOMAN FATALLY BURNED THIS MORNING AT OTTAWA.

OTTAWA, Dec. 12.—A shocking and no doubt fatal accident from an explosion of coal oil occurred here this morning. Mrs. John Dunn, a widow, lived with her two small children in a little cottage in Mount Sherwood, and earned a living by charring in the Geological Museum. A young man, clerk in a store near by, boarded with them. This morning Mrs. Dunn rose about quarter past four and went down stairs, as was supposed, to make a fire. Shortly after one of the children heard a moning noise, and thinking something had happened ran down stairs. He found the kitchen full of smoke, and his mother lying on the floor in apparent agony, with her clothing still burning in patches where it was not already burned off. He screamed an alarm, bringing the other child and the young man down stairs. at this time both floor and walls were on fire. They extinguished the fire and carried the unfortunate woman to bed. Dr. Henderson was immediately summoned, and found the poor victim burned to a crisp from the neck to the ankles. She was unconscious, and remained so for some hours. Father Whelan was summoned to administer the last rites of the church, and she so far regained consciousness as to recognize him and some others. Dr. Henderson states that there is no possibility of recovery. The coal oil lamp was found on the kitchen floor with the top blown off, giving evidence that an explosion had occurred.—Globe.

HAGYARD'S YELLOW OIL

Will be found invaluable for the purpose of a family medicine. Immediate relief will follow its use. It relieves pain, cures chilblains, frost bites, scalds, burns, corns, rheumatism, neuralgia, &c. For internal use it is none the less wonderful. One or two doses frequently cure sore throat. It will cure croup in a few minutes. A few bottles has often cured asthma. Colic has been cured by a teaspoonful dose. It cures with the utmost rapidity, it is really a wonderful medicine.

The Church Anniversary and annual Tea Meeting of the C. M. Church, at Holland Centre, will be held on the 21st inst. Proceeds in aid of the Trust Fund. For particulars see bills.

A RELIABLE FACT.

It is an established fact that Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam is the best cure for coughs, colds, sore throat, asthma, croup, bronchitis, and all troubles arising from neglected colds. Price 25 cents.

See those beautiful Christmas Cards at the Standard Office, can have your name printed on them with the compliments of the season.

New stock of Fresh Groceries just arrived at Reynolds & Son.

A great many people are troubled with cold feet, which is invariably caused by a sluggish circulation of the blood. A few doses of Dr. Carson's Stomach and Constipation Bitters will soon produce a free circulation of the blood and Stimulate and Tone the system. Sold in large bottles at 50 cents. A. Turner and Co., Special Agent, Markdale.

If the weather continues as at present, sleighs and cutters can be bought cheap. We would advise those requiring such articles to purchase now, as they can be had for next to nothing.

There is no doubt that our Canadian climate is conducive to Lung affections, and for this reason Dr. Carson's Pulmonary Cough Drops should be in every house. For Coughs, Colds, and all other Lung and Throat affections they have no equal. In large bottles at 50 cents. A Turner and Co., Special Agent Markdale.

The Liberal Conservative Association of East Grey met at the Markdale House on Thursday, the 8th inst., when the following were elected office bearers for the ensuing year:—President, N. McColeman, Esq., Reeve of Collingwood T'p.; Vice-President, T. Kells, Artemesia; Recording Secretary, John Lyons, Markdale; Cor. Secretary, D. Robinson, Clarksburg; Treasurer, Wm. Douglass, Markdale. Messrs. Sproule, M.P., and A. W. Lauder, M.P.P., addressed the meeting.

THE ELECTRIC LIGHT.

Superceding as it does all other modes of illumination, and rivalled only by the glorious sunshine, will not be hailed with greater joy by mankind, than is Burdock Blood Bitters, which is as far superior to all other blood purifiers and tonics as the electric light is superior to the old fashioned tallow dip. Burdock Blood Bitters cures Scrofula, and all foul humors and impurities of the blood.

Coal Oil at Reynolds & Son's for 27c. per gallon, Imperial measure.

Ira H. Perigoe, Auctioneer, will offer for sale, by authority invested in him by Mr. Richard Taylor, lot 18, con. 7, Township of Osprey, on Wednesday, January 4th, 1882, all his Stock, implements, household goods, &c., without reserve. Twelve months' credit on all sums over $5, by furnishing good joint notes.

Now that winter has well commenced we would advise our readers against using pills containing Calomel and other injurious substance, as there is great danger of catching cold after their use. An excellent substitute for pills is a Vegetable Preparation known as Dr. Carson's Stomach and Constipation Bitters, a family medicine that, from all accounts, will soon take the place of every other purgative and blood purifier. A Turner and Co., Special Agent, Markdale.

The Meaford Monitor thinks the paragraph that appeared in our columns a week or two ago stating that Mr. Masson left Owen Sound after the train and arrived in Markdale ahead of it, rather "thin." We gave the story as it was given to us by Mr. Masson himself, who is a lawyer, and our brother of the quill must be aware editors and lawyers never lie.

Feeble Ladies.—Those languid, tiresome sensations, causing you to feel scarcely able to be on your feet; that constant drain that is taking from your system all its elasticity; driving the bloom from your cheeks; that continual strain upon your vital forces rendering your irritable and fretful, can easily be removed by the use of that marvelous remedy, Hop Bitters. Irregularities and obstructions of your system are relieved at once, while the special cause of periodical pain is permanently removed. Will you heed this?—Cincinnati Saturday Night.

It will be seen by reference to our advertising colums that Messrs. Lane & Rowe have opened a Law office in Markdale, McFarland's Block.

To the Secretaries of School Boards.—We keep on hand printed notices for annual School Meetings, made to suit any School Section by filling in the number, and they cost only 15cts. for half a dozen. Call at the Standard office or send by mail for them, or to A. G. Hunter, Dundalk.

Owing to the change of time in carrying the mail on the train some of our papers missed the regular country mail last week, and were delayed two days in consequence. We will in future endeavor by some means to have the paper out in time to make connections with Friday's country mails.

Next week we will issue 500 extra copies each of Markdale Standard and the Dundalk Herald. Any person taking a half page advertisement for the week will receive one hundred extra copies of the paper. We have room for two or three yet.

W. Jelly, Esq., M.P.P., and Mr. Jennings, of Shelburne, were in town on Wednesday.

Don't forget the special bargains in Ladies' Gold Watches at W. F. Doll's.

On account of the change in the time of closing the mails, we have to go to press several hours earlier than formerly, consequently advertisements and all other matter must be in not later than 12 o'clock Wednesday to insure insertion.

You want to make the money go as far as you can. Well, then, call upon W. J. McFarland, the only direct Importer of goods in Markdale. No Middlemen's profits to add to the price of his goods. He buys at same prices, and from the same Houses in Europe as the Wholesale Houses. Ten Cases and Bales of English Goods expected this week.

There is good time being made on the T., G. & B., since the great change which took place last week. Every person who travels over the road is delighted with the great improvement; but we have a word to say in regard to a custom which prevails amongst a certain class, arising from thoughtlessness, or perhaps ignorance, which is very annoying to the train officials, as well as the travelling public who prefer a clean seat; that is, the habit of putting their feet upon the seat in front of them. It is impossible to keep the seats clean and unsoiled so long as those who do so persist in so doing, especially in a time when mud prevails. They might easily throw a newspaper on the seat, or else remove their shoes if they wish to stretch themselves out and take a nap. The conductor is, no doubt, timid in reproving those who do not appear to know better, for he well knows he would generally receive in return impertinence and abuse. We would suggest that a notice be put up in each coach in large type requesting travellers to keep their feet down except when scrupulously clean.

For the Christmas Holidays W. J. McFarland is offering Gent's Fashionable Ties at 50c, worth $1, Gent's handsome Suspenders, 35c, worth 50c. Ladies' warm lined Gloves, 15c per pair. Ladies' lined Kid Gloves, Fur Top, $1. A good useful Kid Glove, 2 buttoned, 50c. Irish Table Damasks 35c, 40c, 42½c, 45c, 50c, 55c and 60c, cheap at 10c per yard more. Children's Cloth Jackets, 50c, 85c, $1, and $1.25, a bargain. Ladies' Dolman's & Cloth Jackets at a big reduction. Shawls $1, $1.75, $2.75 up. New Glass Table sets, 60c, very stylish. Table Knives and Forks, $1.25 up. China Tea sets, Cheap. Men's Overcoats, for the cost of making up. Black Silks, every Lady and Gent intending making a present should see them. Real Laces, cheap. See our 5c lace and our 10c lace. In fact his store is crowded with bargains for the Xmas Holidays.

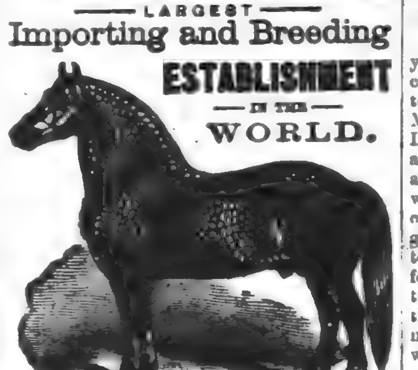
LARGEST

Importing and Breeding ESTABLISHMENT IN THE WORLD.



M. W. DUNHAM,

During the past 17 months 390 STALLIONS AND MARES have been imported from France to this establishment, being MORE than the combined importations of all other importers of Draft Horses from all parts of Europe for any one year.

One-fifth of the entire number of Imported French Horses in America can be seen on his farm. His Importations have included the Prize Winners of the Universal Exposition, Paris, 1878, and nearly all the Prize Horses of the Great Shows of France since his importations began. They also carried off the honors at the Centennial, 1876; and, at the Great Chicago Fair, 1881, Mr. Dunham's Herd of PERCHERONS, in competition with the largest and finest collection of Clydesdales ever shown, consisting of the prize winners at the Great Shows of Scotland and England,) was awarded the Grand Sweepstakes Prize of $1,000 and Grand Gold Medal.

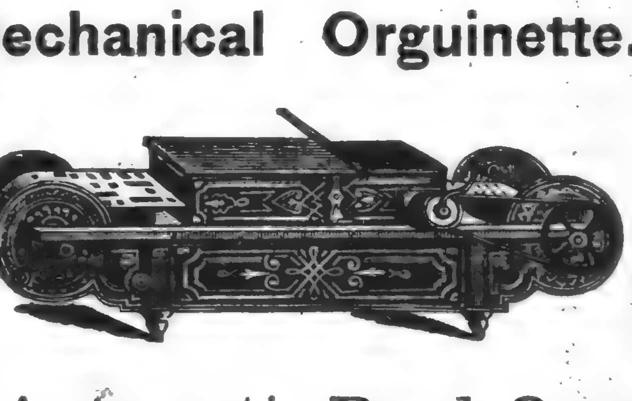
Mechanical Orguinette.



An Automatic Reed Organ.

"The Orguinette may now be called a celebrated instrument. In tone it is akin to the Cabinet Organ, but the organ must be manipulated by an artist in order to produce music; the Orguinette is on the other hand entirely mechanical in its action, and at a trifling expense it can be made to furnish an unlimited supply of all kinds of music. —Toronto Globe."

"The Orguinette is indeed a musical wonder. It is a minature reed organ, with as strong and melodious a tone as the Cabinet Size. It surpasses the Cabinet Organ for the reason that the ignoramus in music can play it as well as the most accomplished professor. The Orguinette is strong and accurate in its mechanism, and consequently not liable to get out of order."—Montreal Gazette.

"The Orguinette is the most perfect automatic musical instrument yet invented: its repertorie is unlimited, the tone is remarkably good."—Montreal Star.

MANHOOD

HOW LOST, HOW RESTORED.

WE have recently published a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical and nervous Debility, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage etc., resulting from excesses.

Price, in a sealed envelope, only 6 cts., or two postage stamps.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicines or the use of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

This Lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

Agricultural.

SHELTER SAVES FOOD—IS PROFITABLE.

Every keeper of animals would actually profit by a little study of chemistry and physiology. Here is a short lesson: All kinds of food, as hay, grain, bread meat, etc., are, like wood, mainly composed of charcoal (carbon) and water, with considerable nitrogen in some of them. To prove this, strongly heat any of the above food materials in a coal pit, or better, under glass. Water, with some nitrogen gas, will be driven off and can be found in the glass receiver, while only charcoal will remain. Let in more air and the charcoal itself will unite with the oxygen of the atmosphere, and also go off as a transparent, invisible carbonic acid gas. This chemical action sets at liberty heat that was before concealed or insensible, the same as when wood or coal is burned rapidly in a stove, producing an active fire; or as when wood decays, but gives off heat so slow as not to be observed—We must have an everburning fire in both the animal and human system. If the surrounding atmosphere is cold, and carries off heat rapidly from the surface of the body, we must increase the internal production of heat by putting in more food, or by surrounding the body with a covering that prevents the escape of much heat.

Is it not plain then, that by keeping animals warm, by means of close buildings, or shelter against heat-stealing winds, less food will be needed, and there will be less waste of flesh in making heat? Any arrangements of shelter, cover, stable, shed, blankets—anything that will prevent the natural warmth from passing away from the surface of any animal—will be a great saving of food required to keep up the obsolutely necessary internal life warmth; will prevent loss of flesh; will allow the food to go more to adding to weight of flesh, or the yield of milk, or of wool. Shelter and external warmth in cold weather are most economical and therefore profitable in the keeping of farm stock.—American Agriculturist for December.

WHAT TO STUDY.

Pope, the poetical philosopher said, "The proper study of mankind is man, and yet, how little is the real science of man studied. If people understood and heeded the laws of health, and if when out of sorts would resort to a common sense like Burdock Blood Bitters, many of the "ills that flesh is heir to" might be effectually remedied. It invigorates and regulates all the secretions to a healthy action.

NOTES OF LIVE STOCK IN WINTER.

The farm animals at this season are directly dependent upon the care and attention of the farmer. To pass the winter with profit they must be well kept. Animals are very complicated engines, and must be run by careful engineers. The food they receive is the fuel, and the daily rubbing, cleaning, etc., may be likened to the inspection, cleaning and oiling of the engine. The fuel must be equal to the demands made of the animal engine, else the machinery will be run at a disadvantage, and therefore with diminished profit. When the water is low and the fire almost out, the engine is a source of loss to the owner. On the other hand the fire may be brisk, and the boiler well supplied, but some screw is loose, or a part rubs another too closely and the friction thus produced neutralizes much of the force. So in the animal machine, all the parts must work harmoniously together, or in other words there must be perfect health to obtain the best results. An animal may have the best of food in sufficient quantity, and still pass a hard winter, and without profit to its owner. Food of the best kinds without shelter is in the animal economy like fuel in an engine that is rusty and loose and out of order. Both are expensive methods of arriving at desired results. It takes too much force to run the machine in both cases. As it is cheaper to have a good engine kept in good order, so it is to have an animal in health and comfort. The thoughtful farmer will see many other points of likeness between the animal machine and the one constructed by human hands, but this is enough to suggest the importance of keeping farm animals in a healthful and comfortable condition by means of warm stables with clean floors and pure air.—America Agricuturist for December.

ITS WORK IN STRATHROY.

It often happens that the opinion of an experienced man, an expert, if we so call him, conveys greater force than an aggregation outside, uneducated testimony. And then, too, personal experience or observation is so much more convincing than mere assertion. Trained to habits of analysis and keenest accuracy, and from the very nature of their daily occupation, given to the most incisive criticism of anything of a proprietary nature, chemists, as a class, hesitate very long before indorsing anything of a remedial nature whose virtues have been announced through the public press. St. Jacob's Oil, however, is so universally successful and so unvaryingly accomplishes all that it promises that the able chemist, W. J. Dyas, Esq., of Medical Hall, Strathory, Ont., sends, with his friendly recommendation the following from David Harriston, Esq., 9th Con., Township of Caradoc:—Having suffered with inflammatory rheumatism since last July, and hearing of St. Jacob's Oil, I sent for a bottle of the article on the 15th of October. At that time I was confined to the house, and could not possibly get out of bed without assistance. After four applications of the Oil the pain ceased entirely, and I was able to go about Strathroy in less than a week. I cannot give too much praise to St. Jacob's Oil for what it has done for me, and I believe it to be a most reliable remedy in rheumatism. Its wonderful efficacy should be brought to the knowledge of everybody.

A FOOD RATION FOR MILK.

Hay is not rich enough in protein for the best production of good milk, the addition of roots only makes the matter worse; corn meal, while improving the ration somewhat, cannot alone with hay make it what it should be. The best ration is not, of course, necessarily precisely the same for all cows, and for all conditions; that which would be profitable feeding in one case might not be so in another. But for a guide to work by, until we have one that is proved to be better, we may as well take the standard ration given on the high authority of Emil Wolff, and based on the results of careful expriments, even if we shall not in this way always be led to the best results, it will be better than no guide at all, in trying new methods of feeding and of supplementing the fodder produced at home by importations from without. By this standard a cow in milk should have, per day and per 1,000 lbs. live weight, 24 lbs. of organic matter or vegetable substance estimated as perfectly dry, containing 2.5 lbs. of protein, 0.4 lb. of fat, and 12.5 lbs. of carbohydrates, all reckoned as digestible, that is to say, all fodder contains some indigestible protein, fat, corbohydrates, and other matters, but these are counted out in this make-up of the ration.—PROF. CALDWELL, in American Agriculturist for December.

HAGYARD'S YELLOW OIL.

Is at the head of the list for all purposes of a family medicine. It is used with unprecedented success, both internally and externally. It cures sore throat, burns, scalds, frost bites; relieves, and often cures asthma.

ELI PERKINS' STORIES.

THE ENGLISHMAN WHO COULDN'T SEE A JOKE.

The English people are the slowest people on earth to see a joke. Yesterday I was riding over the Grand Trunk, near Toronto, and the typical Englishman, with eye glasses, an opera glass hung around his neck and a bundle of canes and umbrellas under his arm, got on the train.

"There is one of those thick headed Englishman who can never see a joke," remarked a bright commercial traveler.

"O, I think you could make him see the point to a joke," I answered.

"I'll bet anything," said my friend, "that you can't make that man see the point to an American joke."

"All right," I said; "I'll try it."

So, after being introduced to the Englishman, I set out to make him smile, I told him the best jokes I knew. He always listened attentively, but, instead of seeing the precise point, he would ask some explanation, while his face wore an expression as blank as a Chinaman when you've paid him $5 too much change.

Finally I told the Englishman the old story of the Indian who wanted a receipt for money paid to a white man. Said I, "The Indian insisted that the white man should give him a receipt."

"What do you want a receipt?" asked the white man, "you've paid the money, and that's enough."

"But me must have receipt?" insisted the Indian.

"Why, what for?" asked the white man.

"Because," said the Indian, "Injun may die."

"Well, suppose you do die, I certainly can't collect this money form you then."

"But," continued the Indian, "me may die and go to Heaven. The Lord he ask Injun; if he good Injun; Injun say yes. He ask Injun if he pay white man. Injun say yes, yes. Then the Lord he say where is the receipt? What Injun do then? Injun can't go looking all over hell for you!"

After I got through, the Americans laughed as they always will, even at an old joke, but the Englishman looked me straight in the face without a smile. You would think he was viewing the corpse at a funeral. Then he put his front finger solemnly on the palm of his hand, and said argumentively:

"Now, I don't see why an Indian is not entitled to a receipt as well as a white man? I entirely disagree with—"

But a roar of laughter from the Americans drowned his sentence. This so confused the poor Englishman, to have his honest opinions laughed at, that he turned his back on us and solemnly waded through the dreary columns of London Punch all the way into Toronto.

THE LIME KILN CLUB.

"I should like to hev de seckretary read de follerin a werry loud letter," said the president as he handed over a letter.

The secretary read as follows;

GLEN ROSE, TEX.

DEAR BRO. GARDNER.—There is a man down here who says that colored folks have't got any souls. That only white folks turn to angels when they die. He points with triumph to all the pictures of angels ever painted, in which not a single colored angel is seen. He says he defies even old Bro. Gardner, the greatest living logician, to prove colored folks have souls all samee as Melican men. Will you accept this challenge.

Respectfully,
COTTONSEED WHITE.

There was deep silence in the Hall for a long minute, during which the thermometer went up 18 degrees. Then the president said:

"Yes, I 'cept the challenge. Let dat Texas man prove to me dat white folks hev souls an' I will prove dat black folks hev de same. It am jest as easy to prove one as the odder. As to the picters of angels, de black faces am not de only ones left out. War am de Chinamen, de Arabs, de Injuins de Lapanders, an' all the odder folks? Nobody eber saw a red-headed angel an' yet do all our red-headed citizens go to de bad place? I'll defy that Texas white man to show me any face among de angels eber painted resembling a Texas man. He can't show me de face of a Duchman or Irishman or Frenchman or Spaniard, but does dat prove dat Heaben was built for de use of a few Americans? We doan' take our black skin to Heaben any mo' dan white folks take deir mutton-chop whiskers, glass eyes an' false teeth. When we arrove to the gate death has giben all de same color, an' de poo' old black man who has slaved an' hungered an' suffered all his life stan's clus beside the white man who has had riches an' contentment. A piece of white chalk kin be wrapped up in black velvet as well as in bleached cotton.

"I'll tell you, my frent, de road to Heaben am long an' full of pitfalls an' quick sand an' steep hills an' lonesome hollers, an' de soul which reaches de golden gates am so cleansed an' purified dat the poo' ole body left behind on airth would neber know it. It isn't de money de raiment, de white skin or de fine talk dat helps de pilgrim ober de quick-sand an' pass de thickets filled wid darkness an' de skeletons of de lost. It am de heart an' its kind thoughts an' good deeds dat am most pursued to bizness."

The WEEKLY MAIL

THE GREAT CANADIAN WEEKLY FROM NOW TO THE END OF 1882 FOR ONE DOLLAR

PRESENTATION PLATE. Every subscriber to the WEEKLY MAIL for 1882 will Receive a Valuable Chart, entitled ANATOMY OF THE HORSE with a Fine Engraving, displaying at a glance the exact locality of prominent diseases which afflict the horse. The reading matter will describe 33 of the most common ones.

NEW FEATURES FOR 1882.

Legal Questions and Answers.—Questions involving points of law, and of interest to the agricultural community, will be replied to and explained by a duly qualified practitioner, and the replies published from time to time in THE WEEKLY MAIL.

The Agricultural Department of THE WEEKLY MAIL will be in charge of a thoroughly practical editor, who by special attention to it, proposes to make that department alone worth more than the whole subscription price of the paper. He will be aided by the following authorities:—

L. B. ARNOLD, Esq., President of the American Dairymen's Association, will contribute a series of articles on CHEESEMAKING and DAIRYING generally, and will reply to questions from subscribers upon these subjects.

HON. X. A. WILLARD, of Little Falls, N. Y., one of the best authorities in the world on Cheesemaking and Creameries, will contribute a series of articles on these subjects.

One of the leading Veterinary Surgeons of Canada will write on VETERINARY matters regularly, and will also answer all questions sent by subscribers in the MAIL.

THE WEEKLY MAIL is the best weekly newspaper published in Canada.

It contains more Cable and other Telegraphic News than any other weekly in the Dominion.

It contains during the year 300 columns of New and Interesting Stories.

It contains over 200 columns of Agricultural Matter, by the best writers on Dairying, Cheesemaking, Forestry, the care of Horses and Cattle, Fruit Raising, General Agriculture, &c.

It is noted for its Reliable Market Reports, Home and Foreign.

It is the cheapest and best Family Paper published,

THE WEEKLY MAIL—One Dollar per Annum.

THE DAILY MAIL—Seven Dollars per Annum.

THE BEST REMEDY
FOR
Diseases of the Throat and Lungs.

In diseases of the pulmonary organs a safe and reliable remedy is invaluable. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL is such a remedy, and no other so eminently merits the confidence of the public. It is a scientific combination of the medicinal principles and curative virtues of the finest drugs, chemically united, of such power as to insure the greatest possible efficiency and uniformity of results. It strikes at the foundation of all pulmonary diseases, affording prompt relief and rapid cures, and is adapted to patients of any age or either sex. Being very palatable, the youngest children take it readily. In ordinary Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Bronchitis, Influenza, Clergyman's Sore Throat, Asthma, Croup, and Catarrh, the effects of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL are magical, and multitudes are annually preserved from serious illness by its timely and faithful use. It should be kept at hand in every household for the protection it affords in sudden attacks. In Whooping-cough and Consumption there is no other remedy so efficacious, soothing, and helpful.

Low prices are inducements to try some of the many mixtures, or syrups, made of cheap and ineffective ingredients, now offered, which, as they contain no curative qualities, can afford only temporary relief, and are sure to deceive and disappoint the patient. Diseases of the throat and lungs demand active and effective treatment; and it is dangerous experimenting with unknown and cheap medicines, from the great liability that these diseases may, while so trifled with, become deeply seated or incurable. Use AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and you may confidently expect the best results. It is a standard medical preparation, of known and acknowledged curative power, and is as cheap as its careful preparation and fine ingredients will allow. Eminent physicians, knowing its composition, prescribe it in their practice. The test of half a century has proven its absolute certainty to cure all pulmonary complaints not already beyond the reach of human aid.

SHUT THE DOOR.

Were you brought up in a saw-mill?
Were you ever in a house before?
Did you work about a brick kiln
In the blessed days of yore?
Did you 'tend about a wind-mill
Upon some rocky shore?
Or live upon a side hill
Where the wind could always roar,
And couldn't get a gorgeous fill
Of cutting to the core?
In any case my blooming pill,
If you would lose your gore,
And rife a man who'd freely kill,
Or scrub you on the floor,
And break your heart, and bend your will,
And ashes on you pour,
And hunt up every little bill
You owe, and many more,
And stab you with a goose quill,
And parade the socks you wore—
Why, then you blooming mud-sill—
You thoughtless, brazen bore—
You breathing, shameless whiskey still—
Confound you shut the door!

A WONDERFUL WOMAN.

CHAPTER XI. Continued.

'Only one week more, Gaston, mon fils,' he said to himself, exultantly, as he whirled homeward with the Talbots, 'and then let Fate do her worst—she can't oust me from Scarswood and my wife. Unless—always unless—unless Marie should take into her jealous head to come over here and hunt me up. I wonder what she said or did when she got all her letters back. I know what she thought; there could be no two opinions on that subject. Poor, passionate, proud little beauty! What an unmitigated scounrel, I am, to be sure! The nearer the wedding day draws, the more I seem to think of her—the fonder I grow of her—all because I have given her up for ever, I suppose.'

But fondness for any human creature was not a weakness Mr. Dantree could ever allow to stand in his way to fortune. Jealous and exacting as nature had made the baronet's daughter, her accepted lover gave her no shadow of an excuse for either. He played his role of Romeo to perfection; if it bored him insufferably she never saw it; and now it was only one week, and once her husband, why all this untiring devotion might reasonably cool down a trifle, and the continual "tender nothings" of courtship give place to the calm friendliness of humdrum married life.

'She can't expect a fellow to dangle at her apron strings all her days,' Mr. Dantree thought; 'if she does she's mistaken—that's all. I'm ready to call all the gods to witness that I adore the ground she treads on, before the words are said and the nuptial knot tied, but afterward, my bonnie belle will have to take it for granted or do without. Men love most, the wiseacres say, before marriage, women most after. How will it be with me, I wonder, who don't love at all?'

It is long past midnight when the carriage of the last guest rolled away from the hospitable portals of Scarswood, and the 'lights were fled, the garlands dead, the banquet hall deserted.' And Katherine, trailing her brilliant silk after her, her jewells gleaming in the fitful light, eyes shining, and cheeks flushed, went up to her room. Through the oriel window at the head of the stairs the full winter midnight moon shone gloriously. The Bloody Hand, and the crest of the Dangerfields—a falcon rending a dove—shone out vividly through the painted panes. A black frost held the earth in hands of iron; the skeleton trees waved gaunt, striped arms in the park the wild December wind whistled shrilly from the coast, and over head spread that blue, star studded moonlight sky. Katherire leaned against the glass and gazed up at that silver orb, and her thoughts drifted away from her own supreme bliss to that other Christmas so many hundred years ago, when the first anthem was sung by the angels over the blue hills of Galilee.

'Katherine!' Her father's door opened, and her fathers voice called. You will take cold to a dead certainty, standing there. I thought you had gone to your room.

'I'm going, papa,—I'm not in the least sleepy—I never am sleepy, I think, on bright moonlight nights like this. I wonder if my brain is touched like other lunatics at the full of the moon. Why are you not in bed? Papa!' with a sudden cry of alarm—a sudden spring forward, 'you are not well!'

His face was of a strange, livid hue, there was a nervous twitching of the muscles, and his eyes had a murky, bloodshot look.

'Papa, darling! what is it? Are you ill?'

'Not very well, I fear. I have not been well for days, but I feel worse to night than usual. And I think I ought to tell you—if anything should happen.' He paused, and put his hand to his forehead in a confused sort of way. 'My head feels all wrong somehow to-night. Katherine, if you're not sleepy come in—I have something of importance to say to you.'

She followed him, in some wonder and more alarm. His face had changed from its dull parlor to dark red, his voice sounded incoherent and husky. What did it all mean? She entered his room, watching him with wide, wondering eyes.

'Sit down,' he said, impatiently shifting away from her glance, 'and don't stare in that way, child. I don't suppose its anything to alarmed about only—I think I ought to tell. You are going to be married, and you ought to know. Then the burden will be off my conscience, and you can tell him or not, as you please. That will be your affair, and if he deserts you ——' He stopped again, again pressed his hand hard over his forehead, as though the thread of his ideas had broken. 'There is something queer the matter with my head,' he half muttered; 'I don't seem able to talk or think somehow to-night.'

'Then I would not try, papa,' Katherine interrupted, more and more alarmed; 'you are looking dreadfully. Let me ring for Francois to see you and send for the doctor. I am sure you are not fit to be up.'

'No, no,—don't send; at least not yet. I have made up my mind to-night, and if I don't tell you now, I may never summon courage again. You ought to know, child—you ought to know. You are not safe for an hour. It is like living over a lighted mine until that woman is dead. You ought to tell him—that fellow—Dantree, you know. If he deserts you, as I said, better to do it before the wedding day than after. I know it is the money he wants; I know he is a coward, and a humbug, and a fortune hunter, and it may be the greatest mercy for you, child, if he does leave you before the wedding day.'

Katherine started to her feet.

"Papa,' she cried, passionately, 'this is too bad; too cruel! I thought you were never going to speak against Gaston; you told me you would not; surely he has done nothing to deserve it. This day week is my wedding day and you talk of him deserting me. Papa, if such a thing happened—could happen; I would kill myself; I tell you I would! I would never survive such disgrace!'

He sank into a chair in a dazed helpless sort of way.

'What shall I do?' he said wearily; 'what shall I do? If I had only told years and years ago! Now it's too late.'

She stood and looked at him pale with wonder and vague alarm.

'Told me what? Is it the secret that Mrs. Vavasor holds? Why not tell me, then? Whatever it is I can bear it; I can bear any thing, only your hard words of Gaston, your talk of his deserting me. Tell me, my father; I am not a child or a coward. I can bear it, whatever it is.'

'You think so, but you don't know, you don't know! You hate that woman and you are so proud; so proud! You cannot bear poverty; you told me that; and I—what can I do? I cannot save you from—'

His incoherent words died away; his head fell back. Katherine sprang to his side with a scream of terror. Another instant and she flew to the bell ringing a peal that nearly tore it down. Oh! what was this?

His face was purple; his whole form rigid; what he had feared so long had befallen him at last. He was stricken with apopley.

The room filled with frightended servants. After the first shock, all Katherine's senses came back. She dispatched a man at once to Castleford for the family doctor. Sir John was conveyed to bed, undressed, and all there storatives they knew how to use applied. All in vain. With the dawning of the Christmas day, the stalwart old soldier lay before them, breathing stentoriously and quite senseless.

Dr. Graves and his attendant, a young man, arrived, and pronounced the fit apoplexy at once. They sent the pale girl in the festal dress, the shining pearls, and the wild wide eyes out of the room, and did their best for the master of that grand old house. But they labored in vain, the long hours wore away—and still Sir John lay rigid and senseless where they had first laid him.

White as a spirit almost as cold, almost as still, Katherine went up to her room. She made no attempt to change her dress, to revove her jewels. She had loved this most indulgent father very dearly; the possibility that he could be taken from her had never occurred to her. Only yesterday morning he had ridden with her over the downs, only last night he had sat at the head of his table and entertained his guests. And now, he lay stark and lifeless.

She could not rest. She left her room, and paced up and down the long corridor. He was not dead—she could hear his loud breathing where she walked. She could not cry: tears that relieve other women, other girls of her age, rarely came to Katherine. She felt cold and wretched. How drearily still the great house was! Would those two doctors never open the door and let her into her father? —what dreadful secret was this that involved her life, which made him so miserable? He had talked of Gaston deserting her. The wedding must be postponed now, and postponed weddings were always ominious. How was it all going to end? she shivered in her low necked and short sleeved dress, but it never occurred to her to go for a wrap. She stood and looked out of the oriel window once more. Morning was breaking—Christmas morning—red and golden, and glorious in the east. The first pink rays of the sunrise glinted through the leafless trees, over terrace and glade, lawn and woodland. Outside the gate, the carol singers were blithly chanting already; new life—new joy everywhere without; and within, the lord of this stately mansion, of this majestic park, lay dying, it might be.

But it was not death. The door opened presently, and the pale, keen face of Mr. Otis, the assistant, looked out.

'Sir John has recovered consciousness, Miss Dangerfield,' he said, "and is asking for you.'

'Thank God!' Katherine's heart responded, but the dreary oppression did not lift. She went into the sick room, knelt down beside the bed in her shining robes, and softly kissed the helpless hand.

'You are better, papa?'

But Doctor Graves interrupted at once.

'You may remain with Sir John, Miss Dangerfield, but neither of you must speak a word. Danger is over for the present, but I warn you the slightest excitement now or at any future time may prove fatal.'

The eyes of the stricken man were fixed upon her with a strange, earnest wistfulness. He tried feebly to speak—his fingers closed almost convulsively over hers. She bent her ear to catch his words.

'Send for Hammersly—I must make my will.'

'Yes, papa, darling, but not now. There's no hurry, you know—all present danger is over. You are to be very still, and go to sleep. I will stay by you and watch.'

'You will drink this, Sir John,' Doctor Graves said, authoritatively, and the sick man swallowed the opiate, and, with his hand still clasped in Katherine's fell asleep.

Dr. Graves departed. Mr. Otis remained; Katherine kept her vigil by the bedside, very pale in the sunlight of the new day. Mr. Otis watched her furtively from his remote seat. Hers was a striking face, he thought—a powerful face—a face full of character.

'That girl will be no common woman,' he thought; 'for good or for evil, she's destined to wield a powerful influence. You don't see such a face as that many times in life.'

The weary moments wore on. The Christmas morning grew brighter and brighter. The house was still very quiet. Outside the wintry sunshine sparkled, and the trees rattled in the frosty wind. The pale watcher lay back in her chair, paler with every passing moment, but never offering to stir. How white she was! how weary she looked! The young physician's heart went out to her in a great compassion.

'Miss Dangerfield, pardon me, but you are worn out. There is no danger now, and you may safely trust Sir John to my care. Pray let me prevail upon you to go and lie down.'

She opened her eyes and looked at him in some surprise, and with a faint smile.

'You are very kind,' she said, gently, 'but I promised to stay here until he awoke.'

There was nothing more to be said—Miss Dangerfield's tone admitted of no dispute. Mr. Otis went back to his seat, and listened to the ticking of the clock and the sighing of the December wind.

It was almost noon when Sir John awoke—much better, and quite conscious. His daughter had never stirred. She bent over him the minute his eyes opened.

'Papa, dear, you are better?'

'You here still, Kathie?' he said feebly. 'Have you never been to bed at all?'

'No, Sir John,' Mr. Otis interrupted, coming forward; 'and I must beg of you to use your influence to send her there. Her long vigil has quite worn her out, but she would not leave you.'

She stooped and kissed him.

'I will go now, papa. Mr. Otis and Mrs. Harrison will stay with you. I do feel a little tired, I admit.'

Sir John's attack seemed but slight, after all. He kept his bed all next day, but on the third was able to sit up.

'And I don't see any necessity for postponing our wedding, Katherine,' Mr. Gaston Dantree said, 'since by New Year's Eve Sir John will be almost completely restored.'

'But he will not be able to drive to the church with me, Gaston,' Katherine argued. 'Dr. Graves will not permit him to leave the house for a fortnight, and besides, the excitement.'

'Katherine,' her lover interrupted decidedly, 'I will not have our wedding postponed—the most unlucky thing perceivable. If the governor isn't able to go to church at Castleford, and give you away, why let's have the ceremony here in the house. If the mountain can't come to Mahomet, why Mahomet can go the mountain. A wedding in the house is vast deal pleasanter to my mind than in public at Castleford, with all the tag-rag of the parish agape at the bride and groom, and all Castleford barracks clanking their spurred heels and steel scabbards up the aisles, putting us out of countenance.'

Katherine laughed.

'My dear bashful Gaston! the first time I ever dreamed that anything earthly could put you out of countenance! Well, I'll ask papa, and it shall be as he says.'

Miss Dangerfield did ask papa, and rather to her surprise received an almost eager assent.

'Yes, yes,' he said furtively. 'Dantree's right—a postponed marriage is the most unlucky thing on earth. We won't postpone it. Let it be in the house, as he suggests, since my driving with you to church is an impossibility. Since it must be done, 'twere well 'twere done quickly! Let the summer drawing-room be fitted up, and let the ceremony be performed there.'

Mr. Peter Dangerfield had been a daily visitor at Scarswod ever since his uncle's illness—no nephew more devoted, more anxious than he. The baronet listened to his eager inquiries after his health, his son-like anxiety, with a cynical smile.

'If I were dead there would be one the less between him and the title—you understand. I have no doubt Peter is anxious that—I should never recover.'

'Something's happened to Peter, papa,' answered Katherine thoughtfully; 'he's got quite a new way of talking and carrying himself of late. He looks as if some great good fortune had befallen him. Now, what do you suppose it can be?'

'Great good fortune,' Sir John repeated, with rather a startled face. 'I think you must be mistaken, Katherine. I wonder,' very slowly this, 'if—if he—has been in communication with Mrs. Vavasor since her departure.'

For Mrs. Vavasor's presence at Castleford was still a profound secret. She had taken lodgings in the remotest and quietest suburb in the town. She never ventured abroad by day, and had assumed an alias. She and Mr. Dangerfield kept tryst in the evenings, in lonely lanes and deserted places, and no one save himself dreamed of her presence.

But three days now to the wedding day, and these three flew apace. It had been arranged that, contrary to all precedent, the marriage was to be performed at Scarswood, it should also take place in the evening, to be followed, in the good old fashioned way, by a supper and ball, and the bridal party start next day for the Continent. The hour was fixed for ten, and half the country invited.

Sir John's progress towards strength was very slow. Some secret anxiety seemed preying on his mind and keeping him back. He watched his idolized darling flying up and down stairs, dashing, bright as the sunshine itself, in and out of the room, singing like a skylark in her perfect bliss, and he shrank from the light as though it gave him positive pain.

'How can I tell her?' he thonght; 'how can I tell her? And yet I ought—I ought.'

Once or twice he feebly made the attempt, but Katherine put him down immediately in her decided way.

'Not a word now, papa—I won't have it. I don't want to hear any nasty, annoying secrets before my wedding, and have my peace of mind disturbed in this way. If I've got to hear this disagreeable thing, let me wait until the honeymoon is over—Gaston will help me bear it then—you tried to tell me Christmas eve, and brought on a fit of apoplexy; and now, contrary to all medical commands, you want to begin over again and bring on another. But I'm mistress of the situation at present, and I won't listen. So set your mind at rest, and don't wear that gloomy countenance on the eve of your only daughter's marriage.'

He was too feeble to resist. He held her to him a moment, and looked into the happy young face with a weary sigh.

'I suppose few fathers look very joyous on the eve of an only daughter's marriage, and I have greater reason than you dream of to look gloomy. But let it be as you say—let us postpone the evil hour as long as we can.'

The last day came—the day before New Year's Eve. The bride-elect had been busier even than usual all day. Mr. Dantree dined and spent the evening there alone. They were both very grave, very quiet—that long, peaceful evening, the last of her youth and her happiness, never faded from the girl's memory. The picture, as she saw it then, haunted her to her dying hour—the big, lamplit, drawing-room—her father's quiet figure lying back in his easy chair before the fire—her lover at the piano, playing soft, melancholy airs, and she herself nestling in a dormeuse, listening to the music, and his whispered words—the 'sweet nothings' of courtship. She followed him out into the grand portico entrance of the house to say good-bye for the last time. The cold, white moon sailed up the azure, the stars were numberless, the trees cast long, black shadows in the ivory light. The night air sighed faintly in the woodland; something in the still, solemn beauty of the dying night filled the girl's heart with a sense almost of pain.

'The sun will shine to-morrow,' Gaston whispered; 'and blessed is the bride that the sun shines on! Good-night, my darling, for the last time.'

The last time! And no forboding—of all that was so near at hand came to her as she stood there.

The promise of the night did not hold good. Mr. Dantree's prediction as to the sunshine was not destined to be fulfilled. New Year's Eve dawned cloudy, cold, and overcast. A long, lamentable blast soughed up from the sea, the low lying sky frowned darkly over the black, frost-bound earth.

'We're going to have a storm,' Sir John said; 'our guests must reach us through a tempest to-night.'

The storm broke at noon—rain, sleet, and roaring wind. Katherine shivered as she listened to the wild whistling of the blast. She, usually the least nervous and superstitious of human beings, felt little chills creeping over her, as she hearkened to its wintry howls.

'It sounds like the cry of a banshee,' she said, with a shudder to Edith Talbot. 'Such a wild, black, sleety, wretched winter day! And last night there was not a cloud in the sky! Edith, do you believe in omens?'

'I believe this is as disagreeable a day as it is in the nature of December days to be, and that you are a nervous goose for the first time in your life. You don't suppose Mr. Dantree is sugar or salt to melt in the rain, or a feather for the wind to blow away. Don't be so restless and fidgety, Kathie, or you'll make me as nervous as yourself.'

The short, dark, wintry afternoon dragged on.

With the fall of the night the storm seemed to increase. The roar of the winds deepened; the dull thunder of the surf on the shore reached them; the trees waved in the high gale like human things in pain; and the ceaseless sleet lashed the glass.

'An awful night for a wedding,' even the servants whispered, 'No wonder poor Miss Katherine looks like a ghost.'

She was pale beyond all the ordinary pallor of bridehood—strangely restless, strangely silent.

Darkness fell; the house was lit up: flowers bloomed everywhere as though it had been midsummer; warmth and luxury everywhere within contrasted with the travail of the dying year. Under the hands of her maid, Katherine sat passive to all changes. The supreme hour of her life had come, and in every wail of the wind, every dash of the frozen rain, she seemed to hear the warning words of her old nurse: "False as fair! False as fair!"

Eight o'clock. The rector of Castleford and his curate had arrived. Nine! The musicians had come, and the earliest of the nuptial guests; the roll of carriages could be heard through the tumult of the storm. Half past nine! And 'I wonder if Gaston has yet arrived?' Katherine said.

A LADY'S WISH.—"Oh, how I do wish my skin was as clear and soft as yours," said a lady to her friend. 'You, can easily make it so,' answered the friend. "How?" inquired the first lady. "By using Hop Bitters, that makes pure rich blood and blooming health. It did it for me, as you observed."—Cairo Bulletin.

Agricultural.

CARE OF MACHINES.

After the season for using them is over it will not pay to leave the harvesting machines in the fields or by side of the highway. They can do no good in either of those places, but they will be seriously damaged if left exposed to the destructive influences of the weather.

The manufacturers say that when left constantly out of doors, the machines last only half as long as they would if they were protected from the weather when not in use.

Although not as expensive, and therefore not involving as heavy loss when neglected, ploughs, harrows, horse-rakes, and all other farm implements are seriously damaged by exposure to the elements.

Not only do the implements which are left out of doors wear faster and break oftener, thus involving the necessity of frequent repairs, with the expense and loss of time inseparable therefrom, but they are much harder to use than those which are properly housed. A reaper which has stood in the field all winter, will draw much harder than one witch was put under cover at the end of the harvest. Continued exposure of any machine increased power, with increased power of breakage, in its use.

It is a noticeable fact that in sections of the country where the farmers are rich and prosperous, it is seldom we find machines lying about the fields, or stock running in the roads, or weathering the cold autumn rains and sleet; but, in sections where the farmers are poor, though the land may be fertile, we invariably find farm implements left in the field, in the summer their cattle running the roads and in the late fall, when they should be in the stable, we find them shivering in the fence corner, or seeking shelter in barns or other buildings the doors of which have been blown off. In such times their only food is frozen grass, or other unnutricious substances. Care and economy must be exercised in all matters relative to agriculture, or on the most fertile land nothing but a bare existence can be had, and that only by the hardest drudgery. The same men on the same land by careful management and a study of their business could be comfortable and respected, neither of which careless farmers are.

WHAT THE FARMER SHOULD STUDY.

The farmer should study the laws of concentration. He should learn how to concentrate his crops into the best paying articles. Does he consider that butter, cheese, beef, pork and mutton represent only a certain amount of grass, hay and grain that his farm produces? That, instead of selling the raw commodities, he can, by putting them into these articles, get much better return for his products? His study should be how to transform the raw products of his farm into something that is concentrated, and that will bring him the most money. What he raises has to go to some market. By condensing it, little freight will have to be paid, and thus much will be saved. A farm should be a factory for changing the raw products into articles of general consumption that have a commercial value the world over—that are of the best quality, that keep well and sell well, and bring prices that will pay well for the skill, labor and capital employed in producing them.

OVER FEEDING WITH HAY.

Now that cows are about going into winter quarters, a hint about feeding hay may not be out of place. We often hear dairymen talk as if the height of skill in taking care of cows in the winter, was to get all the hay down that it is possible to cram into them. "I give my cows all the good hay I can get them to eat," is the boastful remark often heard from a spirited and aspiring dairyman, though in doing so he is wasting good provender without promoting the best welfare of his animals. It is a good thing to feed cows well, and to be sure that they will have food enough to sustain them fully, but it is neither wise nor economical to crowd them with a great bulk of hay of any quality. It is not wise to crowd any animal with a great bulk of corse food. A horse will do more work and do it easier, on moderate feeds of hay, than he will to crowd him with all that can be got down him. It is burdensome for him to move or exert his muscles with an over distended stomach, and the too large ration will not be digested so well as a smaller one. These objections are more empatically true with cows. It is the nature of Ruminants to hury down large meals when opportunity occurs, and lie by a long time to grind it over, a cud at a time, till it is well pulverized. If palatable food is offered them, they will take one meal after another, in such quick succession, as to give very little opportunity for remastication, and the successive meals of half ground food will be crowded out of the rumen, one after another, imperfectly digested for the want of being properly pulverized. In this course of feeding the double loss from discomfort and improper digestion is forcibly felt. Cows should have no more hay than they have time to remasticate, and if this is not enough for their necessities, they should have some easy-digesting concentrated food along with it. The quantity of hay given should never exceed what they will eat up clean, and twice a day is often enough to give time for properly ruminating.

ONE VARIETY.

As a rule, one variety of fowls is enough for almost any person to manage successfully and profitably, and this is especially true with beginners, who have to gain their experience in all the varied details of poultry management. If a breeder has been successful with one variety, has not merely made good sales, but has produced birds of such a high order of merit that the stock make a good advertisement, and a permanent one, for the breeder, it can be taken for granted that it will pay to take up one or more breeds, provided the same care is bestowed upon each variety as was formerly accorded to the single breed, and provided there are ample conveniences, room and quarters for them. It seldom pays to attempt raising pure bred poultry, of several varieties, unless there is ample room, both in yards and houses, for they must have this to ensure their healthfulness and consequent profit.

LOCAL & OTHER NOTICES

Our readers will bear with us this week for the lack of reading matter, so heavy has been the demand on our advertising space that it was impossible to avoid it. While offering this apology we beg to tender to our numerous patrons a Merry Christmas and a very happy New Year, and to return them our heart-felt thanks for the very liberable support we have received at their hands since commencing business.

It is but a little over a year since we, with some fear, launched our bark on the tide of journalism. We had, undoubtedly, many friends in the outset, but we also had any number of "Job's comforters," who were kind enough to inform us that we would be sick of the job before the year was out. We are happy to say, however, that this latter class have proved false prophets, and that the STANDARD to-day stands on a firm bases. Our circulation has more than doubled and is still daily increasing. Our job patronage, we think we can safely say, is not surpassed by any village office in the Dominion, if it is even equalled. We have added largely to our plant, and are now in a position to give better satisfaction than ever. Our present premises which we erected this summer is the most commodious in the County, and, with the additions we are continually making to our meterial, we wi'l, and we say so without hesitation, have the best establishment in the County, ere long. We will, as heretofore, turn out our work prompt neat, and at as low a rate as is consistent with a fair return for our labor. We again thank our patrons and assure them that we will ever endeavor to retain the confidence that has, up to the present, been so freely reposed in us.

A PUBLIC MEETING will be held in Sproule's Hotel, Markdale, next Wednesday evening, for the purpose of [illegible] steps to organize a Fire Brigade for this village. [illegible] interested [illegible] in the Cross will [illegible] enrolled.

We are likely to have a lively time at our Annual School meeting in Markdale, we would advise every one interested to come out to it on Wednesday the 28th.

A fresh stock of Candies for the Holidays, at Montgomery's, the Baker. Also all kinds of Cakes. (Bride Cakes a specialty). Just leave your orders, we won't tell any one.

The last few days the village has been pretty well thronged with farmers disposing of their grain, and laying in their supply of necessaries for the hollidays.

Our Merchants are making a grand desplay this year, and all appear to be doing a good business. In the grocery line McIntyse makes a fine show in all the luxuries necessary for the festivities of this season of the year.

A grand entertainment will be held in Dufferin Hall, on Monday evening, January 2nd, New Year's Day, in connection with the Presbyterian Sabbath School. For full particulars, see posters.

Some say there is nothing like leather, but evidently Wilcox thinks there is nothing like printer's ink. See his advertisement on our third page and then give him a call, you will find him a pretty square man to deal with, and his goods are just what he represents them to be.

Mr, Masson is in Markdale every Friday and Saturday, and is well pleased with the amount of business he is securing. He has now any amount of money to loan, both private and Companies' funds.

Gray spent seven years in perfecting his "Elegy," but the time required to get a box of Esterbrook's Steel Pens is just long enough to send to the nearest stationer. Wholesale by Brown Bros., Toronto.

McFarland has his store decorated in style. Four pillars support two arches loaded with evergreens, over which are scattered Chinese lanterns, Fancy goods, &c., &c. Mr. Dunlop has his bakery nicely decorated for the holidays.

The Christ Church, Sunday School Xmass Tree and entertainment will take place on Wednesday, 28th inst., in Dufferin Hall. The entertainment to commence at 7.30, and will consist of Xmas Carrols, Dialogues, recitations and distribution of Xmas presents.

Any person desirous of subscribing or the Globe or Mail, or of renewing their subscription for the same, will save the trouble and risk of mailing by handing us the amount required, $1.00 for either of the above papers, and we will have them sent to any address without further charge.

There is no doubt that our Canadian climate is conducive to Lung affections, and for this reason Dr. Carson's Pulmonary Cough Drops should be in every house. For Coughs, Colds, and all other Lung and Throat affections they have no equal. In large bottles at 50 cents. A Turner and Co., Special Agent Markdale.

MARKDALE FOUNDRY.—This New establishment is now in full operation, and every thing about it works like a charm. The proprietors are first-class practical workmen. One of the brothers is a moulder, another a machinist, and a third learning the business, while the old gentleman, their, father, is a mould and pattern maker. They are kept very busy, and will, no doubt, do a lage business, We wish the firm success.

A great many people are troubled with cold feet, which is invariably caused by a sluggish circulation of the blood. A few doses of Dr. Carson's Stomach and Constipation Bitters will soon produce a free circulation of the blood and Stimulate and Tone the system. Sold in large bottles at 50 cents. A. Turner and Co., Special Agent, Markdale.

The annual election of officers of Markdale Grange No. 834 took place in their Hall on Friday Dec. 16th with the following results: Thomas Mann, W. M.; Geo. Richardson, O.; Thos. Elliott, Jr. Lect., S.; J. Coleman, Treas. J. Elliott, Sec., B. Coleman, Chap., J. Myers, Steward, S. Lackey Ass. S.; E. Lomas, G.; Miss E. Drew, C.; Alice Dr[illegible], T.; Jane Walker, F.; Mrs. S. Walker, Lady Ass. Stewardess. A. Elliott and B. Coleman, Auditors. B. Coleman Joseph Myers, and J. Elliott Executive Committee, J. Elliot Delegate to Div. Grange. The above Grange is in a prosperous condition at present.

Now that winter has well commenced we would advise our readers against using pills containing Calomel and other injurious substance, as there is great danger of catching cold after their use. An excellent substitute for pills is a Vegetable Preparation known as Dr. Carson's Stomach and Constipation Bitters, a family medicine that, from all accounts, will soon take the place of every other purgative and blood purifier. A Turner and Co., Special Agent, Markdale.

A MERRY CHRISTMAS,

AND

A HAPPY NEW YEAR.

TO ONE AND ALL.

May the good year 1881 maintain and leave you prosperous and happy. May peace and plenty dwell within your gates. May sunshine enter each home and each heart; and may sorrow, and above all the dark shaddow bringing sickness, poverty and death, not enter your household. And now dear friends, with best wishes to all, and bright anticipations for the future, I wish you one and all a "Merry Christmas, and a very Happy New Year.

Sincerely yours,
W. J. MCFARLAND.

A PUBLIC MEETING Should be called of the citizens of every city, town and village in the Dominion, to consider what should be done to prevent the hair from turning Grey —and falling out. If this important question received their earnest consideration they would unanimously decide that science had at last discovered something that would answer this purpose—and furthermore would recommend Cingalese Hair Renewer as being this something for restoring the hair to its natural color, and prevent its falling out. 50 cents per bottle. For sale by all Druggists.

The most complete Farmers' and Mechanics' diary ever published; every person ought to have one. See them at the STANDARD Office; only 40cts.

Our packet for McIntyre P. O., last week was returned to us yesterday for address, while the address was still plain on the parcel. We send it to-day together with this week's issue.

FEVERSHAM.

From a Correspondent.

A correspondent in a late STANDARD said that Feversham was still in the same place, everything quiet, and the people trudging through the mud. Well, we may say to that individual, that Feversham is still in the same place, and likely to remain, as it is built on a good solid rock; but is not very quiet just now, on the contrary is rather lively, with no mud, but good sleighing, and the merry jingle of the sleigh-bells is to be heard everywhere, consequently business is on the increase.

The flour mill is being thoroughly repaired, and will be in first-class order shortly. If you want No. 1 flour and a good return, give the Feversham Mills a call.

Livision Grange met here last Friday, there was a good attendance and everything passed off satisfactory.

There has been great destruction among the canine race during the last week, resulting from the death of a calf which some miscreant poisoned and left in a conspicuous place. Feversham is almost clear of dogs now, and there is many a sad face over the death of some favorite spaniel, &c.

The population of this place and surrounding neighborhood is greatly on the increase. We think there will be more houses required before long, and expect to be applying for an Act of Incorporation shortly.

We regret very much to learn that Mr. R. T. McGirr met with a very serious loss last Saturday evening in the death of his celebrated and well-known trotter, Pochahontas.

OPEN EYE.

MEAFORD ROAD.

From our Correspondent.

The annual meeting of the Union Sabbath School for the election of officers and teachers was held on the 14th inst., with the following result, officers:—Superintendent, Wm. Buchannan, Jr.; Ass't-Supt., Philip Sparling; Secretary, Jno. J. Graham; Treasurer, Jas. Brodie; Librarian, Joseph Buchanan. Teachers, male—Bible Class, Thos. Boland; 1st Testament Class, Philip Sparling; 2nd do., Jno. Freeman; Juvenile Class, Henry Sparling. Females—1st Bible Class, Mrs. Thomas Boland; 2nd do., Miss Buchanan; 1st Testament class, Mrs. Jas. Sparling; 2nd do., Miss Boland; Juvenile class, Miss Sparling. The anniversary of the school will be held yn the 31st of January, in the Wesley Church. Tickets. 25 cents each, proceeds for the benefit of the Sabbath School. The usual programme will be carried out, viz:—Music, Recitations, Speeches, and Readings. A good time is anticipated.

DEBATING CLUB.—A Debating Club has been organized at the Stone school house, officers:—President, James Brodie; Secretary, J. C. Buchanan; Treasurer, J. J. Graham. Nights of meeting, Thursday. The opening debate, "Wheather the African or Indian has been most oppressed by the White man"—Captains, John Rowe and Robert Graham.

CHANGE OF TEACHERS.—Miss Ellen Graham, of Orange Valley, has been engaged for the school in this neighborhood. Mr. J. C. Buchanan, our late teacher, is removing to the New England school. We hope that he might be as successful in his new school as he has been here.

Weather very changeable, a little snow, a good deal of rain, and abundance of mud and rough roads. A foot of snow and good sleighing would be very acceptable. Let us hope that it will soon be here.

PRICEVILLE.

From a Correspondent.

The Presbyterian Church here, after an epoch of struggle and strife, is gradually emerging on dry land.—Priceville is one of those places where, previous to the late union, the people were devided into speparate sections—the one delighting to be denominated "Auld Kirk;" the other "Free Kirk." Sometime previous to the general union of the Church, the Ministers of the two congregations here had resigned their charges and gone to other fields of labor, the idea being, that there was no chance of union under either of the Pastors, although both were gifted men and much liked by their respective congregations. The result, for a time was chaos. Something like union, however, was at last brought about three years ago last summer, and Rev. Donald McLeod, from P. E. Island, was called and settled as Minister of the united congregation. Mr. McLeod, although not a strong man, physically, has proved himself a worker who needeth not to be ashamed, and under his ministrations the union of the once speparated people is being surely, if slowly, cemented. In all such cases the process of cohesion must, of necessity, be slow, and by hastening slowly, the desired end is invariably all the sooner accomplished. Last winter a Young Men's Association was formed, under the guidance of some of the older members of the Church, and something was done in the way of having a series of public lectures. This winter we are are glad to see that the young men are disposed to take the initiative themselves, and carry out the programme of spiritual and literary development. It is to be hoped they will persevere, and find their reward in an ever widening mental range, and an increasing vigor imparted to the general work of the congregation.

In accordance with a resolution come to at the last annual business meeting of the Church, a free Social was held by the members on the evening of Wednesday, the 14th inst. Mr. Meldrum, Station Master, although a member of another congregation, had been specially invited by the committee to attend, and after the usual [illegible] were disposed of, was unanimously voted to the chair. On taking it, Mr. Meldrum refered to certain views that some had as to the second advent; that previous to that happening, the author of evil and his luminaries would leave no stone unturned to get possession of the Church through making the latter pleased with themselves, &c. With reference to the Priceville congregation, the Chairman thought it might be a powerful means for good—the membership being large, and even wealthy. He was specially pleased with such a reunion of members of a congregation as the present, and hoped it would prove beneficial to the Church.

Rev. Mr. McLeod, Minister of the congregation, was then called on, and referred to the condition of things years ago, and to his pastorate of some three or four years. He did not know exactly whether it was his fortune or misfortune to have succeded two such men as Rev. Charles Cameron and Rev. Donald Fraser; Ministers who were both able and zealous, and also deservedly popular in the townships of Artemesia, Proton and Glenelg, to the utmost bounds of which their labours extended in those days of megro ministerial supply. Mr. McLeod said: On coming here, a perfect stranger, he was agreeably surprised with the kindness received then and since. Considering the reports he had previously heard of the turbulance said to have been manifested.—He had been well supported by the Eldership—a body of men with whom he was glad to say he could always cordially and agreeably co-operate. In regard to this meeting, he was gratified to see so many present. This was a first attempt to establish an annual social reunion of members of the congregation; the object not being to raise money by making a charge for admission, but simply to have a yearly friendly meeting where money would not be called for, but where the members could enjoy themselves in a friendly way, and have a talk about the affairs of the Church generally. Various members of the Congregation subsequently addressed the meeting, and after a vote of thanks to the Chairman, the benediction was pronounced by Mr. McLeod.

LIFE OF GARFIELD.

(Guelph Daily Herald, Dec. 8, 1881.)

We have just received a copy of the Life of Garfield, by James D. McCabe. The work is endorsed by B. A. Hinsdale, of Hiram College, Ohio, and the following extract concerning it appears in the Cleveland Herald of Nov. 29th, 1881:—

"President B. A Hinsdale, of Hiram, authorizes us to make public the following statement:

"'Mrs. Garfield has appointed me the editor of General Garfield's works, with instructions to collect, edit and carry them through the press as speedily as is consistent with completeness and thoroughness.'"

"'The commission that Mrs Garfield has given me covers the speeches, addresses, and published papers of General Garfield, but has nothing to do with his life.'

B. A. Hinsdale."

It will be seen by the above statement that the work Mrs. Garfield has commissioned President Hinsdale to edit is not in any sense a "Life of President Garfield," but it is only a compilation of his "speeches, addresses and published papers." It will therefore contain no account of the assassination of President Garfield, his long suffering, and heroic death.

We are much pleased with the work. It contains 768 pages of well printed reading, and numerous illustrations which were not promised by the publishers. The World Publishing Company of this city have the exclusive right for the Dominion of Canada, and we understand they are selling large numbers of the books, and, although we understand that cheap, inferior editions are being introduced, yet it does not seem to interfere in the sale of this very elaborate work which is recommended by the most intimate friends of the late President Garfield, and we are glad to hear that so worthy a work is having such a an extensive circulation. A few more good agents would do well to apply at once to the World Publishing Company, Guelph, Ontario.

Orangeville Lodge, No. 156, Orangeville, Ont., Ancient Order of United Workmen, was organized on the 14th inst., by F. G. Inwood, D.G.M.W., assisted by Dr. Wm. McGregor, P.M. W. of Royal lodge, Guelph. The officers are:—F. C. Stewart, P.M.W.; Dr. C. M. Smith, M.W.; S. Wallace, Foreman; John Wallace, Overseer; G. W. McKee, Recorder; F. Frank, Financier; J. Crozier, Receiver; W. Sutton, Guide; J. H. Hoffman, I.W; R. A. Stokes, O.W. The following are the trustees of the lodge:—M. Wilkins, E. Leslie, and D. McDonald. This lodge starts out with unusually bright prospects. Instituted with forty charter-members and with sufficient applications to make its membership over fifty, it comes to the front as the strongest lodge organized during the term.

CLIPPINGS FROM OUR LOCAL EXCHANGES.

CHATSWORTH.—The new steam grist mill at Chatsworth, owned by Mr. Wray, is at length in operation, after having been delayed about four months beyond the stipulated time at which it was to have been completed, on account of the boilernot being got ready which, together with the engine and pulleys, was manufactured by G. Gorbet & Sons, Owen Sound, the rest of the mechinery connected with the gristing department having been manufactured by Messrs. W. & J. G. Greey, Toronto, and all appears to be of first-rate quality, having all the modern improvements [now] in use, which will enable the enterprising proprietor to command a very extensive patronage. Much credit is likewise due to the millwright, Mr. R. J. McAuslan, for the systematic arrangement in the interior and the efficient manner in which he performed his work.—O. S. Times.

GENERAL SESSIONS AND COUNTY COURT.—The General Sessions and County Court was held before His Honor Judge Macpherson on Tuesday, and lasted only one day. The Judge in dismissing the Grand Jury said that in his seventeen years as Judge, this was the lightest court he ever had. There was only one criminal case, that of J. H. Leary, charged with starting the late fire at Thornbury, but the Grand Jury dismissed the bill. The following is a list of the Grand Jury:

David Simpson, Foreman; S. Arrowsmith, Martin Switzer, Jasper Bates, F. Bole, R. Ludlow, R. Harkness, H. W. Norton, Robt. Brown, Thos. Jones, Wm. McKeen, Jabez Banks, Alfred Lawson, Alex. Webster, Jno. Fraser, Thos. Oliver, Wm. Garvie, Albert Paterson, S. Whitmore, Jas. B. Young, Jno. Milburn, Thos. Moore.

The following civil cases were disposed of:

ANDERSON vs BIGGAR.—Interpleader issue on a horse seized in an execution against brother-in-law of plaintiff. Judgment for plaintiff. Jno. Creasor Q. C., for plaintiff; Jas. Masson for defendant.

MULLEN vs KENNEDY.—Suit for breach of contract to deliver about 100,000 feet of lumber at Williams ford Station, under a written agreement whereby Mullen reserved the right to cull on his own discretion. Dispute arose in the culling, and defendant refused to allow culling to proceed, or to deliver the lumber. Plaintiff sued for what he could have made on the lumber according to a sale then made by him, which he stated at $180. Verdict for plaintiff. $25 with Division Court costs. Jno. Creasor, Q. C., for plaintiff; Jas. Masson, for defendant.

LLOYD vs PEARCE was adjourned for two weeks.—O. S. Times.

The Ceremonies attending the opening of the new Roman Catholic church at Melacthon, took place on Sunday last, 11th inst. The attendance was quite large, and the proceedings seemed to be of great interest to those present Bishop Crinnon, of Hamilton, assisted by several priests, conducted the ceremonies. The church is a very neat structure, and is sufficiently large to afford ample accommodation for the congregation. Both the Bishop and the Architect, Mr. J. Turner, of Brantford, expressed themselves as highly pleased with the workmanship displayed in the building, and gave the contractor, Mr. J. C. Whitten, of this village, great credit for the efficient manner in which the work had been done.—Free Press.

MILLIONS IN IT,

J. D. Alexander, editor News, Branesyille Ga., U. S. A., says: "For the past twelve months I have been suffering with inflammatory rheumatism I tried several physicians but they failed to relieve me. A friend recommended St. Jacob's Oil. I at once procured a half dozen bottles, which I have used, and find that I am improving all the time. It relieved me at once when I am suffering terrible pain and prevents me from spending many sleepless nights. Nothing has done me so much good."

MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS.

In Glenelg matters are quiet.

Mr. John Black has announced himself a candidate for councillor, as will be seen by our advertising columns, and will, no doubt, stand a good chance of being elected. We have heard of no oppisition to the Reeve. Thos. Mullarky is talked of as a candiace for councillor.

In Artemesia, things are comparitively quiet. It is rumered that Mr. Geo. Dodds will be a candidate for Reeve. The old council will, no doubt, all seek re-election.

In Osprey, there will be lively times as opposition is likely to be had for the office of Reeve, and also Deputy Reeve. The man who recieves the largest number of votes will be elected assuredly.

In Holland, we hear of no opposition to the Reeve, Mr. Howey, and very likely little or no change will be made in the old council.

Euphrasia is likely to have two or three Reeves the coming year, or, rather, the Reeveship will be sought by that many. We think, however, that the present one, Mr. Myles, will be re-elected.

Proton will have a change, as the present Reeve, J. J. Middleton, Esq., intends stepping down and out. Mr. Peter McGregor is a candidate for the office. He is well known in the Township, and will likely be elected. Mr. Abbott, it is said, will have opposition for the Deupty Reeveship, we think, however, Mr. A. will be elected.

ENTERTAINMENTS BEFORE OUR NEXT ISSUE.

At the Manse, Markdale, on Monday, the 19th Inst., by the Rev. A. Wilson, Mr. William M. Stock, of Osprey, to Miss Mary E. Badgerow, of Artemesia.

(FROM BRAZIL.)

The New Compound, its wonderful affinity to the Digestive Apparatus and the Liver, increasing the dissolving juices, relieving almost instantly the dreadful results of Dyspepsia, Indigestion, and the TORPID LIVER, makes Zopesa an every day necessity in every house.

It acts gently and speedily in Biliousness, Costiveness, Headache, Sick Headache, Distress after Eating, Wind on the Stomach, Heartburn, Pains in the Side and Back, Want of Appetite, Want of Energy, Low Spirits, Foul Stomach. It invigorates the Liver, carries off all surplus bile, regulates the Bowels, and gives tone to the whole system.

Cut this out and take it to your Druggist and get a 10 cent Sample, or a large bottle for 75 cents, and tell your neighbor about it.

NOTICE.

THE ANNUAL SCHOOL MEETING FOR 1881 will be held in the School House, Markdale, on Wednesday, 28th inst., commencing at 10 o'clock a.m. Ratepayers and others interested, of U. S. S. No. 1, Artemesia and Glenelg, are particularly requested to be present, as the Trustees are most anxious that all parties having grievances should be fully heard, and that the affairs of the school, financial and otherwise, should receive that careful and intelligent criticism which the interests involved demand.

To the Electors of Glenelg.

GENTLEMEN,—Having been requested by a large number of the Ratepayers of the Township of Glenelg, to run for the office of Councilman for the Township, I have decided to do so. Last year I was nominated, but owing to sickness in my family, was unable to give any attention whatever to the election, but notwithstanding this I received a very large number of votes, almost sufficient to elect me as Councillor. If elected to represent the Township at the Council Board, I shall strive to do what I sincerely believe to be for the best interests of the Township as a Councillor, if elected.

I remain your obedient servant,
JOHN BLACK.

OATMEAL AS FOOD.

Says an Irish paper:—Oatmeal is a food of real strength and nutrition, having claims to be better known and more widely used than it is at present. Of much service as a brain food, it contains phosphorus enough to keep a man doing an ordinary amount of brain work in good health and vigor. All medical authorities unite in the opinion that eaten with milk, it is a perfect food, and having all the requisites for the development of the system, it is a pre-eminently a useful food for growing children and the young generally. Oatmeal requires much cooking to effectually burst its starch cells, but when it is well cooked it will thicken liquid much more than equal its weight in wheaten flour.—The oats of this country are superior to those grown on the Continent and in the southern part of England, but certainly inferior to the Scotch, where considerable pains are taken to cultivate them, and it is needless to point out that the Scotch are an example of a strong and thoroughly robust nation, which result is partly set down as being derived from the plentiful use of oatmeal. Dr. Guthrie has asserted that his countrymen have the largest heads of any nation in the world—not even the English having such large heads—which he attributes to the universal use of oatmeal, as universal it is, being found alike on the tables of the rich and the tables of the poor—in the morning they have the porridge and in the evening the traditional cake. The two principle ways of cooking porridge and cake (bannock), which I will describe, and also some other modes of cooking to afford an agreeable variety of dishes. First, then, we will commence with a receipt for porridge:—To three pints of boiling water add a level teaspoonful of salt and a pint of coarse meal, stirring till the meal is diffused through the water—about eight or ten minutes. Cover it closely then, and place it where it will simmer for an hour; avoid stiring during the whole of that time. Serve hot and with as little messing as possible, accompanied with milk, maple syrup or sugar, and cream. To make oatmeal cake place in a bowl a quart of meal, add to it [illegible] cold water [illegible] will form it into [illegible] dough, cover it with a cloth [illegible] minutes to allow it to swell, then [illegible] the pasteboard with meal, turn out the dough and [illegible]. Cover it with [illegible] minutes and proceed [illegible] roll it out to an [illegible] cut it into five pieces [illegible] them on a grid [illegible] toasting them in front [illegible] fire.

[illegible] THROAT.

Apply Hagyard's Yellow Oil and take inwardly [illegible] directions. Yellow Oil is the best remedy for Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Bruises, Burns, Frost Bites and all [illegible], inflammation and pain. No household should be without it.

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] MAN WANTED.

[illegible] Cleveland the other [illegible] will hereafter, as the [illegible] world [illegible] and, after doing the [illegible] he became almost worried out, wound up about two o'clock in the morning at the establishment of a well known undertaker [illegible] Washington. After knocking at the door for several minutes, the proprietor came to the window and bawled out:

"What's wanted?"

"Say, Mr. [illegible]," said his inebriate [illegible], "I want to see you for a moment. Come down."

"Do you want to give an order?" asked the undertaker.

"Yes an order. Come down," said the visitor.

The proprietor dressed himself and came downstairs, and unlocking the door let the man in. "Now," said he, "what can I do for you?"

"Say, [illegible], I want to order you [illegible] to come to my house. You are the last man I want to have anything to do with. Good night, sir."

The undertaker; who thought he had a job, fired the fellow out and returned to his downy couch, murmuring as he went along: "Sold again."

INGENIOUS INVENTION.

Some shrewd Yankee has invented a key that will wind any watch; it is a neat attachment to a charm, and it is said to work like a charm. So does the grand Key to Health Burdock Blood Bitters, the greatest discovery of the age. It unlocks all the secretions, and cleanse and invigorates the entire system. Sample bottles, 10 cents; large size, $1.00 of all medicine dealers.

Whatever you have to do, do it with your might. Many a lawyer has made his fortune by simply working with a will.

Queen Victoria is soon to have a visit from King [illegible], as he is going to England to thank her in person for the gift of the Garter.

CAUSE AND EFFECT.—The main cause of nervousness is indigestion, and that is caused by weakness of the stomach. No one can have sound nerves and good health without using Hop Bitters to strengthen the stomach, purify the blood, and keep the liver and kidneys active, to carry off all the poisonous and waste matter of the system.—Advance.

THE TRUTH ABOUT IT.

Says a contemporary:—A short time ago we called upon a certain party in this city and asked him why he did not advertise.

"Oh," he answered, "what's the use? Nobody will ever see it."

"You're mistaken," said we, "every page of our paper is read."

"Nonsense," he replied; "even if people did read my advertisement, they would never think of it again. I don't want to advertise."

"But—,"

"No buts at all. I don't want to advertise, and don't bother me any more; I'm busy." And he walked back into his store and strangled a poor little fly that was helping itself from a barrel of sugar.

Time passed and we never again intimated advertising to him though meeting him daily. The other day the gentleman called at our sactum, looking a little uncertain as to how he would be received. We cherished no hard feeling and motioned him to a chair.

"I suppose you heard of that little affair of mine below?"

"Oh, yes," said we; "that little escapade on King street the night before last. Yes, we've got the particulars—'

"Hush not so loud, please," said he; "of course you're going to say nothing in the papers about it?'

"And why not? It is a matter of interest to your friends and the public generally."

"Heavens! Why it would ruin me."

"Oh, no, guess not; nobody wil ever see it."

"Yes they will; and it will ruin me as sure as I am sitting here. I'll be the laughing stock of the town. They will see it."

We rose and touched him in sively on the shoulder.

"Well, we admit, the people wil see it; but then, you know, they will never think of it again."

His words came back to him in a flash and he trembled so violently that his eye-balls fairly jingled, and he was such an object for commiseration that we promised to keep mum. This little moral is drawn from the above, which is applicable the world over: ask a man to advertise, and he will immediately say, in the majority of cases, that "Nobody will ever see it;' but advertise gratis some little indiscretion he may commit, and he immediately grows indignant over the certainty that the whole world will know it.

WHERE IGNORANCE IS BLISS TIS FOLLY TO BE WISE.

Dr. Bliss, if not a success at probing for bullets, was highly successful in despatching bulletins; but the grandest bulletin of success is that which heralds the wonderful cures performed by Burdock Blood Bitters, that matchless tonic and blood purifier which acts at once upon the Bowels, the Skin, the Liver and the Kidneys, while it invigorates and strengthens the whole system.

A NATURAL BAROMETER.

Everybody has admired the delicate and ingenious work of the spider, everybody has watched her movements as she spins her wonderful web, but all do not know that she is the most reliable weather prophet in the world. Before a wind storm she shortens the threads that suspended her web, and leaves them in this state as long as the weather remains unsettled. When she lengthens these threads count on fine weather, and in proportion to their length will be its duration. When a spider rests inactive it is a sign of rain; if she works during a rain, be sure it will soon clear up and remain clear for some time. The spider, it is said, changes her web every twenty-four hours, and the part of the day she chooses to do this is always significant. If it occurs little before sunset, the night will be fine and clear. Hence the old French proverb: "Araignee du soir, espoir."

HAVE HOPE.

Before you despair of curing a troublesome cough just verging on consumption try Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam; it has cured others, why may it not cure you? All dealers sell it.

The little daughter of Mr. Franklyn, who loaned his residence to the sick President, Gladys, a maiden of nine summers, goes bear-hunting in the Rocky Mountains, in boy's clothes, with her father.

How to restore oil paintings—carry them back to the owner. Not satisfied with every other color, the ruler of Tunis Mustapaha Bey. One is a beer mug and the other is a mere bug. The conundrum is of no importance.

HAGYARD'S PECTORAL BALSAM.

Cures coughs, colds, asthma, croup, whooping cough, sore throat, bronchitis and all lung complaints that lead to consumption. Price 25 cents.

A nurse was telling about a man who had become so terrible worn out by dissipation that he could not keep any food on his stomach, when one of listeners asked: "what does he live on then?" "On his relations ma'am," answered the nurse.

"How are you, Brown?" exclaimed Fenderson. "I have been on a regular wild goose chase, and I'm glad I've found you at last." Fenderson supposed he had said something pretty smart the way the boy laughed. but he can't for the life of him tell what it was.

A CURE FOR CROUP.

Apply flannel saturated with Hagyard's Yellow Oil and administer the Oil internally on a little sugar as directed on the bottle. Yellow Oil cures Rheumatism, Burns, Scalds, Chilblains, Lameness, and all flesh wounds. All dealers supply it, price 25 cents.

They were conversing the other day, about a common friend, when Butterby said: "Poor fellow he's got the mumps." "Sorry to hear it,' replied Quilty; "can't he get anything for them?" "Well no," answered Butterby without a flush, there's no market for them now."

Dissolutson of Partnership.

NOTICE is hereby given, that the Copartnership formerly subsisting between the undersigned as Butchers, in Markdale, under the style or firm of Wilson & Bryden, was dissolved by mutual consent on the 9th day of December, 1881; and that the said business will in future be carried on by George Wilson, who will receive and pay all the debts of the late firm.

Dated this 9th day of December, A.D., 1881.

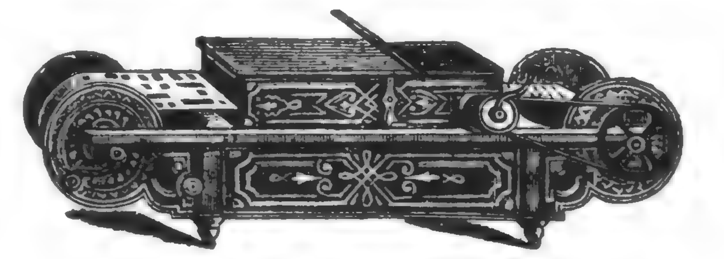
Mechanical Orguinette.



An Automatic Reed Organ.

"The Orguinette may now be called a celebrated instrument. In tone it is akin to the Cabinet Organ, but the organ must be manipulated by an artist in order to produce music; the ORGUINETTE is on the other hand entirely mechanical in its action, and at a trifling expense it can be made to furnish an unlimited supply of all kinds of music.—Toronto Globe."

"The Orguinette is indeed a musical wonder. It is a minature reed organ, with as strong and melodious a tone as the Cabinet Size. It surpasses the Cabinet Organ for the reason that the igneramus in music can play it as well as the most accomplished professor. THE ORGUINETTE is strong and accurate in its mechanism, and consequently not iable to get out of order."—Montreal Gazette.

"The Orguinette is the most perfect automatic musical instrument yet invented; its repertorie is unlimited, the tone is remarkably good."—Montreal Star.

MANHOOD

HOW LOST, HOW RESTORED.

WE have recently published a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical and nervous Debility, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage etc., resulting from excesses.

Price, in a sealed envelope, only 6 cts., or two postage stamps.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicines or the use of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

This Lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

A WONDERFUL WOMAN.

It was the first time she had spoken for over an hour. Her attendant bridesmaids, five besides Miss Talbot, were all there. The dressing-rooms were bright with fair girls, floating tulle and laces, and fragrant with flowers. Miss Talbot and the French maid were alone with the bride. The last touch had been given to the toilet. The robe of dead-white silk swept in its richness far behind; the tall, slim figure looked taller and slimmer than ever; the virginal orange blossoms crowned the light-brown hair; the bridal veil floated like a mist over all. The last jewel was placed, the last ribbon tied, the last fall of lace arranged. She stood before the mirror, fair, pale, pensive—a bride ready for the altar.

A quarter of ten! The Swiss clock, telling off the quarters, startled them. How the moments flew—how fast the guests were arriving through the storm! The roll of carriages was almost incessant now, and lifting her dreamy eyes, Katherine repeated her inquiry: 'I wonder if Gaston has come?'

'What a question!' cried Miss Talbot. 'A bridegroom late, and that bridegroom Mr. Dantree of all men. Of course he has come, and is waiting in a fever of impatience down stairs. Ninen, run and see.'

The French girl went, and came flying back breathlessly.

Mademoiselle, how strange. Monsieur Dantree has not arrived. Monseigneur, the abbe, is ready and waiting—all the guests are assembled, but mon Dieu! the bridegroom is late!'

Miss Talbot looked at her friend. Neither spoke nor moved. The flock of bridesmaids, a 'rosebud garden of girls,' came floating in with their misty drapery, their soft voices and subdued laughter. It was ten o'clock, and the wedding hour.

There was a tap at the door. Ninon opened it, and old Sir John, white as ashes, and trembling on his staff, entered and approached his daughter.

'Katherine, Dantree has not come.'

'I know it, father. Something has happened.'

Her voice was quite steady, but a gray, ashen terror blanched her face.

'Had you not better send to Morecame?' Edith Talbot interposed. 'He was quite well when I left this morning. Has George arrived?'

'Your brother is here, Miss Talbot.'

'And what does he say?'

'Nothing to the point. Before dark Dantree left him to go to his room and dress. Your brother when starting for here sent him word, and found his room deserted. Taking it for granted that he wished to be alone, and had left for Scarswood before him, your brother came over at once. He was astonished when he arrived at not finding him here.'

And then dead silence fell. What did it mean?

Below, the guest had gathered in groups, whispering ominously; in the 'bridal bower,' bride and bridesmaids looked at each other's pale faces and never spoke. One by one the moments told off. A quarter past ten, and still no bridegroom!

Then all at once wheels dashed up to the door—in the entrance hall there was the sudden bustle of an arrival. Katherine's heart gave one great bound; and Edith Talbot, unable to endure the suspense, unable to look at her friend's tortured face, turned and ran out of the room.

'Wait!' she said. 'I will be back in a minute.'

She flew down stairs. Some one had arrived—a gentleman—but not Gaston Dantree. The new-comer, pale, breathless, eager, was only Peter Dangerfield.

But he might bring news—he looked as though he did. She was by his side in a moment, her hand on his arm.

'What is it?' she said. 'Has anything happened to Mr. Dantree?'

'Yes, Dangerfield,' exclaimed Captain De Vere, coming forward, 'as second best man I have a right to know. Shorten the agony, if possible, and out with it. What's up? The hour is past and the bride is waiting, where the devil is the bridegroom?'

CHAPTER XII.

THE TELLING OF THE SECRET.

Where was the bridegrom?

Gaston Dantree bade good-bye to Katherine Dangerfield, and rode down the noble avenue of elms leading to the ponderous gates. His horse's footsteps rang clear and sharp through the still, frosty air—the silvery mist of moonlight bathed all things in its pale mystic glow.

He paused an instant to look back, ere he rode away. What a fair domain it was—what a stately sweep of park, and glade, and woodland—fairer than ever in the pearly light of the Christmas moon. How noble the house looked, with its turrets, its peaked gables, its massive stack of chimneys. And to-morrow all this would be—his—he an outcast of the New York streets.

He laughed softly, exultantly to himself, as he turned and rode swiftly away.

'It's better to be born lucky than rich—it's better to be born handsome than lucky. A clear complexion and a set of regular features, a tenor voice, and insinuating manners have done more for me than they do for most men. They have made my fortune. Half the men and women in the world are fools at best, and don't know how to use the gifts with which nature has endowed them. I was born in the gutter, brought up in the streets, adopted out of charity, turned out for my shortcomings, to starve, or steal, to go to State prison, or—become the literary hack of a sporting paper, ill-paid and ill-used. And now—to-morrow is my wedding-day, and a baronet's daughter and the heiress of eight thousand a year to be my bride. Gaston Dantree, I congratulate you again, and still again; you're one of the very cleverest fellows I ever knew in the whole course of my life.'

And then, as Mr. Dantree rode over the moonlit highroad, he astonished belated wayfarers by uplifting his voice in melody so sweet and clear, that even the sleeping nightingales, had there been any in December, might have awakened to listen and envy. The wheels of the world were greased on their axles for him. A bride and a fortune, and a life of perpetual pleasure, lay beyond to-morrow's sunrise. There was only one thorn in all his bed of roses—Marie.

'If she should come, after all! and Satan himself, I believe, can never tell what a woman may do. You may be as certain as that you live she will take one course, and ten to one she takes the direct opposite. For Marie De Lansac to pursue any man, though he sat on the throne of the Cæsars, is the most unlikely thing on earth, and for that very reason she may turn up now. If she should appear to-morrow, and forbid the banns! Such things happen sometimes. Or, if she should turn up a year hence, and proclaim my secret and her wrongs. And bigamy is a devilish ugly word.'

The shadow of the avenger pursued Mr. Dantree into dreamland. His visions this antenuptial night were all dark and ominous. He fell asleep, to see the face of the woman he feared, dark and menacing; he awoke, and fell asleep again, to see it pallid and despairing, wild with woman's ... at woe. He started out of bed at last, at some abnormal hour in the dim ... dawn, with a curse upon his lips. Sleeping or waking, the face of Marie De Lansac haunted him like an avenging ghost. The storm had come with the new day—rain and sleet beat the glass, the wind howled dismally around the house and up and down the draughty passage. Mr. Dantree scowled at the distant prospect—atmospheric influences did not affect him much as a rule, but they affected him today. I suppose the least sensitive of human beings likes bright sunshine, balmy breezes, and cloudless skies for his wedding day. Mr. Dantree cursed the weather—cursed the pursuing memory that drove him from his bed—cursed his own folly in letting superstitious fears trouble him, and having finished his litany, produced a smoke-coloured bottle of French brandy, a case of manillas, and flung himself into an easy chair before the still smouldering fire. He primed himself with eau de vie until the breakfast-bell rang, and then descended to meet his host and his sister, and get the vapours of the night dispelled in their society.

Miss Talbot departed for Scarswood almost immediately after breakfast. Mr. Dantree escorted her to the carriage, and moodily watched her drive away.

'I suppose I am to give your love to Katherine?' the young lady said, gaily; 'and I suppose we won't see you until the hour. Try and wear a less dolorous face, signor, when you do present yourself. It's a serious occasion, beyond doubt, but not even matrimony can warrant so gloomy a countenance as that.'

How the long interminable hours of that day wore on, Gaston Dantree never afterward knew. Something was going to happen—he simply felt that—what, he did not know. Marie might come, or she might not; but whether or no, something would happen. The dark sleety hours dragged slowly along—he smoked furiously—he drank more brandy than was at all prudent or usual for bridegrooms—he went in and out in a restless fever that would not let him sit down. He paced up and down the leafless aisles, the sleet driving sharply in his face, the keen wind piercing him, for he was of a chilly nature. Were presentiments true? None had ever troubled him before. Was it a guilty conscience? It was the first time he ever realized he had a conscience; or was it a worse demon than, the gloomy fiend of—indigestion?

'A sluggish liver has made men blow their brains out before now, and a dyspeptic stomach has seen ghosts. Presentiments are sentimential humbugs—it's the heavy dinner at Scarswood, and the French cookery at Morecambe, combined with a leaden sky, and a miserable December day. If the internal long day were ended, and the hour come, I should feel all right, I know.'

His host watched him curiously from the window, wandering about in a storm like an unquiet spirit. Bridegrooms may be restless as a rule on a happy day, but no such restlessness as this.

'There's something on that fellow's mind,' the young Sussex squire thought. 'He has the look to day of a man who is afraid, and I don't think he is a coward as a rule. I've thought from the first this marriage would be a dencedly bad job, and it's no end of a pity. She's such a trump of a girl—little Kathie—no nonsense about her you know; rides to hounds like a born Nimrodess, dances like a fairy, plucky and thoroughbred from top to toe. And she's going to throw herself away on this duffer, for no reason under heaven but that he's got a good looking face. Hang it all! Why did I ever fetch him down to Morecambe, or why need Katherine Dangerfield be such a little fool? Who's to tell us the fellow hasn't a wife already out in New Orleans?'

Sometime in the afternoon the bridegroom elect flung himself on his bed and fell heavily asleep. He did not dream this time; he slept—for hours—the beneficial effect of French Brandy, no doubt. The short dark day had faded entirely out—the candles were lit and Squire Talbot's man stood over him adjuring him to rise.

'Beg parding, sir, for disturbing you, but master's horders, sir, and it's 'alf after six, Mr. Dantree, sir, and time, master says to get up and dress. And master's horders, sir, is, that I'm to hassist you.'

Mr Dantree leaped from the bed. Half past six, and time to dress no more endless hours, to think and fidget—that was a comfort, at least.

'How's the weather, now, Lewis?' he asked. 'Storm held up any?'

'No—I see it has not—rather worse, if anything. Where's the squire?'

'In his hapartment, sir—dressing, sir. Permit me to do that, Mr. Dantree, sir—if you please dinner's to be arf an hour later than husual, sir, on this occasion—you'll have just time to dress and no more.'

Lewis was an adept in his business. At half-past seven Mr. Dantree descended to dinner in full evening suit—white waist-coat, diamond studs, dress coat, shiny boots—robed for the sacrifice!

He and the squire dined tete-a-tete. Neither ate much—both were nervous and silent.

'What the deuce ever made me bring the fellow?' the squire kept thinking, moodily, casting gloomy glances athwart the tall epergue of flowers between them. And 'Will anything happen, after all?' the bride groom kept saying over and over; 'will the heiress of Scarswood be my wife to-morrow morning, or will something prevent it at the eleventh hour, and expose me? It would be just my usual infernal luck.'

He went back to his room after dinner. They had not lingered, and it was still only eight o'clock. A quarter before ten would be earley enough to arrive at Scarswood, and run the gauntlet of threescore curious eyes. 'I wish it were over,' he exclaimed, aloud, almost savagely. 'I wouldn't undergo such an ordeal again for all the heiresses in Great Britain.'

'It is a nervous business,' a voice in the doorway responded; 'but take courage. There's many a slip, you know, and though it wants but two hours to the time, you may escape the matrimonial noose, after all'

Gaston Dantree swung round with an oath. There, in the doorway, stood Peter Dangerfield.

'I beg your pardon, Mr. Dantree,' the lawyer said, glibly, coming in, and shutting the door. 'You don't look best pleased to see me, but that is not to be wondered at.'

'Where the devil did you spring from?' Mr. Dantree, demand, angrily.

'I sprang from nowhere—I've given up gymnastics. I drove over from Castleford, in the rain, on important business—important business to you. A quarter past eight, all dressed for the ceremony. That gives us an hour and three-quarters—plenty of time for what I want you to do.'

'What—you—want—me—to—do? Mr. Dangerfield, I confess I am at a loss to—'

'To understand me—exactly—quite natural that you should, and all that. I'll explain. Circumstances have come to light concerning Sir John Dangerfield and—well, and the young lady you are going to marry. As a friend of yours, Mr. Dantree, I consider it would be a shameful deception to let the marriage go on while you are in ignorance of those circumstances. Sir, you have been grossly deceived—we have all been, and—but it's impossible for me to explain. Thereby hangs a tale. The person who told me is waiting at Castleford to tell you. I drove here at once—my trap is waiting outside now. I made my way to your room unannounced. I know the house, and I want you to put on your hat and great-coat, and come with me to Castleford at once.'

Gaston Dantree stood very pale, listening to this lengthy and rapid harangue. His presentiments were all true then—something was going to occur. At the last hour, the glittering prize for which he had fought and won was to be snatched from him. His lips were set hard, and there was a dull red glow not good to see about his black eyes. But he kept his temper—under all circumstances, it was the rule of his life to keep that.

Mr. Dangerfield,' he said, 'will you be so good as to open the mysteries a little? Your speech sounds melodramatic—and I don't care for melodrama off the boards. Why am I to go to Castleford? What are the circumstances? Whom am I to meet?—and how have we all been deceived? Do you wish to insinuate anything against Miss Dangerfield?'

'Not a word—not a syllable. She is blameless and I don't wish to stop your marriage—Heaven forbid! No one will wish you joy two hours hence, when the ceremony is over, more sincerily than I.'

Gaston Dantree looked at him, staggered a little. The marriage was not to be stopped, then. He drew a long itense breath of relief.

'This is all very strange. I wish you would explain. I'll go with you to Castleford—it will kill the intervening time as well as anything else, but, I'd rather not go in the dark.'

'You must. Take my word for it Dantree it is necessary. It is impossible for me to tell you—I am bound by oath. Come with me—come? I swear you shall be at Scarswood by ten o'clock.'

For a moment Dantree stood irresolute. Then curiosity overcame every other feeling. He seized his hat and coat with a slight laugh.

'Be it so, then. Lead on, as they say in novels, I follow—and, my good fellow, drive like the very duce.'

He ran lightly down stairs—Peter Dangerfield followed. There was a flush on the lawyer's sallow parchment cheeks, a fire in his dim, near sighted eyes, all unusual there. They met no one. The squire was in his 'hapartment,' the servants were busy. The gig lamps of Mr. Dangerfield's trap loomed like to fiery eyes in the stormy blackness. Dantree leaped in. Dangerfield followed, snatched up the reins, and sped away like the wind.

It was a dead, silent drive. It was all Peter Dangerfield could do to hold the reins and make his way through the darkness of night and storm. Gaston Dantree sat with folded arms waiting. What was he to hear? where was he going?—whom was he to see? A strange adventure this, surely, on a man's wedding night.

The lights of Castleford gleamed through the sleet, the dull commending of the sea on the coast came to them above the shrieks of the wind. In five minutes they had driven up before an inn; the two men sprang out, a hostler took charge of the conveyance, and Peter Dangerfield, with brief 'This way, Dantree,' sprang swiftly up the stairs, and rapped at the door on the first landing.

It was opened instantly, and Gaston Dantree saw—Mrs. Vavasor.

She was magnificently dressed tonight. A rich robe of purple silk en traine, swept behind her—diamonds flashed on neck and fingers, and white perfumy roses nestled in the glossy masses of satin black hair. The rouge bloomed its brightest, the enamel glittered with alabaster dazzle, the almond eyes were longer, brighter, blacker than ever; and that peculiar smile on her squirrel shaped mouth was never so radient before.

'You did not expect to see me, Mr. Dantree, did you? You didn't know I have been in Castleford a whole week And I've come to the wedding all the way from Paris. I crossed the channel at the risk of expiring in the agonies of sea-sickness, I braved your beastly British climate, I buried myself alive a whole week here, without a soul to speak to—all—to be present at Katherine Dangerfield's wedding, if—that wedding ever takes place.'

Mr. Dantree looked at his watch, outwardly, at least, perfectly cool.

'It will be accomplished fact in one hour, madame. And there's a good old adage about it's being well to wait until you are asked—wouldn't it have been better if you had remembered it? Your affection for Miss Dangerfield does credit to your head and heart, but I fear it is unreciprocated. She loves you as old nick loves Holy water.'

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

CAUSE AND EFFECT.—The main cause of nervousness is indigestion, and that is caused by weakness of the stomach. No one can have sound nerves and good health without using Hop Bitters to strengthen the stomach, purify the blood, and keep the liver and kidneys active, to carry off all the poisonous and waste matter of the system.—Advance.

CANADA IN ENGLAND.

THE "TIMES" ON EMIGRATION TO CANADA.

A THOROUGHLY ENGLISH COLONY.

An Arrangement Between the T., G., & B. R. R. and Ontario and Quebec R.

The Times in an editorial on the meeting of the Women's Emigration Society, yesterday says:—"Canada is the goal towards which the society would point. If any colony would attract an independant supply of women emigrants that Colony is British North America. The voyage is the shortest and least expensive. The emigrant is not cut off irrevocably from the comforts of the mother country, as civilisation is as widely diffused there as in any Colony. The climate is healthy and above all, the Colony is thoroughly English. It is permeated and perforated in all directions with English society, and types of English life and English thoughts. If these advantages fail to attract the emigration of women, either the women are unaware of the premium the sex commands across the Atlantic, or they do not know the facilities offered for leaving the overcrowded Mother Country"

RAILWAY MATTERS.

The directors of the Toronto, Grey, and Bruce Railway announce an arrangement with the Ontario and Quebec Railway Company by which the latter pay the four per cent. (80 years) bonds of the former. Sufficient cash to pay dividends to December, 1888, will be placed with the trustees in London.

The St. Lawerence and Ottawa coupons will not de paid at maturity today, owing to the smallness of the net reciepts for 1881.

A LADY'S WISH.—"Oh, how I do wish my skin was as clear and soft as yours," said a lady to her friend. 'You, can easily make it so,' answered the friend. "How?" inquired the first lady. "By using Hop Bitters, that makes pure rich blood and blooming health. It did it for me, as you observed."—Cairo Bulletin.

—"Brothers," said president Taylor, in his last annual speech to the Mormon convention, "we don't exactly know the Temple fund stands. There is no need of keeping any account. There is the building going up right before your eyes, you can see it all for yourselves. We will now sing the 336th hymn.' This was regarded as rather cool, considering that the fund has already absorbed several millions and charges of stealing in connection with it have been made.

Moved by the Deputy Reeve, seconded by Mr. Norton, that the Council adjourn sine die.

CARSON PRICE, Clerk.

Henry Clay, a grandson of the famous bearer of that name, went to Greenland a year or so ago, with the purpose of joining the Howgate expedition there. Like its patron sinner, the expedition was a failure, and Mr. Clay was left to look for the North Pole on his own hook. He did so, travelled a good deal by dog team, and at last concluded to let the Pole jog along as it has been doing for centuries. Mr. Clay has just reached his home in Kentucky.

INGENIOUS INVENTION.

Some shrewd Yankee has invented a key that will wind any watch; it is a neat attachment to a charm, and it is said to work like a charm. So does the grand Key to Health—Burdock Blood Bitters, the greatest discovery of the age. It unlocks all the secretions, and cleanse and invigorates the entire system. Sample bottles, 10 cents; large size, $1.00 of all medicine dealers.

The New York Sun declares that bull fat butter and hog fat cheese, sold not for what they are, but as dairy products, are fast undermining the American export trade in these products. The revelation made by the last two national dairy conventions, as to the extent of this trade were astounding; but oleomargarine and lard cheese has struck a blow at this enormous and growing source of revenue. About 50,000,000 pounds less of butter and cheese, it is thought, will have been exported this year than last instead of the continued increase as expected.

The Christ Church Sunday School entertainment on Wednesday evening was a grand success. Notwithstanding the unfavorable state of the weather and bad condition of the roads, the Hall was filled to its utmost capacity. Judging from the frequent and hearty applause, the entertainment was enjoyed immensely. A very pleasing incident of the evening's enjoyment was the presentation to the Rev. Mr. Ward, the Incumbent, of a handsome easy chair, and Miss Fanny Ford, organist, with a beautiful gold watch. Want of space prevents us from giving the addresses this week, but they will appear in our next issue.

A concert in aid of the St. Mary's Church Building Fund, was given at Maxwell on Monday night. The evening was an exceptionally fine one, and the audience was exceedingly good. The Programme was partly sustained by the amateur talent of the place, and partly by the Christ Church Choir from Markdale, with Mr. Wm. McDougal who was in his usual happy humour, and delighted the Maxwellians immensely. Mr. J. Cæsar and Miss Hollinghead's comic duets were well received, as, indeed, was the whole programme, everybody being thoroughly well satisfied with the evening's entertainment, which in all probability is the best that has been given in Maxwell for a long time past. The proceeds amounted to $65.

The Annual Tea-Meeting of the Methodist Church, Markdale, took place on Monday evening, and was a decided success. The provision made by the ladies in the dining apartment was of the very best quality, and in great abundance. The following speakers gave appropriate addresses, viz., Reverend Messrs. Edmonds, of Priceville; Grandy, of Eugenia; and Dr. Christoe, County Warden; and M. Richardson, of Flesherton, while the choir discoursed choice music. A very pleasant, and no doubt, profitable evening was spent. Proceeds $77.00, which goes towards paying off the debt on the Parsonage.

The Soiree held in the new Orange Hall, Kell's corner, came off on Thursday, the 22nd inst., as announced by Bills, and, notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather, and the fearful state of the roads, was a complete success. The eatables, which were provided gratuitously by the ladies, were all of the first quality, (thanks to the ladies). The speaking was above the ordinary standard. Rev. Mr. Fisher, spoke on beauties of nature; Rev. Mr. Stevenson, on the blessedness of single life; and Rev. Mr. Wilson, on the Orange Question, followed by an able speech by T. S. Sproule, M. P., on the past, present and future of our fair Dominion, the best of order prevailed throughout. The choir discourced choice selections of music, which were highly appreciated. This Lodge has now a comfortable Hall, and is in good financial circumstances Proceeds of Soiree, $85.

NEWS NOTES.

Small pox is reported to be frightfully on the increase in Chicago.

Scarlet fever is making sad havoc in Liverpool, England. It is of a most malignant type.

The Oddfellow's Hall, Picton, Ont., was destroyed by fire on Christmas night.

The Irishmen of Montreal, not satisfied with the Evening Post, are about starting another paper to be called the Truth.

The Emperor of Austria has announced that he intends to erect at his own expense a memorial chapel on the site of the Ring theatre, in which a requiem mass will be annually celebrated for the victims of the fire.

The Dominion Parliament meets on the 9th of February.

The London Daily News, in commenting upon the Guitteau trial, says the whole court seems to exist for the convenience and self-glorification of the prisoner, and characterizes the proceedings as a mad burlesque.

BUNESSAN.

A Soiree was held in Bunessan Presbyterian Church, on the evening of Tuesday 20th inst., for the purpose of defraying some little debt on the Church, on account of late repairs. After tea and other good things were disposed of, Mr. Meldrum, Station Master was unanimously called to the chair. The chairman referred to the present being the third time in succession he had occupied this position and the gratification it gave him to observe the steady progress of the church in this locality. Mr. Geo. Binnie was called on and gave an account of financial matters, from which it was seen that the proceeds of the evening paid everything due, and left some ten dollars to assist in painting, bricking, or otherwise improving the building. Rev. Mr. Edmond, Priceville, gave an interesting address on dreams, defining the difference, and also shewing the connection between sleeping and waking dreams. Mr. J. H. Hunter, M. P. P., spoke on subject of youthful training. In his opening remarks he referred to the tired condition he was in after handling the large quantity of grain that had come to Durham that day, and treated the audience to a florid description of the territory from which the flourishing grain market of Durham was supplied, making special reference to the teams coming to Durham all the way from the confines of Flesherton and Markdale. Mr. R. Robertson, of Priceville, spoke on union, and apologized for a severe cold he had, which he humorously said only confirmed bachelors ought to be afflicted with. He referred to the fact that for some years in his youth he had been almost continuously hoarse from cold, and on recovering his voice he remembered how he felt like running about the country shouting for very joy to hear the sound of his own voice again. From this experience he felt he could to some extent sympathise with Mr. Hunter and other Durhamites and even look upon them with a sort of pardoning pity in their anxiety to let the world know that Durham had at any [illegible] meridian after being frozen up in the arctic ocean for a period of ten years, more or less. So far as Flesherton Station was concerned they might keep themselves easy. They were old hands there and knew what they were about and were getting all the grain they wished for and it only required a little time to bring all such matters to their natural level. After a very interesting address from Rev. Mr. McLeod this very enjoyable affair closed with the usual votes of thanks.

DUNDALK.

From the Herald.

There were a large number of candidates nominated for the Proton council, and several speeches were delivered and some withdrawals made, which resulted in the final nomination, of the following candidates Peter McGregor and Joseph McArdle for Reeve, John Abbott and John Agnew for Dept. Reeve, James Robinson, Robert Black, Joseph Buckley, George Johnston D. R. McArthur for council. We expect a lively time from now to the day of election, we make no choice, as we fully believe that the ratepayers fully know their privilage and will make a good selection on the day of the election by casting their vote for the best man.

The Presbyterian Sabbath School Anniversary held on Monday evening, Christmas, was a success in every way. The chair was occupied by Henry Grahame, Esq, Supt. of the Sunday School. Addresses were given by Mr. Thomas Davidson, of Knox College. Toronto, Mr. David Stewart, Shrigley, and also pastor of the congregation. Readings by Mr. James Deans and Mr. Hewetson which were well received, as the reading of these gentlemen are always appreciated. Recitations by Mr. John Strachan and J. J. Crombie, were also well received. Mr. Jno. Strachan Rockwood sang the "Land o' the Leal," which called for an encore "Bonnie Doon." The choir rendered excellent music during the evening. The usual votes of thanks were moved and carried. All parties seemed to enjoy themselves.

The Canada Methodist Sunday School had one of the most successful entertainments that has ever been held in this section of the country, the large and commodious church was crowded to the door, the children of the school recited some very excellent pieces, and the singing by the school under the management of Mr. and Miss Rundle, were excellent. An excellent address was delivered by the Rev. Mr. Philp of Flesherton, to the parents and children of the school and last but not least Santa Clause arrived on the platform to announce the unloading and distribution of the gifts and presents, of the Christmas ship. We might here say that this ship which was on exhibition, loaded with a large assortment of gifts to firiends and presnts to all the children of the school. Such a merry time we have not enjoyed for a long time. Cash proceeds $57.

ADDRESS AND PRESENTATION.

On the evening of Friday, 23rd inst., a number of the pupils of Miss Ross' department met at her boarding rooms, and after spending some time in pleasant amusement, made the following address and presentation, to which Miss Ross replied in feeling and appropriate terms:—

To Miss Ross, Teacher of the 2nd department Markdale Public School.

DEAR TEACHER,—We the pupils now before you have assembled for the purpose of expressing our sincere regard for you ere you leave us. To present you with an address would be to us a pleasant exercise, were we not sensible of our inability to express in words the fond relation existing between teacher and scholars. For the last two years you have laboured earnestly and faithfully in our behalf, ever seeking to benefit us both morally and intellectually, while your kind and genial manner has endeared you to us all. And now we ask you to accept this Writing Desk as a token of our friendship and esteem toward you as our teacher. In parting with you we trust that the rich blessing of Heaven may ever rest upon you, and that you may be long spared to labor successfully wherever in the Providence of God your lot may be cast, and that this desk may often bring to mind those you leave in Markdale.

Signed on behalf of School,

JOHNSTON WILSON,
WILLIAM DUNDAS.

The following Address was presented to Miss Annie Rorke, accompanied with a very handsome Bible by the pupils of her class, in the C. Methodist Sunday School, on Friday last:

DEAR TEACHER,—We the Scholars of your Sunday School class, in grateful remembrance of the interest you have manifested in our behalf, ever since you became our teacher, in endeavoring to advance the moral and religious training and Scriptural knowledge; and also for the worthy example you have given us to emulate in your consistent and well regulated daily life, and womanly virtues, desire to present you with this small token of our respect and esteem, and as a souveuir to remind you of the pleasant and grateful feeling existing between your class and you on the Xmas of 1881.

May your useful and profitable life long be spared to continue the good work you have now in hand,—the training of the youth. As in the past may you also in the future continue to emulate the worthy Christian examples to be found within the precints of this Holy Book; may you accept it as your guide through life, and may its teaching prepare you for the enjoyment of the great hereafter, and finally, when this our earthly work is done may we all meet on that bright shore, and as an unbroken class to sing the song of redeeming love for ever and ever.

One of the English secularist papers has a picture of Jacob's Dream, the angels being dressed in tights and spangles like acrobats, and the Deity being represented as an old man smoking a long pipe at the top of the ladder. The London Echo indignantly asks how can a party expect to win respect or even consideration, when its organs indulge in such wanton outrages on the religious feelings of their fellow citizens.

MEAFORD ROAD.

From our Correspondent.

The school was closed in this section for the present year by a social time held by the teacher, scholars, and some of the parents were present. The children gave the teacher a number of presents, and were treated to candies and fruit in return by the teacher. All are sorry at parting with our present teacher.

SCHOOL MEETING.—The school meeting was held on Wednesday, 28th inst. The usual business of such meetings was gone through with in a quiet manner. Mr. John [illegible] the trustee elect.

A unanimous vote of thanks of the meeting was tendered to the retiring teacher, Mr. J. C. Buchanan, for the able and efficient manner in which he had conducted the school during the time he has been teacher in this section.

There is not much excitement here over the election on Monday next. The majority seem to express themselves satisfied with the old Councillor.

Wet weather again and lots of mud.

Poor lookout for New Year's sleigh rides.

PRICEVILLE.

From a Correspondent.

Weather rather Venorable. The fair to-day was but poorly attended. The cattle were few, but good. H. G. A. has but few sympathizers in this place, as the A. O. U. W. is becoming very popular. The arguments of A. G. H.,—Oh! I beg pardon,—H. G. A., sound very much like those of an insurance agent. Nothing but a round of Entertainments for a couple of weeks now, on Friday a grand Musicale in the new school, followed by a hop; then Sunday School Anniversaries, Soirees, Socials, &c.

The Advance was in town to-day, his bland smile is irresistable.

"There is a chiel amang us takin' notes."

The new school has been opened to-day. Pupils and teachers seem to enjoy the change.

Our friend Tom of the mail line has secured the contract of carrying the mail from Durham to Flesherton, himself. Success Tom!

Prof. Ben. Carber is at present in town. He is expecting a pension due for service in the American Revolution.

Fred's latest joke was sending a number of musical cats down the river on a raft lighted with torches.

At a meeting of the A. O. U. W. last night the following officers were elected:— A. Webster, P. M. W.; N. B. Grier, M. W.; J. M. Arthur, Foreman; Rev. Edmonds, Overseer; C. C. James, Recorder; J. Watson, Financier; Dr. Bonnett, R.; John Irwin, Guide; Jos. Aussem, I. W.; Thos. Ferguson, O. W.

Bro. C. C. James has been appointed Repre. Gr. Lodge.

Priceville, Dec. 19th.

Correspondence.

NOTICE.—We wish it distinctly understood that we do not hold ourselves responsible for the opinions expressed by our correspondents.

MR. EDITOR,—Your Eugenia correspondent comes in for a share of abuse through the medium of the Flesherton sheet, but this is no uncommon thing, as the most respectable and reliable men in the Village are denounced as perjurers, &c.; then how could your correspondent expect to escape. If he were to take the same weapons in hand, and insinuate that he always suspected who stole the cash box; or he knew that it was Billy —— who stole the horse. But enough: "answer not a fool according to his folly," and as you, Mr. Editor, do not wish to have your respectability or the columns of your esteemed journal questioned by the insertion of such trash, knowing that it neither increases the circulation or usefulness of any journal, we will take no further notice of them, as they fall on us like rain on a duck's back, and will only make one remark, that the writer should ask the editor to kindly correct bad spelling, for instance prefitable erretible. He calls us an ignoramus. Oh! We hold the view, without malice, that the acts of public servants are open to criticism at any time.

Some time since we were wondering where all the Auditor's Reports went to, and the very obliging Clerk of Artemesia invited us, per Advance, to call at, at his Office, and he would gratify our craving after information—how condescending. Your correspondent may have an unfortunate habit of writing factsbetter than composition, but it is easier, and this is what is the ailment against your irrepressible correspondent, who intends scribbling, aye, as long as he is able to shake a pen, and so long as you think it worthy a place in your valuable Journal, we were born independent, altho' bareheaded at the time.

The reason for holding the Conservative convention on the 8th instead of on the 9th is a very questionable matter. Post cards dated at Clarksburg, Nov. 30th, and posted at Markdale on Dec. 6th, to members, were received in time to be too late, we had trouble plenty already by unseemly haste in matters of this kind, and the age when the people could be gulled, is numbered with the past, the majority cannot be expected to submit to the few who disregard constitutional rules.

YOUR IRREPRESSIBLE CORRESPONDENT.

P. S.—We have just heard that Alex. Brownlee better known as Sandy Brownlee of the Township of Osprey, formerly of Artemesia while out hunting with a party of Gentlemen, as guide, by some accident one of the gentlemen shot him in the arm causing amputation to be necessary. The gentleman immediately mailed $100 to Mrs. Brownlee with an assurance that he would be well provided for in future.

CLIPPINGS FROM OUR LOCAL EXCHANGES.

Some Pony.—Mr. Thos. Anderson of the Township of Holland, brought into market a hog weighing 844 lbs., which was purchased by Mr. John Chisholm for the sum of $60.—O. S. Advertiser.

This morning between seven and eight o'clock, one of the railway section men discovered the body of a man lying on the track about a mile and a half north of this village. He had evidently been run over by [illegible] last [illegible] severed from his body, and [illegible] arms mangled. The body was brought to the station, and on examination it was indentified as that of a shoemaker named Henry King, well known by many people here. How the deceased came to be on the track at the time of the accident is not yet known, but it is probable that at the inquest, which will be held by Dr. Norton, some light may be thrown on the subject. The unfortunate man had the reputation of being sober and industrious, and had a farm in Mulmur. On his person was found about $16 in money and some sort of an agreement relating to his farm. He had been working here about two months ago, for Mr. Robt McNally, but it was not known where he had been since.—Shelburne Free Press.

CITY VS. LOCAL WEEKLIES.—Some of the city papers having reduced the price of their weekly editions, in common with other publishers of local journals we are frequently asked by those who are not conversant with the circumstances why we do not also reduce our subscription price. The simple reason is that no publisher of a local weekly the size of the Times can publish it less than $1.50 and make it pay. In offices like the Mail and Globe, where they publish daily papers, they use the same type for the weekly, and having no type setting (the most expensive item in connection with a paper) to pay for, they can put out their weeklies at a mere cost of the paper and press-work. Local papers, which have their type setting to pay for, cannot pretend to compete in price with the city weeklies, but they can do better, they can give the people the news respecting home affairs which is far more interesting and important to them. The people of the country will make a great mistake if they weaken their local journals by taking city weeklies instead because they get them cheaper, while they do not [illegible] the news they want. Local papers are the champions and supporters of the interests of their respective sections, and as such have a claim to the support of the people aside from their intrinsic value, which is always greater than the price asked. If the people allow their local papers to be weakened, where will be their interests when they come in conflict with those of the cities in railway and other matters? They will have shorn their own advocates of influence, and they may depend upon it that the city papers will go against them as they have done in the past. We don't intend to try to compete in price with the city prices with the city weeklies, but we intend, as in the past, to give our readers a live local journal, sticking up for the interests of this section of country, of far more value to the people of the county than any city weekly, and we have no fear but we will be supported as we have always been.—O. S. Times.

SAD ACCIDENT.

Tuesday last which was one of the busiest days ever witnessed in this Town, was closed in gloom and sorrow, caused by an accident which brought death and mourning in so brief a period to a happy family. Mr. Charles Smith, of Bentinck, was driving along Lambton Street towards home with a light democrat waggon, containing his mother. Mrs Robert Smith, his wife and daughter, and when on the bridge met Mr. D. McCrie, and in striving to pass each other the horses became restive, and Mr. Smith's horses, instead of going forward, when urged to do so, backed, and almost in an instant they went backward over the south-east corner of the bridge. Mr. and Mrs. Smith jumped out, and the little girl was caught and taken out, and the old lady was caught by Mr Hobson as she fell into the water, the waggon righted, and the things taken out of the water, all in a few moments. Mrs. Smith was helped to Mr. J. H. Brown's, but in about fifteen minutes after she breathed her last, although she received no injury except the fright so far as is known. The only thing broken about the waggon was a whipple tree. Mr. Smith received a blow which broke one of his ribs, but is able to be around. There were a number of people around at the time who very promptly assisted in setting things right as far as possible, but it was all done so quickly that there was no time for a crowd to collect. To say that the bereaved family have the sympathy of the community in their sad affliction scarcely conveys the idea of the feeling that exists. Mrs. Smith had been living in Bentinck about twenty-four years, was a native of Leeds, England, and was very highly esteemed by all who knew her. The bridge itself was regarded as dangerous, and the rapidly increasing traffic over it is daily making it more so, and we have no doubt it will at once be made more secure, or a new bridge built at once, as both the street and bridge are too narrow.—Grey Review.

AT A LOSS FOR WORDS.

The pleasure which I hereby attempt to express cannot be half conveyed by words. Physicians of very high character and notoriety have heretofore declared my rheumatism to be incurable. Specifics, almost numberless, have failed to cure or even alleviate the intensity of the pain, which has frequently confined me to my room for three months at a time. One week ago I was seized with an attack of acute rheumatism of the knee. In a few hours the entire knee joint became swollen to enormous proportions, and walking rendered impossible. Nothing remained for me, and I intended to resign myself as best I might to another month's confinement to my room and bed, whilst suffering untold agonies. By chance I learned of the wonderful curative properties of St. Jacob's Oil. I clutched it as a straw, and in a few hours was entirely free from pain in knee, arm and shoulder. As before stated, I cannot find words to convey my praise and gratitude to the discoverers of this king of rheumatism.

(FROM BRAZIL.)

The New Compound, its wonderful affinity to the Digestive Apparatus and the Liver, increasing the dissolving juices, relieving almost instantly the dreadful results of Dyspepsia, Indigestion, and the TORPID LIVER, makes Zopesa an every day necessity in every house.

It acts gently and speedily in Billiousness, Costiveness, Headache, Sick Headache, Distress after Eating, Wind on the Stomach, Heartburn, Pains in the Side and Back, Want of Appetite. Want of Energy, Low Spirits, Foul Stomach. It invigorates the Liver, carries off all surplus bile, regulates the Bowels, and gives tone to the whole system.

Cut this out and take it to your Druggist and get a 10 cent Sample, or a large bottle for 75 cents, and tell your neighbor about it.

A CURE FOR CROUP.

Apply flannel saturated with Hagyard's Yellow Oil and administer the Oil internally on a little sugar as directed on the bottle. Yellow Oil cures Rheumatism, Burns, Scalds, Chilblains, Lameness, and all flesh wounds. All dealers supply it, price 25 cents.

OUR TABLE.

We have recieved life of Garfield published by the World publishing Company of Guelph, it is a piece of work that no printing house in Canada need be ashamed of.

We have recieved the second number of the Rural Canadian. It is fully up to what was promised in the first number, and can be had, in connection with the STANDARD or HERALD for 60c per annum.

The Farmers Advocate for December has been recieved. It is, without doubt the best Agricultural paper published in the Dominion, we will furnish it to any address, post paid for $1.

OUR LITTLE ONES.—This spicey magazine for children is to hand. We cannot speak too highly of this work, and would recommend all who haveany love for their little ones to subscribe for it. Price $1.50, subscriptions recieved at this office.

Eastern butchers must look out for sharp competition during the coming winter, as beef and pork will be sent from the West in such quantities and prepared for retail sale as will enable grocers and provision dealers to keep it on hand and sell the choicest cuts for eight and ten cents a pound. Sirloin steak and roast, it is asserted, can be sent from Illinois slaughter houses and sold for eight cents a pound —that is, furnished to retail merchants at rates which will enable them to sell at these prices.

HAGYARD'S PECTORAL BALSAM.

Cures coughs, colds, asthma, croup, whooping cough, sore throat, bronchitis and all lung complaints that lead to consumption. Price 25 cents.

Dissolution of Partnership.

NOTICE is hereby given, that the Co-partnership formerly subsisting between the undersigned as Tanners, in Markdale, under the style or firm of Wilson & Bryden, was dissolved by mutual consent on the 9th day of December, 1881; and that the said business will in future be carried on by George Wilson, who will receive and pay all the debts of the late firm.

Dated this 9th day of December A.D., 1881.

To the Electors of Glenelg.

GENTLEMEN,—Having been requested by a large number of the Ratepayers of the Township of Glenelg, to run for the office of Councilman for the Township, I have decided to do so. Last year I was nominated, but owing to sickness in my family, was unable to give any attention whatever to the election, but notwithstanding this I received a very large number of votes, almost sufficient to elect me as Councillor. If elected to represent the Township at the Council Board, I shall strive to do what I sincerely believe to be for the best interests of the Township as a Councillor, if elected.

I remain your obedient servant,

JOHN BLACK.

MANHOOD
HOW LOST, NOW RESTORED.

WE have recently published a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical and nervous Debility, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage etc., resulting from excesses.

☞Price, in a sealed envelope, only 6 cts., or two postage stamps.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicines or the use of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

☞This Lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

A WONDERFUL WOMAN.

CHAPTER XII. Continued.

'Nevertheless, I shall go to her wedding; I told her so once, and I mean to keep my word, if—as I said before—that wedding ever takes place.'

'Will you be kind enough to explain,'

He was quite white, and braced to meet the worst. He looked her steadily between the eyes. She stood and returned the gaze smiling, silent, and with a devil in either glittering eye. For Peter Dangerfield stood aloof and listened.

'What a fortunate fellow you are, Gaston Dantree,' Mrs. Vavasor said, after that short pause. 'You are the very hansomest man, I think, I ever saw; you are the best singer off theopera stage I ever heard; your manners are perfect in their insolent ease: you are seven-and-twenty, a charming age—and you possess what so seldom goes with beauty, unhappily—brains. The world is your oyster, you open it cleverely; you are a penniless Yankee adventurer, and a baronet's daughter, and the heiress of eight thousand a year, is waiting at Scarsford to marry you tonight. Under what fortunate combination of the planets were you born, I wonder. You don't love this young lady you are going to marry; but love is an exploded idea—the stock in trade of poets and novelists. People with eight thousand a year can dispense with love; but where the bride and groom are both penniless—oh, well! that's another matter.'

'Mrs. Vavasor, it is after nine o'clock. Did you send for me to listen to a homily? If so, having heard it allow me to take my departure.'

'Don't get in a hurry Mr. Dantree, there's no occasion. Ten o'clock will come, but I don't believe we'll have a wedding to night, after all.'

'You have said that three times!'—Gaston Dantree's eyes were growing stern, and his mouth was set in one thin hard line—'the same thing repeated too often grows a bore.' Be kind enough, if you mean anything, to tell me what you mean.'

'I will! I mean this, my handsome Louisianian—that your bride-elect is no more a baronet's daughter—no more Sir John Dangerfield's heiress—than I am?'

CHAPTER XIII.

MRS' VAVASOR'S STORY.

It was out, and Gaston Dantree stood for a moment stunned, looking at the evil, smiling face of the speaker and absolutely unable to reply. Then.

'I don't delieve it,' he said slowly.

Mrs. Vavasor laughed aloud:

'You mean you don't want to believe it. It's not pleasant for a successful adventurer, Oh, don't be offended, it's only the name common place people give other people cleverer than themselves. It's not pleasant, I say, when the golden chalice of fortune is at our lips to see a ruthless hand spill that wine of life at our feet. It isn't pleasant for a handsome dark eyed Adonis, with the face of a god and the purse of a—pauper, to find the reputed daughter and heiress of a wealthy baronet, whom he is going to marry, as great a pauper as himself greater, indeed, for she lacks the good looks that may yet make your fortune Mr. Dantree. It isn't pleasant, but it is perfectly true. Sir John Dangerfield has imposed upon you—upon his rightful heir here, Mr. Dangerfield upon society—passing off a girl whose parentage he is in most absolute ignorance, as his daughter. Don't fly into a passion, Mr. Dantree, as I see you are inclined to do—at least not with me. I'm not afraid of you, and I'm not to blame. If you don't believe me, but I see you do, come with me to Scarswood, Mr. Dangerfiedl and I are bound for the weddind—and be convinced from Sir John's own lips My shawl, if you please, Mr. Dangerfield Sir Peter that is to be.'

He took the rich Parisian wrap and folded it gallantly around her slim shoulders.

Gaston Dantree still stood confounded—a blank feeling of rage and fury, and despair choking the passionate words he would have said. She look at him, and laughed again.

'Mon Dieu! he is like an incarnate thunder-cloud—black and furious as a Levantine pirate, or an Alpinebrigand Cheer up, mon ami, we don't take your bride from you—onlyher fortune and what are a few thousand a year, more or less, to such a devoted lover as you! And she would go with you to beggary. It makes a hardened woman of the world, like myself, absolutely young again to see such gushing and beautiful devotion. I rather thought romance had gone out of fashion in this year of grace, and that it was only at Covent Garden we heardof 'two souls but with a single thought—two hearts that beat as one.' But I have found out my mistake, and think better of the world since I have known you. My bonnet, Mr, Dangerfield—thanks. Now, then, missieure—forward! march! I am entirely at your service.

She took Peter Dangerfield's arm, looking forward over his shoulder at the black, marble figure of the bridegroom, like the smiling vixen she was.

'Come, Gaston, mon brave,' she said, 'though you lose an heiress, you need not lose a bride. We will be but a few minutes late, after all. Come—away.'

She ran lightly down the stairs, humming with the face of malicious delight, 'haste to the wedding.'

The hour for which she had hungered and thirsted for years and years had come—the hour of her vengeance 'Revenge is sweet—particularly to a woman,' singeth my lord Byron, and he had hit truth as well as poetry when he said it. A man sometimes spares his enemy—a woman will forget a man seven times seven, but one woman will spare another woman—never!

Gaston Dantree followed. His lips were set in an expression no one beheld him this night had ever seen before; his dark eyes lurid with rage, disappointment, and fury, his dusky face savage and set. All his presentiments were fulfilled—more than fulfilled. At the worst he had not dreamed of anything half so bad as this. He believed what he had heard—there was that in Mrs. Vavasors face and voice, with all their malice, that showed she spoke the truth. For the second time he had been foiled—in the very hour of his triumph. A demoniacal rage filled him—against the woman, against the baronet, against Katherine, against himself.

'What a dolt—what an ass I have been!' he muttered inaudibly, grinding his teeth; 'what a laughing stock I shall be! But by Heaven! if I am to loose a fortune, Katherine Dangerfield shall lose a husband. It's one thing to risk New gate for an heiress but I'll see all the portionless, adopted daughters this side of the infernal regions at the bottom of the bottomless pit, before I'll risk it for one of them!'

And then Mr. Dantree folded his arms in sullen silence, and let things take their course. He knew the worst—he had put his fate to the test, and lost it all. Nothing remained but to see the play played out, to pack his trunk, and at once seek fresh fields and pastures new.

The night was black as Erebus; the cold, cutting sleet still beat, the wind still blew. The street lamps flared and flickered in the soughs of wind—the shops of the town were shut—lights twinkled pleasently behind closed blinds. Mrs. Vavasor sat behind him muffled in her wraps—a demoniacal desire to pitch her headlong out of the trap was strong upon Mr. Dantree.

'Little devil!' he thought, looking at her savagely under cover of the darkness. 'She knew all along and waited for this melodramatic climax. It's your turn now, Mrs. Vavasor; when the wheel revolves and mine comes, I'll remember this dark night's work!'.

Not a word was spoken until the lights of Scarswood came in sight. Gaston Dantree's heart was full of passionate bitterness, as the huge gate lamps hove in view. And to-morrow all this night have been his.

'Curse the luck!' he thought. 'I might have known that blasted old harridan, Fortune, could have nothing good in store for a step-son like me.'

They whirled up under the frowning stone arch—up under the black, rocking trees. The whole long front of the old mansion was brilliant with illumation. The great portico entrace s ood wide; they saw Squire Talbott and Captain De Vere come out with anxious faces; they saw Mrs. Talbott in her white festal robes float downthe black, oaken stairway.

'All waiting for the bridegroom!' Mrs. Vavasor said, with her habitual short laugh. 'Do you go forward, Mr. Dangerfield, and relieve their anxiety. We follow.'

Peter Dangerfield Sprang up the steps—never in his life half so nimbly And Edith Talbott flitted forward to him, smiling, but with an anxious quiver in her voice,

'Oh, come ye in peace, or come ye in war, or to dance at our bridal, young Lord Lochinvar?' Mr. Dangerfield, where is Mr. Dantree.

'Mr. Dantree is here.'

He spoke very quietly, but what hidden delight gleamed in his small pale eyes! If they only knew! He steped on one side, and Gaston Dantree and Mrs. Vavasar stood revealec.

One glance at the bridegroom's face, and blank silence fell. What had happened? Surely never bridegroom, from Adam down, wore so black and gloomy a scowl on his wedding night! Edith Talbott recoiled with clasped hands, her brother and the captain of the plungers stood looking at him aghast.

'By Jove, Dantree,' the gallant captain managed to stammer at last, 'you look awfully cut up, you know. What the deuce is the row? Don't you know you're behind time, man, and—I say, old boy, I hope nothing serious is the matter, you know?'

'Something serious is the matter,' Peter Dangerfield made answer gravely, for the gentleman addressed only scowled a little blacker; 'and we wish to see Sir John immediately. Miss Talbot, we are going to the library—will you tell my uncle to join us there? and if you can keep Katherine out of the way for the next half hour, perhaps it will be as well.'

He led the way to the library, his two companions after him—Mr. Dantree stalking along like a spectre.

The vast and spacious library was brilliantly lit by a cluster of waxlights and the flicker of a dying fire. Shadows crouched darkly in the corners, and the bloody hand shone vividly in the escutcheon over the mantel. The long silken curtains were undrawn; outside, by a faint lighting in the northern sky, the tossing-wind-blown trees, the slanting sweep of the rain could be seen. Outside there was the uproar of the storm—inside, dead stillness reigned.

Peter Dangerfield took a seat deep in the shadow of the vast Maltese window, and looked aroud the lofty and noble room as he had never looked before.

The dark walls lined with books from ceiling to floor, the busts, the bronzes, the pictures, and the heavy-carved old furniture. One day this would be all his—one day—one day.

There was a luxuriant fauteuildrawn up before the fire; into this Mrs. Vavasor sank, throwing back her wet wrap. Mr. Dantree stood near, his elbow on the mantel, his dark and angry eyes fixed on the fire, his mouth set under his black moustache, stern and grim. There was neither pity nor remorse in his heart for the girl who loved him. He had not been spared—why should he spare? He had never loved her—he hated her in this hour.

So he waited—how long he never knew—full of silent, sullen fury, all the more dangerous from this outward quiet. And then the door opened and Sir John Dangerfield came in.

If he had not known before he entered, he knew the moment that his eyes rested upon them, all that had happened.

His secret was told—this woman had played him false. Peter Dangerfield knew that he was his heir-at-law—Gaston Dantree knew that Katherine was not his daughter. The murder was out.

He drew a long breath—absolutely a breath of intense relief. He had dreaded this hour unutterably, he had stooped to deception, to falsehood and bribery, for the first time in all of his brave life, to avert it; and now that it had come, he thanked Heaven. He could breathe freely and face his fellow man again—he could hold his head erect among his peers once more His great love had made him a coward—his life had been unspeakably miserable under the burden of the secret he dared not tell. But another had told it in spite of him—he was free! He flung back his head proudly and walked into their midst with his firm, soldierly step and stately bearing, stopping directly in front of Gaston Dantree.

The Southerner lifted his gloomy eyes, and the gaze of the two met—steady, stern, unflinchingly.

'You are late, Mr. Dantree,' the baronet said, coldly and briefly. 'You pay your bride a poor compliment by keeping her waiting on her bridal eve.'

'I greatly doubt, Sir John, whether there will be either bride or bridal tonight. Certainly before Miss Dangerfield—if there is such a person—becomes Mrs. Dantree, you will clear up a little statement of Mrs. Vavasor's. She tells us the young lady you have palmed off upon us as your daughter and heiress, is—who is she, Sir John Dangerfield?'

The baronet turned his eyes for the first time on the little figure in the arm chair.

'You have broken faith with me Harriet Harman. You took my money and meant to betray me.'

'I took your money and meant to betray you? Yes! I would not have forfeited my revenge for three times the money.'

'I might have known it. Then you have told these men—all?'

'I have told them nothing as yet, save the bare fact that Katherine is not your daughter. Mr. Dantree did me the honor to disbelieve me—it isn't for his interest, as it is for your nephew's to believe it; so I brought them to relate the story in your presence. They can't very well refuse to credit it then. And as I still trust the wedding will go on,' with her most satirical smile; 'and as I don't want to keep poor little Kathie waiting any longer than is absolutely necessary, I will begin at once. If my memory fails me in any minor particulars, Sir John, or if any of my statements are incorrect, you will be good enough to set me right. Messieurs Dantree and Dangerfield, listen!'

She folded her hands, looked into the ruddy coals, and began.

"It's so long ago—so long—so long—it makes one's hair grow grey only to look back. It's fifteen years, my hearers, since the express train from Rouen to Paris bore among its passengers one day a woman and a child—a little girl of two. They were very poor, very shabby, and travelled third-class. By the same train travelled likewise to Paris, an English officer and his lady, and their daughter, also aged two years or thereabouts. The English officer was under marching orders for India, and was going to sail with his interesting family in a few days.

'But if man proposes—French railway trains sometimes disposes, and very unpleasantly. A cattle train came along—there was a mistake, and worse—there was a collision. Crash! Crash!—away went! Something hit the poor little woman on the head, and she knew no more.

'She opened her eyes next in a hospital, very weak, one great pain from head to foot, but quite conscious and likely to live. Her first question was for her child—dead or alive!

' "Alive," the gentle faced Sister of Charity said, "and well and uninjured; and, if I were willing to dispose of it in a fair way, to make it's fortune in life.'

' "How?" I asked.

' "In this way: An English officer and his lady, travelling in the same unfortunate express train, had had their child killed—killed instantly by that terrible collision. The officer and the lady escaped unhurt—they were wild with grief, but remembered their fellow suffers through it all. The baby was buried in Pere La Chaise, poor angel! and monsieur le officer and his lady came daily to the hospital to see their fellow-sufferers. Here they had seen me, here they had been shown my baby—scantily clad, thin, pale, half fed—an object of pity to gods and men, And its little, wan patient face went straight to that desolate spot in their hearts. I was very poor; what could I do with it? They would adopt it, bring it up as their own, give it their name, their love and make an elegant English young lady of a little nameless, ragged waif and stray.

'I listened to all this—too weak to say much, and when next the English officer and his lady visited the hospital heard them repeat the same arguments. My answer was ready: If they would give me twohundred pounds cash down—I was very moderate—they might take the infant for good, to India or the North Pole, and do with her as they would.

'My ready acquiescence, my business like way of putting things, rather took them back—rather shocked the paternal instinct of my Englishman. He looked at me with disbeautiful eyes, and asked if I were really the child's mother. It would have been more politic, I dare say, to have said yes, but I couldn't say it. I hated that child—hated the mother—and some of that hatred looked out of my eyes at him and made him recoil.

' "She's not my child," I said; "I tell you the truth. She's not mine but she belongs to me. Never mind how—never mind anything about her, except that you may take her at you like—on my terms. If you don't like them no harm is done—some one else will. Two hundred pounds down, good English gold, and take her away out of my sight. I'll never trouble you any more about her, and no one else ever will. Now do as you like." And then I shut my lips, and eyes and waited.

'The answer was what I expected, the mother had taken a fancy to the little one, and my Englishman only lived to gratify every fancy of his wife. They would pay the two hundred down, and take the child. In India she and I were never likely to meet again. What was my name

' "Harrriet Harman."

'That was the name I gave. Wheather or no it were mine, is nobody's business here.

' "And the child's name—what was that?"

' "Harriet Harman, too. But if they meant to adopt her, they had better rechristain her—after the little cherub gone up aloft, for instance."

'We closed the bargain. I got the two hundred pounds and signed the receipt; I have it yet. I laughed as I sold the child and got my price. It was the first instalment of my revenge—this is the second. What would her mother say, I thought, if she could only have been informed of this transaction.

'They took the child away. I wanted her to shake hands with me, but she wouldn't. And I hadn't treated her badly. She clung to Mrs. Dangerfield's skirts, and wouldn't so much as look at me.

' "Good-bye, then, ma petite!," I said. "I don't mind the shake hands. Go to India and be happy. If we ever meet again, perhaps you'll think better of it, and shake hands."

'My English officer and his lady came again, and again, and again to me, to induce me to tell little Katherine's antecedants—(they named her Katherine at once, after the little angel crushed to jelly.) They offered me another hundred, and they could ill spare it, but all the gold in the Bank of England would not have made me open my lips until my own time came. I wouldn't tell, and I haven't told, and I don't mean for to tell, until I choose.

'Katherine Dangerfield's father and friends live, but who they are no power on earth shall wring from me.

GUILTY OF WRONG.—Some people have a fashion of confusing excellent remedies with the large mass of "patent medicines," and in this they are guilty of a wrong There are some advertised remedies fully worth all that is asked for them, and one at least we know of—Hop Bitters. The writer has had occasion to use the Bitters in just such a climate as we have most of the year in Bay City, and has always found them to be first class and reliable, doing all that is claimed for them.—Tribune

PERCHERON HORSES.

THE BREED THAT SELLS BEST.

It is a generally accepted fact that the breeding of what are termermed fancy horses, cannot be successfully done by the ordinary breeder. With rare exceptions, breeding for speed is so uncertain, even when those engaged in the business are possessed of the very choicest animals adapted to that purpose, that it is only those who have a fortune, and are able to pursue the object as a matter of pleasure, that can successfully pursue the business for any great length of time. The mania that has for years possessed our people for breeding fast horses is rapidly leaving them, and they are beginning to realize that if they are to make any money in breeding horses of any kind, it must be in producing animals that will have a specific value in themselves, whether trained or untrained. It is not necessary to tell the people as to the class of horses that sell the most readily at the present timo. Every one knows that good-formed, large-sized, vigorous, hardy draft horses are in active demand, and that the buyers are searching the country in every portion where these horses can be found in any considerable numbers, and paying large prices $200 to $250, for animals that weigh from 1300 to 1600 pounds.

How to produce this class of horses is something that interests every farmer throughout the country. A few years since, when there were no pure-bred, large sized stallions to be found here, it was a practical impossibility to do so with any degree of certainty from our ordinary sized mares, but latterly the importation of heavier classes of stallions from foreign countries, and especially the admirable Percherons, that are being imported from LaPerche, France, has made the hitherto unattainable object easy of accomplishment.

Nearly all classes of large horses have been tried, the English draft, the Clydesdales, the Belgians, the Boulonnias, a coarser specimen of the French horses, sometimes in this country improperly called Normans; but none have seemed to "nick" so well with our ordinary stock as the smooth-built, clean limbed, powerfully muscled, vigorous and active Percheron horse of France. Since 1872 several hundreds of these stallions have been imported and sold to nearly every State in the Union, and wherever found they are held in the highest estimation.—Quite a number of both imported and grade stallions have crossed the mountains and are doing the country valuable service. This is very flattering to the clear-sightedness and perseverance of our breeders, and we cannot too strongly urge the continuance of such a worthy enterprise, as every one of these animals that are brought to our State will add greatly to its wealth.—American Rural Home, Rochester, N. THAT TERRIBLE CHILD.

It was in the cars. The ladies were sitting together, busily engaged in conversation. On the seat facing them sat a little 5 year old boy. He had been looking out of the window apparently absorbed in the moving panorama of the outside world. Suddenly he turned from the window; he began searching about the car, exclaiming in a high, piping voice:

'Mamma, what man is it that looks so funny?'

'Sh,' cautioned his mother, But the boy was not to be hushed.

'I don't see the man with the bald head and funny red nose.'

The 'sh' was repeated. By this time the car was in a titter, save and excepting one elderly gentleman with a very bald head and a very red nose. His eyes were rivited upon his paper with a fixedness that was quite frightful. Again the boy spoke:

'Oh! now I see him. Ho! What a bright nose! What makes it so red, mamma?'

'George,' shouted his mother in a stage whisper. But George was not to be stopped.

'Mamma,' he continued, 'what made you say he had a lighthouse on his face? I don't see any lighthouse.'

AN IOWA ROMANCE.

A brother and sister have met after a separation of twenty years, and the meeting has been brought about in Davenport by a little son of the sister in a most peculiar way.

One week ago yesterday the raft steamer Clyde went into Davenport on her way North, and Capt. Douglass tied up his boat for a while in order to permit some of the crew to go ashore and make some purchases.

Among others who went ashore was Aaron Carter, a raftsman. The weather was very cold, with a keen north-west wind. While going along the street Carter met a poorly clad little boy, who was running along crying bitterly. Carter asked him what was the matter, and the little lad sobbed out: 'I'm cold.' Come with me,' said Carter; and taking the boy to a clothing store, he bought him a suit of warm clothes and a pair of mittens. He then asked the boy his name.

'Aaron Dunlap, was the reply. Carter was thunderstruck. 'Aaron Dunlap," he cried. 'Where are your father and mother?'

'Father is dead,' the boy replied.

'Well, take me to your mother, then, as quickly as you can,' said Carter. The boy took him to his humble home, and when Carter entered the house the boy's mother rushed into his arms with a shriek that made all the other occupants of the tenement house to rush in to see what was the matter. Carter had found a sister whom he had not seen since the year 1862, when he went to the war with a Maine regiment.—Davenport Democrat.

BOYS AND THIMBLES.

No man can, like the writer, live 60 years without often wishing that he had learned to use a sewing-thimble well in his early boyhood, especially if he has gone about the world much. Buttons will come off, stitches will break, and how handy it is for boys at school, for men at a hotel, at a friend's house, indeed anywhere away from home—often at home—to be able to whip on a button, stop a starting rent, and to do many other little sewings without calling on a woman, or perhaps sending for a tailor, before being able to appear at a hotel table, One seldom, if ever, learns to use a thimble, if this part of his education has been neglected in small boyhood.

The writer has travelled a good deal, and at a rough guess he has broken threads at least five hundred times in attempting to work a needle through a button or garment without a thimble. Boys, take our advice, and every one of you learn to use a thimble well before you grow up. Do it this very winter: it is not femine to do so. Do it, and if you live long you will many times thank us for the advice.—American Agriculturist for December.

SUDDEN DEATH AN OLD CITIZEN OF COLLINGWOOD.

COLLINGWOOD, DEC. 22.—This morning the citizens of this town were greatly shocked to hear of the sudden death of Mr. Andrew Shehan, who, until lately, had been employed in the Northern freight sheds as check clerk. The facts of the case, as far as can be learned, are these:—Mr. John Hinds, while proceeding to the station, noticed a man lying face downwards in a small creek just at the entrance to the northern freight sheds on Simcoe Street. On examination it proved to be Mr. Shehan, an old citizen of this town. It is conjectured that the deceased man was on his way home from a friend's house across the track, and had reached thus far when, the night being very dark, he fell over the bridge and while falling struck his face, causing a deep cut over one of his eyes, and also breaking his wrist, which rendered him insensible and unable to help himself. The water being only six inches deep, the unfortunate man must have been suffocated. He leaves a wife and nine children, who have the sympathy of the people in their sad affliction. The coroner deemed it unnecessary to hold an inquest.

TIMELY WARNING.

Now is the season for sudden colds and distressing coughs, treat these with Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam, it cures influenza, asthma, croup, whooping cough, bronchitis, and all pulmonary complaints leading to consumption.

OUR PAPER.

Now that the holidays are over, we again settle down to business, and while we will endeavor to do our part, we would suggest that our subscribers can assist us very materially by sending in items of local interest.

In returning our thanks for the very liberal support accorded us, and especially for their promptness in paying their subscriptions, at least the majority of them, (we have a few delinquents, however,) we would ask for a continuance of the same. But there are other things necessary to make the paper interesting, and for these we have in a great measure to depend on our friends in the country. If any of your neighbors should be so fortunate as to have an increase in their families, or if any of the young folks should take unto themselves a life partner, inform us of the fact; or if the cold hand of death should invade your family circle, drop us a line. Anything of interest in agricultural matters, improvements in your neighborhood, and the thousand and one things daily occuring around you, and which go far towards making a good live local paper, we would receive with thanks. We know that some of our subscribers have done us good service in the past; but there are others who are given to criticising and fault-finding. Now, we would say to these that a suggestion given us as to where an improvement might be made, will do a great deal more towards remedying the wrong, if wrong there be, than ever so much fault finding. And finally, if you will co-operate with us the coming year, we can, and will make our paper so interesting that no family will be without it.

The season of the year is now upon us for the election of officers in the different Agricultural Societies, and as there are generally a number of dissatisfied persons, or we might say, grumblers, now is the time for them to put in an appearance at the annual meetings, in order to suggest some plan or mode of doing things that will be an improvement on the past. We fear, however, the majority of the dissatisfied, or grumbling class, will prefer leaving the work to the few. The Auditors' Report will be be placed before the meeting, also the election of officers and directors for the ensuing year will take place, together with such other business as may be brought up for discussion. It is also the proper time to make any suggestions which may be thought conducive to the welfare of the Society Every member has a vote, so every member should be present at the Annual Meeting.

Opposition or no, W. F. Doll has ordered another lot of Watches direct from the Manufacturers, and is prepared and determined to cut prices still lower. Save money. See him sure.

OUR TABLE.

PICTURESQUE CANADA.—We have received parts one and two of this very superior work, and can confidently recommend it to the public. The engravings are good and the letter press is unsurpassed by anything we have seen in Canada. Notwithstanding that some Parties are trying to run it down, we believe it will be readily and heartily supported by all, and it has only to be seen to be appreciated.

Our Little Ones for January is to hand, and it is, if anything an improvement on past numbers. Parents if you want to make your Children a nice present that is at the same time instructive as well as amusing, subscribe for the above little Magazine price $1.50 per annum, subscriptions received at this office.

Gaes almanac for 1882, has been received, and as usual is the 'boss' almanac of the Dominion. You can find no better way of investing 25cts than by buying one. To be had of all News Dealers.

HOPEVILLE.

From our Correspondent.

A social entertainment was held in Scarlett's hall on Saturday evening, Dec. 31st.

Christmas has come and gone, but was not forgotten by the ladies of Hopeville, who formed themselves into a committee to fix up a Christmas Tree and have an entertainment, which was beyond the expectations of the people. Scarlett's hall was nearly filled with the villagers. On one side of the hall the tree was erected, well lighted with wax candles, and laden with presents for the children. The chair was occupied by Mr. Joseph McArdle. The programme consisted of sacred songs, (by a newly formed choir,) recitations and dialogues, interspersed with music from Mr. Joseph Whiteman. After the conclusion of the programme Santa Claus distributed the presents. Then came refreshments. A large four-story cake was then voted for—Miss Evans and Miss Bryce being the candidates. The result of the canvas was a tie, and each lady had the honor of cutting and distributing the cake; the amount realized was $19.10, which is to go towards purchasing a library for a Sunday School. Votes of thanks were unanimously passed to the ladies who had charge of the affair and the chairman. After the singing of the National Anthem by the choir the meeting dispersed, each well satisfied with the evening's entertainment.

NEW ENGLAND GRANGE.

From a Correspondent.

MR. EDITOR, so little is kown of us, by your numerous readers it will first be necessary to say where we are located—"New England Grange" is situated on the 7th concession of Euphrasia, about six miles from the raising town of Markdale.

JOHN VERT, Clerk.

Below we give the addresses read on the occasion of presenting an easy chair to the Rev. J. Ward, Incumbent of Christ Church, Markdale, and a gold watch to Miss Fanny Ford, the Organist of the same church. The watch is a very handsome one, and had engaved on the inside of the cover the fellowing:—"Presented to Miss Fanny Ford by the Congregation of Christ Church, Markdale, in appreciation of her services as Organist, Xmas, 1881."

REV. MR. WARD.

Dear Pastor:—On behalf of the members of your Church in this place, we avail ourselves of this favorable opportunity to acknowledge our appreciation of you untiring zeal and devotion in the interest of the church, and the spiritual welfare of the people. While we cannot, by any suitable testimony, reciprocate you for the great and good work that you are doing, still we are not willing to allow it to pass without in some way conveying to you our thanks, and also a slight token of our esteem for your services.

As it is the holiday season, when friends remember friends, when there is a re-union of hearts as well as hands in the promotion of harmony and fellowship, not only among members of churches, but amongst all people, we too, in keeping with the pleasant duty, desire to add our mede of tribute to deserving worth.

We beg to present you with this chair as a token of our affection and esteem for your kind offices.

May it prove to you a solace and comfort when the arduous duties of your "daily round" are done; may it from time to time remind you of the ties of love and good fellowship existing between yourselves and your people here.

Wishing you the compliments of the season, with all the enjoyments pertaining thereto, with many pleasant returns,

We are, yours very affectionately,
WM. DOUGLAS, JR.,

On behalf of congregation, Christ Church, Marklale.

Miss Hollingshead presented the Chair, and Mr. Ward replied in a feeling manner. We regret in not being able to give the reply.

TO MISS FORD.

The congregation of Christ Church, recognizing your unwearied and self-denying zeal in the church's welfare, more especially in maintaining the musical portion of the services, wish to show our appreciation of your services so honorably and regularly given during the three years past by presenting you with this watch, of which they beg your acceptance as a token not only of their appreciation of your services, but also as a momento of their regard for you personally.

Rev. Mr. Ward made the presentation, to which Miss Ford, although taken completely by surprise, replied in brief and appropriate terms, thanking the congregation for their generosity and liberality.

PRESENTATION to N. W. GOWAN.

On Friday evening, Dec. 23rd, a school entertainment was given at section No. 2, Township of Proton.

The principal object aimed at was to get together the parents and pupils of the school section, in order to pay a valedictory kindness to Mr. Gowan their teacher.

The School-House was neatly decorated with evergreens, and the walls adorned with handsome and appropriate mottoes, and although the roads were bad, the room was crowded to its utmost capacity. Mr. Furgeson, Inspector of Schoools, was appointed to the chair, and every call he made for the performance of a well arranged programme, was ably responded to by the several parties detailed for that purpose. Speeches, Readings, Recitations, and music followed each other in rapid succession, and each contribution was greeted by the audience with a hearty round of applause. Apropos of music I would say, that a Solo, entitled eva was nicely rendered by Miss Phillips of Dundalk. The evening wore on, and the concluding piece of the programme had been duly enacted when a pleasing episode took place.

The Trustees came forward and placed upon the table an elegantly bound copy of the Holy Bible, and a gold-headed cane, and requested Mr. James Dean, to read the following address:

N. W. Gowan, Teacher, School Section No. 2, Township of Proton.

DEAR FRIEND,—After an intercourse together extending over a period of four years, we are now about to separate. As the hour of separation approximates our hearts are drawn out to you and we review the past, as it relates to our mutual connection with each other.

Through the medium of memory the past is ever resent in our recollection. Incidents that have transpired in the remote past are again placed before us, the features, the addresses, and the personal characteristics of those we have met, are all made to repeat themselves, at the command of this faculty of our nature.

Dear Friend, while exercising this power of remembrance, we are carried back to the time when you, a mere lad in appearence, as well as years, applied for the incumbency of our School. An agreement was then made giving you the authority to guide and direct the education of our children.

It was your first School. You entered upon its duties with a feeling of earnest interest, and your authority was exercised in a spirit of kindness, winning the hearts of the pupils, while at the same time their advancement was thorough and satisfactory. We learned to respect you for your talent and were constrained to love you for the unaffected kindness which marked your daily entercourse with us in our homes. Thus as time went on, and month succeeded month, so did the chain of your friendship grow stronger, and link attach itself to link, until now, at the end of four years, this lengthened chain of mutual kindness has wound itself around our hearts, until the parents and children of every family in our Section acknowledge its empire and the charm of its influence.

We are well aware, dear friend, that a continuous engagement for so long a period as four years seldom proves to be an association of unbroken harmony between teacher, trustees, parents and scholars. The very nature of your juridsdiction over the children is calculated to bring you, at times, into conflict with their parents, but during the extended period of your authority in this School Section, your government has been so characterised by tact and kindness as to invite all the work in harmony with you as their Teacher.

Separation is the penalty of friendship. It stalks in upon us, ever and anon, and dims the brightness of the past. It checks the exhuberant joys of the present and reminds us how fleeting, how mutable are earthly calculations and enjoyments.

Deeply imbued with such sombre feelings, we approach you dear friend on the present occassion, with conflicting emotions. Our hearts brighten as we survey our past association, but a darkly folding cloud seems impending as we now assemble together to bid you Farewell.

Before taking leave of you it is our desire that you shall carry away with you something that will remind you of the disinterested and kind hearted feeling which obtains for you through out the entire section. We therefore present you with this copy of the Holy Bible and a Gold-Headed Cane, and request that you will recieve and regard them as the gift of School Section No. 2, Township of Proton. We would say in conclusion, that we are only paying you a just tribute of praise when we remark, that your successor cannot adopt a surer method to win our esteem and appreciation, than by emulating the example of his predecessor.

We remain, yours, ever faithfully,

CHRISTOPHER JOHNSON, } Trustees S.
SAMUEL STOKES, } S. No. 2,
JOHN SCOTT, } Proton.

Township of Proton,
Friday evening, Dec. 23rd 1881.

Mr. Gowan was not prepared for such an unexpected expression of kind feeling as this, and he was so deeply touched by recieving such a material testimony of regard, as to be unable to tell his friends as he would wish, how sensible he was of the home dwelling hospitality and kindness of which he had been the recipient, from one and all, during his protracted stay in School Section No. 2. The golden hearted hospitality of the evening was now concluded, and the warm grasp of friendship proclaimed that each must now take off their several way.

A PARTICIPANT.

A COMPLIMENTARY SUPPER.

A large number of the citizens of Priceville, assembled at the Commercial Hotel, on the evening of the 28th inst., to do honor to Mr. M. C. Black, on the eve of his departure from Priceville.

During the short time Mr. Black held the position of principal in the Public School he has succeeded in making for himself a large circle of friends.

The social was a very social and enjoyable affair. The table of our host groaned beneath the delecacies of the season. They tucked them on in abundance and tastefulness. After ample justice had been done to the bivalves. Dr. Ghent being called on to perside toasted "Our Queen and Country," Mr. Thos. Nicol responded in a very able manner. Mr. N. B. Grier was called to respond to "The Commerce of our Country," which he did in his usual happy way. Mr. Summerville sang an excellent song.

Mr. Bennett responded to "The Medical Profession." Mr. Jas. McMillan asked the company to drain their glasses to "Our Guest," which met with a hearty response, Mr. Black ably responded thanking his friends for their display of kindness.

Mr. Nelson then sang a song, when the Host and Hostess was drank with bumper glasses. The company then sang Auld Lang Syne, and God save the Queen, and departed satisfied that they spent a most enjoyable evening. Mr. Black is we believe, going to Mont Forest to entre upon his career as a Medical Student.

Yours & Co.,
N. B. G.

COMPLIMENTARY SUPPER.—Mr. J. J. Middleton being about to resign the [illegible] and remove to the North-west, was entertained to supper, on Friday evening last, by the members of the County Council and leading citizens of the Town, as a mark of esteem for the able part he has taken in County matters for some years past. A very recherche and excellent spread reflected great credit on the taste and ability of the new lessee of the Coulson House, Mr. Walter Holmes, and was done ample justice to by about 70 guests, the chair being occupied by Dr. Christoe, Warden, faced by R. Myles, Esq., as vice. After the usual loyal and patriotic toasts had been given, and responded to, the Chairman in a very eulogistic speech, gave the "Guest of the Evening," expressing great regret on losing the services in the Council of a gentleman who had always taken a prominent part in all matters calculated to advance the interests of the County. Mr. Middleton replied in a feeling speech, regretting the separation about to take place, but wherever he went would always feel the warmest interest in the welfare of the County, and paid a high tribute to the County officials for the ability and the thoroughness which characterized the performance of their County duties. The singing of Auld Lang Syne and God-speed to the parting guest, brought a very pleasant evening to a close.—Advertiser.

A BRAKEMAN TERRIBLY INJURED AT PARKDALE YESTERDAY MORNING.

About 1.30 yesterday morning Chas. Giles, a Toronto Grey, and Bruce brakeman, was running along the top of a train near Parkdale junction. He reached forward to fix a brake when the car on which he was standing gave a sudden lurch, and he fell between the two cars to the track. The rear car passed over his left ankle and crushed the boot to a jelly. The right leg and left arm were broken in several places, and it is very probable he will loose both. The ambulance waggon was sent for, and the unfortunate man was conveyed to the hospital in an unconscious condition. His left foot was amputated eight inches below the knee. Although a powerful fellow Giles was very weak from loss of blood when he reached the hospital.—Globe.

ZOPESA (FROM BRAZIL.)

The New Compound, its wonderful affinity to the Digestive Apparatus and the Liver, increasing the dissolving juices, relieving almost instantly the dreadful results of Dyspepsia, Indigestion, and the TORPID LIVER, makes Zopesa an every day necessity in every house.

It acts gently and speedily in Biliousness, Costiveness, Headache, Sick Headache, Distress after Eating, Wind on the Stomach, Heartburn, Pains in the Side and Back, Want of Appetite, Want of Energy, Low Spirits, Foul Stomach. It invigorates the Liver, carries off all surplus bile, regulates the Bowels, and gives tone to the whole system.

Cut this out and take it to your Druggist and get a 10 cent Sample, or a large bottle for 75 cents, and tell your neighbor about it.

PERSONAL.—We had a call from Mr. Wesley Reynolds last week. He is in Toronto completing his studies as Druggist and Chemist.

The Secretaries of Agricultural Societies will do us a favor by sending the names of the officers elected at the annual meeting next Thursday.

The Annual Meeting of Holland Township Agricultural Society will take place in Campbells Hall, Chatsworth on Thursday the 12th inst.

SCHOOL OPENING.—We desire to remind scholars and heads of families, that we have a large assortment of School Books, Slates, Stationery, &c.

A. Turner & Co.

The annual meeting of Glenelg Agricultural Society will be held in Dufferin Hall Markdale for recieving Auditors Annual Report and election of officers for the current year.

1,000,000 logs wanted, for cash. A quantity of lumber on hand for sale, advertisement next week. G. S Brown ..., Markdale.

The third Wednesday in January is the day in each year, by statute, for the holding of the Annual meeting of the Electoral Division Agricultural Societies, and the second Thursday in the same month for Township Societies.

There will be a meeting of the Markdale Lodge of A. O. U. W. in ...'s shop on Friday evening the ..., at 8 o'clock sharp. Every member is requested to attend. Important business to be attended to.

The Markdale Skating Rink will be opened to the public on Saturday evening. Now boys look up your skates and see that the straps are in order, as ... says the ice is to be in first class condition, and warranted not to tear your pants if you sit down rather suddenly.

Take our advice, if you want any Mantles, Shawls, Flannels, Dress Goods, Cottons, Tweeds, Table Linens, Counterpanes, Cashmeres, and Black, ... get W. J. McFarland's prices. Imports Direct, and "Don't you forget it!"

The weather the past week has been very cool and our wood pile is,—well it is not to be seen, we have tried to be patient on account of the state of the roads, but now there is good sleighing we will expect those who have promised to pay their subscription in wood, to bring it along at once. You know that ink will not work worth a cent, when it is cold.

A great many people are troubled with cold feet, which is invariably caused by a sluggish circulation of the blood. A few doses of Dr. Carson's Stomach and Constipation Bitters will soon produce a free circulation of the blood and Stimulate and Tone the system. Sold in large bottles at 50 cents. A. Turner and Co., Special Agent, Markdale.

OYSTER SUPPER.—A few of Mr. B. ...man's friends entertained him at an oyster supper at the "Mansion House" on Friday evening last. After supper speeches were made by Messrs. Robt. Myles, Archd. Elliott, ... Coleman, and others. A very enjoyable evening was spent. It is needless to say that the supper was first-class as the name of the genial hostess Mrs. Kay, is ample guarantee.

W. J. McFarland is the only merchant doing business in Markdale that imports direct from Europe, hence he can save his customers the Wholesale Merchant's profit.

NARROW ESCAPE.—Mr. John McIntyre while working in Mr. Mercer's woods, met with a very serious accident which came near proving fatal. He was imployed in getting out saw logs, and while skidding them the skid flew up, striking him on the head and rendering him unconscious, in which state he remained for nearly three days. Dr. Sproule, was called in and informed us that it was a pretty close call, but pronounces him now out of danger.

There is no doubt that our Canadian climate is conducive to Lung affections, and for this reason Dr. Carson's Pulmonary Cough Drops should be in every house. For Coughs, Colds, and all other Lung and Throat affections they have no equal. In large bottles at 50 cents. A. Turner and Co., Special Agent Markdale.

Mr. T. Mullarky received quite an ovation on Monday night, when it was ascertained that he was the successful candidate for the Deputy Reeveship. A number of his friends met him at the Revere Hotel upon his return from the Town Hall, and handsome and congratulatory speeches were the order of the day, or night rather. We regret that we cannot give a report of the speeches, as some of them were gems in their way; but our reporter got so full——well, of enthusiasm, that he felt quite unequal to the task of taking them down.

Now that winter has well commenced we would advise our readers against using pills containing Calomel and other injurious substance, as there is great danger of catching cold after their use. An excellent substitute for pills is a Vegetable Preparation known as Dr. Carson's Stomach and Constipation Bitters, a family medicine that, from all accounts, will soon take the place of every other purgative and blood purifier. A Turner and Co., special agent, Markdale.

A PUBLIC MEETING Should be called of the citizens of every city, town and village in the Dominion to consider what should be done to prevent the hair from turning Grey—and falling out. If this important question received their earnest consideration they would unanimously decide that science had at last discovered something that would answer this purpose—and furthermore would recommend Cingalese Hair Renewer as being this something for restoring the hair to its natural color, and prevent its falling out. 50 cents per bottle. For sale by all Druggists.

The Presbyterian Sabbath School Anniversary took place as announced in Dufferin Hall on Monday evening the 22nd inst. The hall was crowded an all appeared brim full of fun and determined to have an enjoyable time. After tea was served; which was excellent and in abundance, the superintendant Wm. Brown, Esq., took the chair and called the audience to order, when Master Herbert Brown delivered the opening address in a clear voice and a masterly manner, followed by singing by the school, which showed good training. A lengthy programme was gone through and well rendered. We decline giving the names of those who took part, all of which acquitted themselves with credit, as our space would not permit of a detailed report giving justice to each; however the entertainment was the best the school has ever given and is in a flourishing condition, all appeared well satisfied with the evenings enjoyment. Proceeds $49. The committee deserves credit for their valuable services in the management.

Owing to the recent severe storms on the Atlantic, seven cases of goods, Direct Importations, for W. J. McFarland arrived two weeks late, and in order to secure a speedy sale, he offers them much under regular prices.—Mark the following:—24 Ladies' heavy Black Cloth Mantles, £3.00, well worth $4.50. 24 Ladies' Black Beaver Mantles, $3.50, cheap at $5.50. 18 Ladies' Diagonal satin trimmed Mantles, $5.00 cheap at $6.00. 30 Ladies' very fine, richly trimmed Mantles, $5.00, wholesale price $7.25. 50 Childrens' colored Jackets with Hood, satin lined, from 50c up. 27 Ottoman Shawls, reversible, $3.00, wholesale price $4.25. 20 Stripped Ottomans, $1.90, worth $3.00. 28 Wove Plaid Shawls, 90c and $4,50—very cheap. 400 yards Black Silk—cheap. 200 yards Black Velveteens—cheap. 20 dozen Black Silk Fringe—cheap. 5 dozen Silk Cord and Tassels—cheap. DUNDALK.

(From the Herald.)

A smart boy wanted to learn the Blacksmith bussiness, at F. F. Teeples Dundalk.

Grand Masqurade on Tuesday evening next, in Dundalk rink, a boss time expected.

If you want to buy a good farm, call on A. G. Hunter, Real Estate Agent, Dundalk.

The great sale of Village lots, the property of R. J. Doyle, is to take place on the 19th inst.

Remember the Dundalk monthly Fair, on Tuesday, the 10th inst. A large attendance is expected.

We had a large market on Tuesday. We noticed several farmers from a distance, and were glad to see them.

Charles McConnell sold seven Village lots, this week, in his new survey. Dundalk is extending its boundaries,

G. R. Middleton, will have an Auction Sale of the balance of his goods on Saturday, to-morrow, now for bargains.

The T., G. & B. Railway trains are making splendid time these days. There is no time allowed to run across to get a—cigar.

If you want to get money on the very best terms, and the very lowest rate of interest, call on A. G. Hunter, Loan Agent, Dundalk.

There were seven thousand bushels of grain purchased on the Dundalk market in one day last week. A good time among the farmers.

It is confidently believed in Dundalk, that the Marquis of Lorne will be appointed Viceroy, and the Earl of Dalhousie is reported as likely to succeed His Excellency as Governor General of Canada.

The annual meeting of the Proton Agricultural Society will be held in the Orange Hall, Dundalk, on Thursday, the 12th inst., for the purpose of receiving the Auditors' Report, election of officers, and other business.

THAT PUZZLE.—An Advertisement appeared in the HERALD last week in a manner which puzzled most readers to make sense out of it, but it is just as plain and easily understood this week as the machines themselves. It is no puzzle to understand why the New York Singer has such a world wide reputation. They are so complete in all their parts, and any person can run them. James Hanna is the authorized agent at Dundalk.

The opening of the Skating Rink, under the management of Mr. Steinhoff, was a success. Although there were a number of social gatherings in different places there was a good turn out at the rink, and all fully enjoyed themselves. Now that the ice is in good order we have no doubt but many will enjoy the harmless fun, as it perhaps is the best muscular exercises that it is possible to enjoy at this season of the year.

On New Year's Eve, about eight o'clock, the alarm of fire was sounded, when it was discovered that the chimney in connection with the oat meal dry kiln at Mr. Clochley's mills, was on fire. It was feared that the fire might break through the brick work into the mill, but by the assistance of about one hundred of the villagers the fire was subdued and kept under control, and finally extinguished.

On Monday the bazaar of the Ladies' Aid Society, in connection with the Methodist Church, was a grand success. In the evening the oyster supper in the Orange Hall was one of the best public suppers that we have had in Dundalk. Oysters, both cold and hot, tea, coffee, pies, cakes and pleasant waiters contributed to make it one of the social evenings. We heard that some of the ladies had two plates of oysters. All together it was a good time.

SOIREE.—The new Presbyterian ... on the 10th con. of Proton was the scene of a very pleasant gathering on Wednesday, Dec. 28th, 1881. For the past summer preaching was held in the school house, section No. 7, and there the pleasant tea party was held. The ladies in the neighborhood supplied the tea which was in abundance. After tea Mr. Snyder, the student in charge, took the chair, and opened the meeting with a short address, then introduced in their turn, who addressed the meeting, Rev. Mr. Holstein; Joseph McArdle of Hopeville; Peter McGregor, of Dundalk; and Robt. Ferris, of Proton. The proceeds of the evening were $33.00. A large quantity of eatables being left a social was held on Friday night, the 30th ult, the chair being occupied by Mr. Robt. Kinnell. After tea, addresses were delivered by Mr. Snyder and others. Amount of proceeds $7.40, making a total of $51. The managing committee have a good subscription, and intend to commence to build in the spring. This will make another place of worship in our township.

Cathartic Pills

Combine the choicest cathartic principles in medicine, in proportions accurately adjusted to secure activity, certainty, and uniformity of effect. They are the result of years of careful study and practical experiment, and are the most effectual remedy yet discovered for diseases caused by derangement of the stomach, liver, and bowels, which require prompt and effectual treatment. AYER'S PILLS are specially applicable to this class of diseases. They act directly on the digestive and assimilative processes, and restore regular healthy action. Their extensive use by physicians in their practice, and by all civilized nations, is one of the many proofs of their value as a safe, sure, and perfectly reliable purgative medicine. Being compounded of the concentrated virtues of purely vegetable substances, they are positively free from calomel or any injurious properties, and can be administered to children with perfect safety.

AYER'S PILLS are an effectual cure for Constipation or Costiveness, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Loss of Appetite, Foul Stomach and Breath, Dizziness, Headache, Loss of Memory, Numbness, Biliousness, Jaundice, Rheumatism, Eruptions and Skin Diseases, Dropsy, Tumors, Worms, Neuralgia, Colic, Gripes, Diarrhœa, Dysentery, Gout, Piles, Disorders of the Liver, and all other diseases resulting from a disordered state of the digestive apparatus.

As a Dinner Pill they have no equal.

While gentle in their action, these PILLS are the most thorough and searching cathartic that can be employed, and never give pain unless the bowels are inflamed, and then their influence is healing. They stimulate the appetite and digestive organs; they operate to purify and enrich the blood, and impart renewed health and vigor to the whole system.

THIS HOTEL is a large three storey brick building, recently erected and fitted up with every modern convenience. It is furnished in First-Class Style. The Bar is supplied with the best brands of Wines, Liquors and Cigars, and the table with all the delicacies of the season. The travelling Public may rely upon every attention being paid to their comfort. Good Sample Rooms for Commercial Travellers. The only Hotel ... [illegible] to and from all Trains. Good Stables and attentive Hostler.

A WHOLE FOREST OF STONE TREES.

From twenty to thirty-five miles from Denver, between Cherry Creek and Running Creek, the New Orleans and Denver forces struck an unusual obstruction, it being nothing less than a buried forest. The trees are all petrified and agatized, are of all sizes, and lie buried at various depths, from ten to twenty feet, which is as deep as any excavation was made by the workmen. They came upon these relicks of a bygone age in at least half a dozen localities, and have met with not a little difficulty on their account. The trees are very perfect, and could be taken out nearly whole if suitable machinery were employed.

BURNS AND SCALDS—IMPORTANT REMEDY.

Four years since (Sept. '77) the "American Agriculturist" recommended the use of Bicarbonate of Soda, that is the common cooking soda, for most kinds of burns. Since then frequent experiments and observations, the opinions of physicians, and the best medical journals, have more than confirmed all what we then said. As burns and scalds are always liable to occur, and as the remedy, though simple, has proved extraordinarily useful it should be fixed in the minds of every one. The soda, and the carbonic acid so readily set at liberty from it, have anæsthetic, antiseptic and disinfecting properties— all highly beneficial for burns.

For slight burns cover all the injured parts with a layer of powdered soda. For deeper burns, but where the skin is not broken, dip linen rags in a solution made by dissolving one-third of an ounce of the soda in a pint of water; lay the rags on and keep them moist with the solution. For very sever burns, followed by suppuration (formation of pus), apply the rags in the same way, keeping them moist; but frequently exchange them when dry for fresh ones, and carefully wash off, with the soda solution, any matter that has accumulated underneath, so that it may not be absorbed into and poison the blood. Leading European medical journals give numerous instances in which, by the above treatment, extensive burns of very severe character have healed speedily, leaving little scar.

WARMTH FROM NEWSPAPERS.

Many years ago, in one of the severe winters when there was much hardship among the poor, a city paper suggested that old newspapers spread over the bed, would form an excellent substitute for blankets and coverlets. This brought upon the journal a great deal of harmless ridicule from other papers, but it brought comfort to many a poor family. In the matter of bed clothing, especially, we are apt to associate warmth with weight, and do not consider that there is no warmth in the coverings themselves, but that they merely prevent the heat of the body from passing off. Whatever is a poor conductor of heat will make a good covering. Paper itself is a poor conductor, but still poorer are the thin layers of air that are confined when two or three newspapers are laid upon one another. A few newspapers laid over the bed will keep one much warmer than some of the heavy coarsely woven blankets. We not propose newspapers as a substitute for blankets and comforters, but it is one of those [illegible] that it is well to know. In travelling one may, by the aid of a few newspapers, secure a comfortable [illegible] in a thinly clad bed, and if we cannot afford to give a destitute family a blanket or a comforter, we may show them how to increase the usefulness of their thin coverings by stitching a few layers of newspapers between them. [illegible] to remind those who grow window plants, that by removing them away from the window, and arranging a cover of newspapers over them, they may be preserved from harm on severely cold nights. With the plants as with our selves, it is not so much that cold [illegible] the heat goes off. [illegible] will prevent the escape of heat.—American Agriculturist for December.

"DON'T GIVE UP THE SHIP"

Were the memorable words of Commodore Perry. We repeat, "Don't Give up the ship," poor, despairing invalid, but try Burdock Blood Bitters. It cures others why not you? It renovates, regulates and tones all the organs of secretion, and restores lost Vitality.

A CURIOUS MANIA.

A Paris correspondent in a recent letter writes of the mania of a senile [illegible], who is afflicted with kleptomania, wandering round the omnibus stations, hanging about the lobbies of the theatres, and stealing the pocket handkerchiefs of the ladies. He was arrested, caught in the act, and taken before the Commissary of Police, who ordered the usual search to be made in the apartment occupied by the prisoner. Hundreds and hundreds of handkerchiefs of all kinds were found, from the fine cambric embroidered handkerchief of the lady of title, to the plain hemmed square of linen neatly marked by the shop girl. The kleptomaniac had worked his own initials in the corner of each handkerchief. He was handed over to his friends, and the ladies who care to claim their handkerchiefs can have them on application at the prefecture.

Madame Alice Regnault has not yet married the duke of her choice, but as a preliminary she appears to have borrowed the trifle of £8,000 to add to her dowry. The money was offered her by a M. Doyen, a monetary agent, who had been deputed to borrow it in her name, but when this person took her the sum in question, he found he had been forestalled, and that the lady had obtained it without his intervention. She declined to allow him the commission to which he considered he was entitled, consequently the facts of the case have been gone into by a court of law, and the actress has been condemned to pay £12 as indemnity to M. Doyer.

HOW TO CURE A COLD

Upon the first feeling of chill or shivering remain in doors if possible, bathe the feet in hot water, gradually increasing the heat as long as it can be comfortably borne, drink freely of warm ginger tea or sage tea, to induce perspiration, and take Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam according to directions on the bottle. Hagyard's Balsam cures coughs, asthma, and bronchitis.

[illegible]—If you will stop spending so much on fine clothes, rich food and style, buy good healthy food, cheaper and better clothing, get more real and substantial things of life every way, and especially stop the foolish habit of employing expensive, quack doctors or using so much of the vile humbug medicine that does you only harm, and put your trust in that simple, pure remedy, Hop Bitters that cures always at a trifling cost, you will see good times and have good health.—Chronical.

A member of the Vermont Legislature has been fined, under a statute which his vote helped to make, for keeping an unlicensed dog. He is now convinced that the law is unconstitutional, and will test it in the courts.

After a wedding party had assembled in a church at Bloomington, Ill., the father of the girl offered her $500 if she would back out. She took the money, remained at home, and sent word to the minister to dismiss the assembly.

HAD SUFFERED MANY PHYSICIANS.

And grew no better but rather worse. Mr. D. H. Howard, of Geneva, N. Y., after dismissing his physicians, tried nearly half a gross of the various blood and liver remedies advertised, with no benefit; when one bottle of Burdock Blood Bitters cured him of paralysis and General Debility. At the advanced age of 60, he says he feels young again, and is overjoyed at his wonderful recovery.

A woman caused a commotion at Wadena, Minn., by wildly chasing a big dog and crying:—"Stop him! he has swallowed a twenty dollar bill." An obliging butcher promptly caught the beast, killed him, and recovered the money.

Benjamin Philbert has just died in St. Louis. He was worth $300,000 His other notable distinctions were that he had not been out of the city in sixty three years, and had never ridden in a steam boat or steam railroad car.

LAME BACK.

Lumbago, Kidney complaint, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, and all pain and inflammation are speedily cured with Hagyards Yellow Oil. Croup, sore throat, colds, burns, scalds, bruises, frost bites, chilblains and all wounds of the flesh are quickly healed by Yellow Oil.

Stammerers are commonly worse off among strangers than when talking with friends, the difficulty being in part a nervous affection; but there is a peculiar case of an Ohio boy who can speak glibly at home, while he cannot utter a word anywhere else.

A writer in Cornhill traces Carlyle's characteristics back to original Puritanism, which was the basis of his mind, and says. "To the genuine Puritan a creed is nothing which does not immediately embody itself in a war-cry."

RHEUMATIC REMEDY.

There is no better cure for Rheumatism than Hagyard's Yellow Oil used according to directions on the bottle. It also cures Burns, Scalds, Frost Bites, Bruises, lameness, and all wounds of the flesh. All dealers sell it, price 25 cents.

NOTICE.

THE ANNUAL SCHOOL MEETING FOR 1881 will be held in the School House, Markdale, on Wednesday, 28th inst., commencing at 10 o'clock a.m. Ratepayers and others interested, of U. S. S. No. 1, Artemesia and Glenelg, are particularly requested to be present, as the Trustees are most anxious that all parties having grievances should be full heard, and that the affairs of the school, financial and otherwise, should receive that careful and intelligent criticism which the interest it involves demands.

MANHOOD

HOW LOST, HOW RESTORED.

WE have recently published a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical and nervous Debility, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage etc., resulting from excesses.

☞ Price, in a sealed envelope, only 6 cts., or two postage stamps.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicines or the use of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

☞ This Lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

A WONDERFUL WOMAN.

CHAPTER XIII. Continued.

'They took her to India, and for fifteen years after I lost sight of the little one. But it was not out of sight of mind—I never quite lost her. My life is a wandering one, a hard one often, but on the whole not an unpleasant one. I made money and spent money—I pitched my tent in every Continental city, and at last, one day in Paris, I picked up an English paper and read there how Sir Everard Dangerfield, of Scarswood, sixth baronet of the name, was dead and how Sir John Dangerfield, late of Her Majesty's Honourable East India Company's service, had succeeded to the title and estates. Sir John and his only child, Miss Katherine Dangerfield, were expected in England by the first steamer.

'Here was news! Here was a lift in the world for la petite. I made inquiries about this Scarswood Park; I found out it had a rent roll of eight thousand a year, strickly entailed to the nearest of kin, whether male or female; I found out Sir John had a nephew in the place, who, lacking heirs on Sir John's part, was heir-at-law; I found out that the prevailing belief was that the young lady coming from India, was really Sir John's daughter; I found out that the death of the child in the French railway accident, fifteen years before, was a dead secret. Mrs. Dangerfield had died very soon after she arrived in India, and Sir John alone was the possessor of the dead secret, excepting always that he had not told missy herself.

'I read the English papers after that—your English papers that chronicle everything your great men and your little men do. I read how Sir John and Miss Dangerfield had arrived, how bells had rung, and bonfires blazed, and tenantry cheered, and old friends trooped to welcome them. They liked Sir Everard, but Sir Everard was gone, and it was of course, "The King is dead—live the king."

'Sir John had taken possession, and I set the detective police to work to find out what I wanted to know. I found it out; neither missy herself nor any living being dreamed she was other than the baronet's daughter.

'My time had come—my fortune was made; I wrote my baronet a letter; I told him I was coming; I bade him call me Mrs. Vavasor. It's a pretty name, an aristocratic name, and I have retained it ever since. And as soon as ever I could raise the money, for it was one of my improverished seasons. I took the train and started.

'That was last September. Miss Dangerfield had just met Mr. Dantree, only three months ago: but what would you? We live in a rapid age, a breathless age of steam and electric telegraphs, and love no longer flies on old fashioned wings, but speeds along by lightning express. Miss Dangerfield was just seventeen—a feverish and impressionable age—of a susceptable and romantic turn of mind superinduced by a surfeit of poetry and novels, and she meets a young man, well dressed, well mannered, and handsomer than anything out of a frame. He's only Gaston Dantree, a good singer, and a penny a liner, but in her rosecolored imagination he is set up as a demigod, and she falls down and worships him. It's the way of her sex, and he takes all the worship as his right and due—the way of his sex—and keeps a bright look out for the eight thoucand a year.

'Well—I come. I find missy grown up tall, slim, spirited, proud, and not pretty. I find her like her mother, her mother whose memory I hate tonight, as I hated herself twenty years ago—I find her like her mother, resolute, passionate, self willed, and utterly spoiled. She has no thought that she is no other than she seems. She is in love, and determined to be married. Best of all, the man she loves is penniless, not the least in the world in love with her, only bent heart and soul on her fortune. Here is a glorious chance for me!

'Miss Dangerfield from the uplifted heights whereon petted heiresses dwell, does not deign to tolerate me. From the first she abhores me, and she is a hater. She does not remember me, of course; she doesn't know what good reason she has to be my enemy, but she hates me with an honest, open, hearty harted that is absolutely refreshing. She snubs me upon every occasion—she implores her father to give me money if I want it and turn me out of doors. If I didn't owe her mother that old grudge I should be force to owe her one on her own account.

'And Sir John does turn me out. Poor old soldier—it's a little hard on him. He wants to do right—deception and secrecy are foreign to his nature but how can he? He idolizes this girl; it will half kill her he knows to hear the truth; it will part her from her lover, break her heart, and make her hate him—unjustly, no doubt; but when was ever a woman just? And he clings to his secret with desperate tenacity, and pays me ten thousand pounds to keep it inviolate, and bids me go and return no more.

'I take the money—whoever refuses money?—and I go, but to return. I go to Paris; I enjoy myself and I wait And in England the lovers bill and coo, and the sword that hangs over their heads, upheld by a single thread they don't see.

'One week before the wedding day, I come quietly and unostentaiously to Castleford. I go to Peter Dangerfield in his lodgings; poor Mr. Peter, who doesn't dream he is wronged. I find him alone, gloomy and solitary, this Christmas Eve, while over at Scarswood waxlights burn, and yule-fires blaze, and Mr. Dantree kisses his bride-elect under the mistletoe, and and music and merriment reign. I find him alone, and very gloomy; he is thinking how this cruel Katherine jilted him and called him a rickety dwarf—how a dreary life of legal labour lies before him, and Scarswood will go to Gaston Dantree and his children. He thinking all this over his bachelor glass of grog, when I appear before him like the fairy godmother I am, and with one wave of my wand, lo! all things change. The haughty heiress falls from her pedestal and he becomes the heir! Scarswood will be his and his alone when Sir John dies. Pearls and diamonds drop from my lips, and he promises in a burst of generosity that the ten thousand pounds reward I ask shall gladly be mine.

'And the wedding night arrives, and we come out of the seclusion in which we have choosen to hide into the light of day. He goes for the bridegroom, he brings him to me through night, and storm and darkness, and I tell the truth. I tell him Katherine Dangerfield (so-called) is no more your daughter, no more your heiress, than I am; I tell him he has been grosslydecieved from first to last. He does not believe me—poor young man, it is not a pleasant thing to believe. Then I bring him here again through night, and storm and darkness, braving all things for the noble sake of truth, and I repeat before your face what I said behind your back. Sir John, and dare you deny it. I repeat that the girl who calls you father is no more your daughter or heiress than—'

She stopped short and rose up Among the shadows at the lower end of the room a darker shadow flickered.

A door had softly opened, a curtain had hidden the unseen listener till now.

A white hand pushed back the drapery—a white face emerged into the light.

It was the bride herself, in her shining robe, and orange wreath, and silvery veil, standing there and hearing every word.

CHAPTER XIV.

DAY OF WRATH! DAY OF GRIEF!

There was dead silence. All eyes fell upon her at once; all rose as she came gliding forward. Passionate, impetuous, impulsive, what would she say—what would she do?

In that dead silence she comes floating forward, a shining bridal vision—whiter than the robe she wore—white cold, calm. In all her life this girl never restrained one single emotion—now in the supreme hour of her life her pale face was as emotionless as thought carved in stone.

She came straight up to Sir John and looked him full in the face with her large solemn eyes.

'I have been there since you come in'—she pointed to the curtain recess and her voice had neither falter nor tremor. 'And I have heard every word Is it all true?'

He turned away from her and coverd his face with his hands with a sort of dry sobbing sound heard to hear.

'Is it all true?' she repeated slowly painfully. 'I want to know the worst.'

'Then Heaven pelp me! Yes Katherine, it is all true—all—all!'

And I am not your daughter?'

'You are not! Oh, my darling, forgive me. If I had loved you less, I might have had courage to tell you the truth.'

Her face had never changed from its stony calm—her dark, dilated eyes never left his.

'And this is the secret this woman has held over you so long; the secret I begged you to tell, and you would not—that I am not your child?'

'It is! Once more forgive me, Katherine!'

She lifted his worn, thin hand in both her own and kissed it.

'There can be no such word between you and me, papa. I only relize now how much I owe to you—how infinitely good you have been to me. You have been better than any father ever was to a child before, and I, how have I repaid you? But I wish I had known—I wish I had known. Mr. Dantree'—she turned to him for the first time; for the first time the brave voice faltered: 'what have you to say to all this!'

'That I have been grossly decieved, Mr. Dantree answered, lifting his gloomy eyes with sullen anger; grossly decieved from first to last.'

'But not by me. Do me at least that poor justice. And now'—she slowly drew nearer to him—'how is it to be? You swore you loved me, and me alone. Now is the time to prove your truth.'

He stood sulkily silent, shifting away, however, from the gaze of those solemn, searching eyes.

The spectators looked on; Mrs. Vavasor with a face of triumphant, malicious delight, Peter Dangerfield full of vengeful exultation, and the old baronet with eyes beginning to flash ominously. The silver shining figure of the bride stood on the hearth rug, the dull, red glow of the cinders lighting her luridly up, waiting for her false lover's answer.

It did not come; after that one fleeting glance, he stood staring doggedly into the fire.

'I am answered,' Katherine said; 'and all the warnings I received were right. I might have known it; I was a fool, and I am only reaping a fool's reward. It was the heires of Scarswood you wanted; the eight thousand a year you loved; not plain Katherine Dangerfield. Take your ring, Mr. Dantree, and thank Heaven, as I do, that the truth has come to light an hour before our marriage, instead of an hour after. Take your ring, and go!'

She drew it off and held it out to him.

He started up as if to obey.

'Curse the ring,' he exclaimed ferociously; 'throw it into the fire if you like. I don't want anything to remind me of this night's work. I say again,' raising his voice, 'I have been shamefully tricked and deceived. I'm a great deal more thankful than you can possibly be that the truth has come out in time. And now, as I suppose everything has been said that it is necessary to say, I may take my departure at once, and for all.

He siezed his hat and strode toward the door. But the tall, soldierly figure of the baronet interposed.

'Stop, sir,' he thundered, in that ringing voice which had often cheered his men on to fiercest battle; 'all has not been said that it is necessary to say. Do you mean that this revelation shall prevent the marriage? that in a word you refuse to marry my adopted daughter, because she is not heiress of Scarswood.'

Gaston Dantree met the old man's fiery flashing glance with sullen defiance.

'Precisely, Sir John; I refuse to marry your adopted daughter either to-night or at any future time. It was the heiress of Scarswood I wanted, not the plain young lady who, if she will pardon my saying it, made such very hard running upon me that—'

He never finished the sentence. With the cry and spring of a tiger, the Indian officer was upon him—all the stength of his youth back in his rage.

'Coward! liar! villain!' he thundered, grasping him by the throat.—'Cur! that it were slander to call man. Lie there.'

He grasped him by the throat, lifting the short, light form as though it were a child of three years, flung open the door, dragged him out on the landing, and with all the fury and might of madness, hurled him crashing down the oaken stairs.

Mrs. Vavasor's shieks rang through the house; Peter Dangerfield ran headlong down the stairs. With a dull thud bad to hear, Dantree had fallen on the oaken floor, and lay a bloody, mutilated heap now.

The uproar had roused the house; guests, servants, bridesmaids, all came flocking wildly out into the hall. Peter Dangerfield had lifted the head of the prostrate man to his knee, and was gazing into the death-like face, almost as death-like himself.

'Is he dead?

Captain De Vere asked the question, pressing impetuously through the throng. No one in that supreme hour asked what had happened; instinctively all seemed to know that he had refused, at the last moment, to marry Katherine Dangerfield.

The dark head moved a little, a faint moan of pain came from the livid lips. It was a terrible sight.—From a tremendous gash above the temple the bright blood gushed over face, and bosom, and hands.

'Not dead,' Peter Dangerfield answered, in a very subdued voice, 'De Vere, Graves and Otis are here somewhere, are they not? Send them along like a good fellow, and try and disperse the crowd in Heaven's name. They may as well go, you see we are not going to have a wedding to-night.'

Captain De Vere turned to obey—then paused. There was a shrill woman's cry frome above, in whose voice no one knew.

'Send for the doctor. Quick, quick, Sir John is in a fit.'

There was the sound of a heavy fall, of a stifled groan in one of the upper rooms then the shrieks of frantic women, the rapid hurrying of excited feet. Peter Dangerfield lifted his eyes from the ghastly gory face on his knee, and glanced darkly up.

'The plot thickens,' he muttered. Another fit! And the doctors warned him to take care; that a second might prove fatal. I am Peter Dangerfield to-night, and verily a man of little account. When the first sun os the New Year arises, I may be the richest baronet in Sussex!'

Out of the frightened throng of wedding guests two men made their way; Dr. Graves of Castleford, and his clever assistant, Mr. Henry Otis.

'You had best go up stairs. Dr. Graves, and see to Sir John, Sir John's nephew said, with grave authority. In this ericis of his life he seemed to rise with the occasian and take his place naturally, as next in command. 'Otis, look at this poor fellow, while I go and help De Vere to send these people to the right about.'

Somewhere in Peter Dangerfield's narrow head, talent, unspected heretofore, must have been stowed away. He got the excited, alarmed, and demoralized flock of well-dressed wedding guests to gether in the spacious drawing rooms, and made them a grave little speech.

'Ladies and gentlemen; friends and neighbors,' Mr. Dangerfield began in his piping little voice; 'dreadful and unexpected revelations nave come to light to night. Mr. Dantree in the basest manner has refused to marry Mis Dangerfield.' The infinite relish and delight with which the speaker said this was only known to nimself. 'I call her Miss Dangerfield still, although she has really no right to that name. We have all heen deceived,—She is not Sir John's daughter. Who she is he knows no more than you do. It was her fortune the dastardly adventurer from Louisiana sought; when he found that forfeited, he refused in most insolent language to marry ner. Sir John threw him down the stairs. It he is killed, it only served him right. Sir John himself, is in a fit of appoplexy. Under this sad circustance, I really must beg of you to leave us. Scarswood, from a house of wedding joy, has become a house of morning. Leave us my friends; it is all you can do for me now.'

Mr. Dangerfield put his handkerchief to his eyes in eloquent silence. And, awed, and terrified, the bridal company dispersed; only Squire Talbot and his sister, and the captain of the Plungers Purple, lingered in the stricken house.

Katherine Dangerfield not Katherine Dangerfield!—a nobody imposed upon them, the resident gentry of the country. Something of indignation mingled with the amaze and horror of the night's tragedy as these good people drove home under the inky, midnight sky. And if Gaston Dantree died, they wondered, would the law really hang a baronet?

Peter Dangerfield lingered in the dining room until the last carriage rolled away. And then what an awful silence fell upon the great house. Flowers bloomed everywhere, countless waxlights flashed upon the brilliant scene; a temporary altar, all roses and jassamine, stood in the centre of the room, and on the painted windows the Bloody Hand burned into the glass, gleamed redly out in the dazzling light. And master of the lord of this grandeur and luxury lay dying, perhaps, and he was next of kin! Peter Dangerfield strode hastily to the grand banqueting room, where the wedding feast was spread. Massive old silver, all bearing the Dangerfield crest and motto, weighed it down, crystal glittered in rainbow hues, flowers were here and everywhere.

'And to-morrow,' he thought, with secret exultation, 'all this may be mine.'

He poured out a glass of wine and drank it. As he replaced it a cold hand was laid upon his; a low voice spoke in his ear,

'I will take another if you please; my nerves are horribly shaken. I saw Gaston Dantree's face.' She shuddered as she said it, 'Good Heavens! what a night this has been.'

He turned and saw Mrs. Vavasor.

'You here still!' he said in no very gracious tone. She had done him good service, but the service was done, and, like all of his kind, he was ready to fling her asside. 'I should not think you would want to stay under this roof any longer than you can help—you of all people. If these two men die to-night, I wonder if their ghosts will haunt you. You talk about nerves, forsooth! Here, drink this and go. Scarswood's no place for you.'

'Grateful, my Peter,' murmured Mrs. Vavasor, as she took the glass; 'but I scarcely expected anything better. I can dispense with even your gratitude while I hold your promise to pay ten thousand down, remember, the very day that makes you Sir Peter.'

'You shall have it. Go, in Heaven's name! Don't let that girl—Katherine, you know—see you, or I believe we will have another tragedy before the night is over.'

He left her as he spoke. On the threshold he turned to say a last word.

'Drive the trap back to your quarters in Castleford, I will see you tomorrow, let things end which way they will. I am going to Sir John now. Go at once; good night.'

He ascended to the baronets room. Dr. Grave's was there, Katherine and Miss Talbot. The stricken soldier had been laid upon his bed, undressed and everything done fore him that it was possible to do. He lay rigid and stark, his heavy breathing the only sign of life.

'Well?' Peter Dangerfield said the word in a strained, tense sort of voice, and looked with eager, burning eyes at the medical man.

'I can give no definite answer as yet, Mr. Dangerfield,' the Dr. answered, coldly, turning his back upon him.

Peter Dangerfield drew a long breath. Death was written on every line of that ghastly bloodless face.—After a brief five months' reign, Sir John lay dying; dying childless, and he was heir-at-law!

He looked furtively at Katherine. She was standing motionless at the foot of the bed, gazing at the rigid form. She had removed nothing; not a flower; not a jewel; not even her gloves—veil, laces, and silk floated about her. Her face kept its changeless calm; her eyes their still, frozen look. It was horrible; it was fearful! He turned away with a shiver, and softly quited the room.

'Of all the ways I thought she would take it, I never thought of this,' he said to himself. 'Are all women like her. or is she unlike all women? I never understood her; to-night I understand her least of all.'

It was midnight now. He paused a moment at the oriel window to look out at the night. The storm had expended its fury, the rain and sleet had ceased. A wild north wind was blowing; it was turning bitterly cold. Up above, the storm drifts were scudding before the gale, a few frosty stars glimmered, and a wan moon lifted its palid face out of the distant sea. The new year gave promise of dawning brilliant and bright.

And this was to have been her wedding day, and the bridegroom lies dying down stairs. I would not spare her one pang if I could, but I must own it is hard on her.

He went softly down the long stairway, and into the lower room where they had borne Gaston Dantree. Mr. Otis was with him still, and Talbot and Devere.

'Is he dead?' Mr. Dangerfield demanded: He looked like it. They had washed away the blood, and bound up the wound. He lay with his eyes closed, and breathing faintly; but dead in his coffin, Gaston Dantree would never look more awfully corpse like than now.

Mr. Otis lifted his quiet eyes,

'No, Mr. Dangerfield—not even likely to die, so far as I can see. What is to be done with him? what—'

He stopped and recoiled, for into their midst a white figure glided, and whet straight up to the wounded man. It was Katherine. Everywhere she went, the shining bride-like figure seemed to contradict the idea of death. Her eyes had a fixed, sightless sort of stare. like the eyes of a sleep walker; her face was the hue of snow. Noiseless, soundless, like a spirit she moved in her white robes, until she stood beside the man she had loved, looking down upon him as he lay.

NO MORE HARD TIMES.—If you will stop spending so much on fine clothes, rich food and style, buy good healthy food, cheaper and better clothing, get more real and substantial things of life every way, and especially stop the foolish habit of employing expensive, quack doctors or using so much of the vile humbug medicine that does you only harm, and put your trust in that simple, pure remedy, Hop Bitters that cures always at a trifling cost, you will see good times and have good health.—Chronicst.

A CHRISTMAS IDYL.

The printer, as a general rule, is an honest disingenuous, open minded, individual, who would no more think of imposing on a generous and appreciative public than he would of taxing that same discerning public one dollar for a two dollar and a half paper. Yet how often does he persuade his readers under an attracting heading and a thrilling introduction to open his mind for the reception of something amusing, inspiring or horrible only to find when all his faculties are aroused for the denouement that he has stumbled head first over the beauties of Spring Blossom, or the infallible properties of St. Jacobs Oil. And the ways invented by the ambitious advertiser to attract and impress upon the public the value of his wares demonstrate more forcibly than anything else can, the importance of the newspaper and the invaluable accessory it is to the busines man who understands how to use it. When we find the manager of an Opera House expatiating upon the pure and unalloyed enjoyment which can be obtained at his place of resort and then going on to describe how he was afflicted with rheumatism and how St. Jacob gave him full and speedy relief, it may be taken for granted that he understands the value of advertising and how to get it cheap, and that his rheumatism was more of the pocket than of the knee. St. Jacob, we doubt not, relieved in this instance an affliction many suffer under, though not among those ills which it is advertised to remedy. It oiled the wheels of life, drew full houses and took the "crick" out of the back with very few applications. St. Jacob is king on the Continent just now, because he has a good article and understands how to let the world know it, and knowing it, require to use it. How many men let their light shine under a bushel, when by using the proper medium in the proper way, it might shine full and clear in the view of the community. The drug stores might be filled with St. Jacobs Oil, and its remarkable properties might excel anything which has yet been said about it, yet it would remain a drug but for the newspapers, which bring it daily before the notice of thousands of readers. Read your newspapers, and the best one in your locality is the first thing that a man who would succeed must do, and the second is advertise in it. Begin the year well by devising liberally in the way of advertising for 1882, and if any doubt is felt as to the success of such a determination, procure a bottle of St. Jacobs Oil and apply straightaway to the loosening and strengthening of the joints, which have grown stiff by traveling so long in the old-fashioned ruts.

DOMESTIC PERPLEXITIES.

I got acquainted with a young widow who lived with her step daughter in the same house. I married the widow. My father soon after fell in love with the step daughter of my wife, and married her. My wife thus became the Mother-in-law and also the daughter-in-law of my own father. My wife's stepdaughter is my stepmother, and I am the stepfather of my mother-in-law. My Stepmother who is the stepdaughter of my wife has a boy, who is naturally my step brother, because he is the son of my father and of my stepmother; but, because he is the son of my wife's step daughter, so is my wife the grandmother of the little boy, and I am the grandfather of my stepbrother. My wife has also a boy; my stepmother is consequently the stepsister of my boy, and is also his grandmother, because he is the child of her stepson; and my father is the brother-in-law of my son, because he has got his step siste for a wife. I am the brother of my own son, who is the son of my stepmother. I am the brother-in-law of my own mother, my wife is the aunt of her own son, my son is the grandson of my father, and I am my own grandfather.

Dr. Vincent Richards, who is experimenting on the efficacy of permanganate of potash as an antidote for the poison of the cobra, writes to the Indian Medical Gazett that he has obtained some very remarkable results. When permanganate of potash was mixed with cobra poison and hypodermically injected no fatal result followed, although a fatal dose of poison was used and the mixture injected into the vein. He adds, however that before any definite opinion can be formed many experiments will have to be performed, not only with cobra, but also with vipor poison. The St. Jame's Gazzett remarks that under the Vivisection act, Dr. Vincent Richards could not perform these experiments in England without a couple of license from the Home Secretary and running the risk of a criminal prosecution and public vituperation at the hands of the anti-vivisectionists. The importance of such investigations is shown in the statement that between twenty and thirty thousand people die from snake bite every year in India.

A PUBLIC MEETING Should be called of the citizens of every city, town and village in the Dominion, to consider what should be done to prevent the hair from turning Grey—and falling out. If this important question received their earnest consideration they would unanimously decide that science had at last discovered something that would answer this purpose—and furthermore would recommend Cingalese Hair Renewer as being this something for restoring the hair to its natural color, and prevent its falling out. 50 cents per bottle. Ford, 103; J. Stinson, 85; J. B. Thibaudeau, 69; R. McLaughrey, 75; S. Douglas, 48; Annie Might, 50.

FIRST AND SECOND DIVISIONS.—Canadian History, max. 200—S. Davis, 105; Herbert Irwin, 165; Wm. Davis, 95; Agnes White, 135; Joseph Stinson, 172; Robert McLoughrey, 148; Millie Lyons, 57; Minnie Douglas, 74; Martha Anderson, 104; Samuel Douglas, 80; Robert Benson, 106; Robt. J. Brown, 120; Frank Arnold, 67; Annie Might, 11; W. J. Douglas, 98; Mary Porter, 79; Mamie Bowes, 168; Lizzie Kay, 148; Ettie Ford, 173; E. S. Rutledge, 60.

We notice from the above that the pupils of the second division have thrown those of the first division considerably in the shade, and it is quite possible and very probable, that many of the juniors may carry off the intermediate laurels from the seniors if they do not soon awake from their lethargy.

THIRD DIVISION.—Spelling, max. 100—C. Bryden, 48; Lizzie Thibaudeau, 53; Maggie Bailey, 80; T. Benson, 60; Edith Noble, 80; Fred Stephens, 88; Minnie Dundas, 84. Grammar, max. 150—C. Bryden, 75; Ellie Thibaudeau, 125; Maggie Bailey, 47; Thos. Benson, 50; E. Noble, 78; F. Stephens, 155; Minnie Dundas, 79; Mary Benson, 63; Maggie Milsap, 35; A. S. Wilson, 40. Geography, max. 150—C. Bryden, 35; E. Thibaudeau, 80; Maggie Bailey, 25; Thos. Benson, 47; Edith Noble, 12; Fred Stephens, 95; Minnie Dundas, 75; Mary Benson, 37; Maggie Milsap, 10; A. S. Wilson, 75. Arithmetic, max. 150—C. Bryden, 40; E. Thibaudeau, 142; Maggie Bailey, 30; Thos. Benson, 48; Edith Noble, 35; Fred Stephens, 145; Minnie Dundas, 78; Mary Benson, 40; Maggie Milsap, 31; A. S. Wilson, 50.

Fred Stephens, Ellie Thibaudeau, and Minnie Dundas have succeeded in passing for the second division.

Of those who tried the promotion examination from the second to the first department, Joseph Clark, Geo. Wilson, George Bowes, and Herbert Brown were successful.

R. D. IRVINE, Teacher.

PRESENTATION AND ADDRESS.

To MR. H. MELDRUM,

Flesherton Station Agent.

DEAR MELDRUM,—We, the shippers recievers of goods by the T. G. & B., Railway, on the eve of its completion to the Standard Gauge, knowing the disadvantages you have labored under in the past, as the Flesherton agent, owing to unsatisfactory condition of the road, and want of rolling stock—many times subjecting you to uncomplimentary remarks, not by any acts of your personally, and censured for disappointments of shippers, which were beyond your control.

Feeling a deep gratitude to you for the efforts you have made to relieve the pressing demand, the careful conveying and consigning of goods entrusted to your care, take this opportunity of showing our appreciation of your pastattention to our wants, and esteem by which you are held by us by presenting you with this Tea Service and clock, as a light token of respect; and at the same time wishing you the compliments of the season, hoping you may live long to fill the important position of Flesherton agent of the T. G. & B. R., and when the train of time shall convey you from us, may the Great Master reward all your efforts.

Signed by

Wm. L. Young for A. Macpherson,

Flesherton, Dec. 29, '81.

The presentation was made by S. Damude, in the easy graceful manner of that gentleman, after which Mr. Meldrum replied in feeling terms, expressing his surprise and at the same time thanking the merchants and shippers for the tokens and confidence they had expressed for the occasion, that he had been presented to some extent, nevertheless he would treat the parties in a business like manner. The company's books were to be seen, and they would show whether he had shown partiality or not. Mr. J. W. Armstrong addressed the little company of villagers in a few shosen and appropriate words, and called on Mr. R. J. Sproule, who spoke of Mr. Meldrum in terms most gratifying, and scorned the idea of any reference being made to the books to establish Mr. Meldrum's conduct as an agent.

And each of the above mentioned gentlemen, in turn, threw in their mite in contributing to the happiness of Mr. Meldrum and themselves, after which there was a plentyful supper of oysters and other viands, to which ample justice was done.

The sociable little company seperated at an early hour, after a very enjoyable time, and wishing Mr. Meldrum and family a happy new year.

COUNTY COUNCIL.

The Council met on Wednesday evening Dec. 21. Dr. Christoe, Warden in the chair. The Warden read several communications, and addressed the Council in reference to matters to come before them.

On motion of Mr. Middleton, seconded by Mr. Fox, it was decided to petition the Postmaster General for two mails per day on the T. G. & B., the petition to be entrusted to Mr. Lane, Messrs. Jackson and Sproule asked to co operate with him.

After some unimportant business, the Council adjourned till Thursday at 2 p. m.

THURSDAY AFTERNOON

Mr. Sing presented report of Property committee, recommending payment of account for repairs to South Grey Registry Office; also some other accounts. The report was passed.

Mr. Howey presented a petition from a number of ratepayers with reference to judicial expense, which was refered to Finance committee.

Mr. McKechine presented report of the Finance committee. It recommended with reference to appointment of County Engineer. A communication from Provincial Secretary with reference to salary of Gaol Physician was recommended to be laid over till January session. A petition to the Legislature to abolish second selections of Jurors was recommended in response to communication from the Co. of Elgin. The committee did not see their way clear to make any recommend with reference to grant to Provincial Exhibition.

The report was adopted.

A by law was introduced to establish a fair at holstein.

Council adjourned till Friday morning.

FRIDAY MORNING.

The Warden read statements from the County Treasurer of the accounts with the different townships.

Mr. Mckechnie presented report of the Finance Commmittee, which referred to a gratifying decrease in jury expenses during the present year; but as the other matters refered to in petition were beyond jurisdiction of Council, no action was recommended.

The Warden read the report of committee on the matter on school section boundry in Sullivan.

The Council went into committee on the report of Finance committee, Mr. Abbott in the chair. A lengthy discussion ensued, in which the feeling was very generally expressed that there should be a further extension of the jurisdiction of the Divisiun Courts but the other things asked for in the petition were not thought desirable. It was eventually decided to refer the report back to put in a clause recommending the extension of the jurisdiction of Division Courts.

Mr. McColman introduced a by-law to confirm a by law of the township of Collingwood.

By law to establish fair at Holstein was passed through its various stages.

Mr. Sing presented a report of Co Property Committee, recommending payment of several accounts. The report was adopted.

On motion of Mr. Fox, the sum of $25 was allowed to the Registrar, and he to look after the heating of the building.

Mr. McKechnie presented second report of Finance committee, which was adopted.

The sum of $20 was voted to the Chairman of Public Property Committee, and $15 to the Chairman of Finance Committee, as recoginition of extra services during the year.

On motion of Messrs. McNicholand, Sing, the thanks of the Council was presented to the warden, with $100 in appreciation of his services, and $50 to cover incidental expenses. Messrs. Howey and McGirr moved in amendment to make the whole amount $100, but the amendment was lost.

By laws Nos. 297, 298 were put through the remaining stages and passed.

The reported of the Education Committee was adopted.

Moved by Mr. Kennedy, seconded by Mr. McNaught, that a petition in the ordinary form, sined by the Warden and sealed with a coporate seal, be forwarded to the Ontario Government praying that the agreement entered in to between the Grand Trunk Railway Companies, dated 13th May last, be legalized by an act of the Ontario Legislature.—Car.

Messrs. Murdock and Blyth moved in amendment to leave it to the Government to do as they considered best for the interest of the Country. The amendment was lost.

The Council adjourned till Saturday morning.

SATURDAY MORNING.

There being no quorum present, the Council adjourned.—O. S. Times.

OSPREY.

Osprey is rather quiet just now that the holidays are over. People have to settle down to business the same as ever.

Mr. Stinson, of Maxwell, is building an addition to his store, and intends opening out a first-class stock in the spring.

We lost all our snow on the 8th, and now we are praying for more.

St. Mary's Church, Maxwell, was re-opened for public worship on the 1st of January, after being thoroughly refitted. The above building is now a credit to the managers and contractor for the neat and elegant style in which it has been finished.

The annual meeting of Hickling Grange No. 381 was held in Brother Hickling's house. Moved and seconded that a vote of thanks be tendered to Brother and Sister Hickling for their courtesy, and the efficient manner in which they have conducted the business of this grange during the past year—carried unanimously. By the auditors' statement of Brother Hickling's books the assets over the liabilities amounts to $107.89. After a pleasant evening spent in discussing matters pertaining to the grange the members separated well pleased with the past success and future encouraging prospects of the grange. The following officers were then elected for the ensuing year:—Master, Bro. J. Hickling; Overseer, Bro. W. Inkster; Lecturer, Bro. R. Cooper; Steward, Bro. W. W. Hickling; Asst. Bro. W. Moffat; Chaplain, Bro. Wright; Treas., Bro. W. Hopper; Secretary, Bro. F. Whewell; Gatekeeper, Bro. J. Inkster; Ceres, Sister Ann Inkster; Pomona, Sister Janet Inkster; Flora, Sister Mrs. H. Wright; L. A. S., Sister S. W. Hickling; Delegate, Bro. J. Inkster; Auditors, Bros. F. Whewell and W. Inkster.

FEVERSHAM.

The above named place has been rather lively for the past few weeks, the return of sleighing had made business lively. Election on Monday, every one quiet and sober owing to our hotel keeper, Mr. McAlear, closing his Bar during the day which speaks volumes in his favor as it was the only one in the Township closed.

A social was given in the Presbyterian Church on the 23rd Dec. which was well patronised the church being crowded to its utmost capacity. After enjoying an excellent tea. The chair was taken by Mr. C. Neil who added greately to the eyening, enjoyment by his drollery. Music was furnished by the Feversham and McIntyre Choirs, addresses were delivered by the Rev. Messrs. Hall and Chisholm, and a reading by W. G. Alister. Proceeds amount, to $81, which were appropriated to the church fund.

A social was also given in the school house on the 27th Dec. by the pupils of S. S. No. 7, Osprey as a farewell entertainment for the Teacher who has retired. The school house was very tastefully decorated by the children, and the children and elder ones responded bravely, as the house was filled until there was scarcly standing room. Tea being served, the chair was taken by Mr. M. Curts. Music was furnished by the Feversham and Buckingham Choirs, and addresses were delivered by Rev. Messrs. Hall, Noble, Chisholm, Stevenson, Mr. McGirr Reeve of Osprey and Trustees of the school, each expressing his sorrow and regret at parting with the Teacher. Readings were given by W. L. B. Hamlin, and Master Robt. Bates, Resetations by Misses Alice Hall and Martha McAlear, a dialogue by Master Robt. Bates and W. McAlean. After the programme was ended the pupils presented the Teacher with a writing desk accompanied with the following address;

MR ALISTER, Dear Teacher—We the pupils of the S. S. 7. Osprey, who have been so much benefited by your tuition during the past year, learning with deep regret that you are about to leave us, desire to present you with this desk as a token of our esteem for you, not because of its intrinsic value, but as a scuvenir of respect. As you look upon it in days to come you may think of us, whom you leave behind and rest asured that whatever may be our lot in this life we shall not forget the happy hours we have spent with you. And if we should never be permitted to meet again in this life we hope and pray that it may be our happy lot to meet in that better land where parting is unknown. In behalf of Pupils S. S. No. 7. Osprey,

THOS BATES.
W. J. MCGIRR.

Mr. Alister made a suitable reply and expressed great regret at having to part with his pupils. After this all repaired to their respective homes well satisfied with the evening, entertainment.

EUGENIA.

From a Correspondent.

The annual Grange supper of Eugenia Grange is appointed for the 18th January. Admission, 40c. per couple. Tickets can be had from any of the members. A good time is expected as usual. Some of our big guns are expected to be present and deliver addresses. Ye editor, is hereby required and notified to put in an appearance. Supper from 4 to 5 o'clock p. m.

J. B. Sloan narrowly escaped what might have been a fatal accident. A piece of scantling fell from the upper story cutting his head severely and stunning him for some time. He is getting along all right again, although his head requires bandaging.

The Municipal contest in Ward No. 4, Artemesia township, between Messrs. Hanley, Pedlar and Webster, resulted as followes:

PRICEVILLE.

From our Correspondent.

In the report of the supper given to Mr. M. C. Black, late Principal of the Priceville school, we made a mistake ing giving the name of the hotel in which it was held. We should have said the Crown Hotel instead of the Commeccial.

Two of the old stock of Priceville have been laid in their last resting place lately—Mrs. McDonald, the relict of him who formerly owned the mills, and her son, "Little Dan"

COUNTY ITEMS.

POLICE TRUSTEES.

The election of Police Trustees for this village, for 1882, passed off very quietly on Monday last, 2nd inst. The following gentlemen were elected:—Messrs. S. Damude, A. Munshaw and W. Clayton. By this it will be seen we have a Trustee for the East end of the village, one for the West end and one for the centre.—Advance.

VERY NARROW ESCAPE.

On Wednesday last our good citizen, Mr. Wm. Wright had a very narrow escape from death. It appears Mr. Wright was driving down the hill at the Orange Hall near Flesherton station, in a cutter, when, happening to look around, he was startled to see a team of horses and sleigh tearing down the hill behind him at a furious rate. To remain in the rig and attempt to drive out of the way. Mr. Wright knew would be almost likely to be attended with fatal results. With rare presence of mind, he took the situation in at a glance, and threw himself from the cutter; and almost at the same instant the runaway team came in collision with his vehicle, and literally smashed it into atoms. The runaways came to a stand opposite Mr Jeremiah Pipers place.

How Mr. Wright's horse escaped injury is a miracle.—Flesherton Advance.

A very serious accident occurred on the 9th line, St. Vincent, yesterday, which came very near resulting fatally to a young man named Albert Lemon, son of James Lemon, Walters' Falls. He was driving along the 9th line on a load of grain when a team belonging to Mr. A. Blanchard attached to a load of wood coming down Acheson's Hill started to runaway. Young Lemon jumped off his load and stood in the middle of the road to stop the runaways, when he was knocked down by the horses and ran over and dragged under the loaded sleigh for several rods. He was very badily bruised, and also received a severe wound on the forehead, which was stiched up by Dr. Parsons, who on being sent for arrived about two hours after the accident just after the young man was regaining consciousdess.—Monitor.

A GOOD THING TO KNOW.

Professor Herrmann, the wonderful magician, known throughout the world for his skill, used St. Jacobs Oil for a severe attack of rheumatism in the shoulder, and was cured by it. He considers St. Jacobs Oil valuable preparation.

NEWS NOTES.

Even should Guitteau be convicted and sentenced this week his execution could not take place until May, owing to the existence of a statute in the District of Columbia under which a sentence of death cannot be executed until thirty days after the beginning of the next term of the court succeeding that at which sentence is pronounced.

The surgeons who attended President Garfield in his last illness are said to have agreed among themselves as to the remuneration they should respectively receive. According to this arrangement Dr. Bliss wants $50,000, Drs. Agnew and Hamilton $25,000 each, Dr. Reyburn $8,000, and Dr. Boynton and Mrs. Edson $1,000 each. It is altogether probable, however, that the Congressional committee which is considering their claims will recommend that they be paid from six to eight thousand dollars each, and have done with it.

The Marquis of Lorne and Princess Louise spent Christmas with the Queen.

Yesterday morning between 11 and 12 o'clock Mr. Thomas Boustead, a son of Ald. Boustead, of Toronto walked into his room, put a pistol to his forehead, and shot himself dead. No cause has been assigned for the melancholy act.

A bill is to be introduced at Washington for the gradual retirement of greenbacks and national bank notes. The bill will repeal the tax on bank cheques and on the deposits and capital stocks of banks not issuing circulating notes

THE SUICIDAL MANIA.

HIS LIFE DESPAIRED OF

OWEN SOUND, Jan. 10.—To day John Sparrow, an old resident of the Town, committed suicede by hanging himself. Shortly before noon he went out of the house towards the barn; nothing unusual was noticible in his manner. When dinner was ready a member of the family went out to call him. Getting no response to the call, he proceeded to the barn, where Sparrow was found suspended by a rope which was attached to a beam. No cause is at preasant assigned for the deed, but it is believed he was troubled at times with a delirious mind, and had frequently threatened to commit suicide.

This shocking occurrence was followed by the report that another attempt at suicide had been made, which proved true, although at present without a fatal result. Walter Elliot, labourer, made an attempt on his life earley this morning by cutting his throat with an axe, and afterwards battering his head with the same weapon to complete the work. He was, however, frustrated in the act, and placed in charge of the chief constable, who conveyed, him to gaol. Elliot is a young man, and recently married. The caus which led to the attempted committal of such an act are unknown. His wounds are of a serious nature, and to night slight hopes are entertained of his recovery.

A PUBLIC MEETING Should be called of the citizens of every city, town and village in the Dominion, to consider what should be done to prevent the hair from turning Grey—and falling out. If this important question received their earnest consideration they would unanimously decide that science had at last discovered something that would answer this purpose—and furthermore would recommend Cingalese Hair Renewer as being this something for restoring the hair to its natural color, and prevent its falling out. 50 cents per bottle. For sale by all Druggists.

Correspondence.

NOTICE.—We wish it distinctly understand that we do not hold ourselves reponsible for the opinions expressed by our correspondence

TO THE RATEPAYERS OF WARD NO. 2,

GENTLEMEN—I hereby tender you my thanks for your support at the late election, and especially to the Meaford Road and visinity for their almost unanimous support, notwithstanding the statement to the contrary by Mr. Brodie, your Meaford Road Correspondent. I think it most unfair for a correspondent to make use of the columns of a local paper to injure a candidate. If it had been from my opponent I would not have thought anything of it. If he had written long enough before the election for me to have replied to it, I would not have thought so bad of it. People would naturally think from Mr. Brodie's statement, that if I did not get the above support it would be useless for them to turn out. If the entire vote that turned out had been polled correctly, the majority would have been sixteen. Two of my votes were a few seconds too late. I also lost two by ballots being badly marked. I had enough votes left in the Ward to have turned the scale if they had turned out.—Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for space in your valuable columns,

I remain, yours truly,

THOS. BOLAND.

MASSACRE OF 1,200 MEN IN ZULU LAND.

Details have been recieved of the dreadful massacre which lately took place in the territory of Hamu, one of 13 appointed Zulu chiefs. It appears that the massacre was of a most unprovoked and cruel character, Hamu he seized the cattle of the Abaqulusi tribe, and the latter were disposed to resist it if not to retaliate, but were pacified and induced to disperse by the assurance that Mr. Osborne the British Resident would inquire into the matter. A certain proportion of the tribe including the chief and most of the headsmen, remained in order to see Mr. Osborne. Hamu, however did not give them this oportunity. His force at once fell upon them and killed about 1,200 men. The bloodthirsty warriors subsequently spread over the country and seized a number of kraals belonging to the Abuqulusi, murdring whereever they found them many women as well as men who were unable to escape. It appears that when Hamu saw Mr. Osborne he actually asked him for a pass that he might send to the Transvaal and recover such of the Abaqulusi cattle as had escaped. Of course the pass was refused, but unfortunately the impression is said to prevail among the Zulus that England is the cause of all this misery and bloodshed. Two natives—Minishaue and Milwana—in giving an account of these deplorable occurrances, said: "Truly we Zulus did not kill in the old days of Panda and Cetywayo; we just jostled one another, and few were hurt. It is you Englishmen who have taught people to kill" It is certain that the Zulus ought no longer to have imposed upon them chiefs who are adepts in the work of massacre, and whose chief object apparently is to enrich themselves by the plunder of the tribes whose extermination they have effected.

Nero fiddled while Rome was burning, and W. J. McFarland, and his large staff off clerks, are busy selling goods while his neighbors spend their time collecting dust from their goods and counters.

A credit auction sale is announced to take place at lot 21 con. 9, Glenelg on Tuesday the 17th, of farm stock and implements. 12 months credit.

During the past week, Chatsworth has had an increase of seventeen in her population. A woman with sixteen children has taken up her residence in that village.

An Orange Soiree will be held in the Orange Hall Markdale, on Tuesday, Jan., 17th, when several talented speakers are expected. Tea served at 6 o'clock p. m. Tickets 25c.

THE WEATHER.—On Sunday last, a steady rain all day, which swept the snow almost all away, a change, however, took place during the night, showers of snow fell on Monday.

A pointed criticism need not necessarily be written with a fine pointed pen; one of Esterbrook's medium or broad pointed pens will answer as well. Ask your stationer for them.

Grey Division Grange, No. 2, will hold their semi annual meeting in the Markdale Grange Hall, one mile north of Markdale, on Thursday the 26th, Jan., commencing at 10 o'clock a. m.

NOTICE.—The party who took the firewood from my wood pile, one night last week, will please return or pay for it by the 20th Jan., or I shall have them arrested, as they are known.

An Orange Soiree is announced to take place In Orange Hall, Edgerton's corners, Lot 28, 13th con. Proton, about 4 miles south of Dundalk. A good staff of speakers is expected. Tickets 25c. For full particulars see bills.

The first meeting of the new councils will take place the third Monday in January, in the several Townships. The date of the first sitting is the same in all Townships by act of Parliment and must be held in the same place as last meeting of old council.

Mr. James Black, son of Mr. John Black of this village, was presented with an engrossed address, accompanied by a Gold Watch, by the Commercial Travellers Association, for his labor in maturing the insurance scheme in connection with that body.

Dr. Carson's Pulmonary Cough Drops are an excellant Expectorant loosening the phlegm far more readily than any other preparation. For Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Tickling in the Throat and Soreness and Tightness of the Chest, they have no equal. In large bottles at 50 cents. A. Turner and Co. Special Agents Markdale.

The annual meeting of Glenelg Ag. Society was held in Dufferin Hall, on Thursday, the 12th inst., when the following were elected officers for '82: President, Wm. Douglas, re-elected; Vice-President, Edward Rutledge, jr.; Sec.-Treas., A. Butter; Directors—J. Davis, James Lauder, Geo. Hassett, S. Boyce, F. Burton, James Struthers, Thomas Davis, H. Mathewson, and Alexander Mercer. Further particulars next week.

We are requested to say that the Police Trustees intend putting the law in force, in regard to children over 6 years old not attending school. It is not only a violation of the law, but a loss to the section, as they only draw government money for those who attend school. Parents will therefore do well to attend to this matter without delay.

ACCIDENT.—An accident of a very serious nature happened at the raising of the Flesherton Station Flour Mills, on Tuesday evening. The raising was well advanced when night came on, and in raising one of the plates, it rolled off the pikes, and crushed Mr. Alfred Malloy, breaking his arm above the elbow. The bone was badly fractured besides the break. He was at once removed to his home in Flesherton, 1½ miles from where the accident occurred, Dr. Christoe was immediately called in, and set the broken arm. It is feared, however, that it may yet have to be amputated.

A good preventative for Fever, Ague and Bilious Disorders is Dr. Carson's Stomach and constipation Bitters a strictly vegetable preparation. They tone the system, purify the Blood and increase the appetite, and render those taking them almost proof against disease, should be used in every case instead of pills. A. Turner and Co. Special Agents Markdale.

We have made arrangements since our last issue, whereby, we are enabled to give as a premium, to every subscriber who will pay a year in advance for our paper, a book containing 100 pages, entitled. A treatees on the horse, and his diseases. The book is worth 50cts., and every person who has a horse should have one, we will have them on hand in about a week.

Never neglect a Cough or Cold as they are very apt to lead to serious Lung troubles. Dr. Carson's Pulmonary Cough Drops have a wonderfull effect in relieving and curing Coughs Colds and all affections of the throat and Lungs. As Dr. Carson is a well known Canadian physician of over 25 years successful practice, there is little wonder that his Remedies are so popular with the Canadian people. A. Turner and Co. Royal District Lodge, of Holland, met at the Lodge room of L.O.L. No. 176, Berkley, on the 10th of Jan. '82, when the following officers were elected and dully installed:—Bro. Geo. Fleming, W. M.; John Gillespie, D. D. M.; Thos. Abbott, D. Treas.; Jas. Welsh, D. Sect.; Walter Crawford, D. Chaplain; Andrew Ritchey, District Director of Ceremonies.

The entertainment given in Williamsford on the 21st Dec., in aid of the C.M. Church building fund was a success, though the roads were in a fearful state, and the rain poured down in torrents. There was about $40 realized, besides a collection, which was taken up during the evening, bringing the whole amount to about $60. The above should have appeared long ago, but our reporter neglected his duty.

Loyal Orange Lodge No. 167, met in their hall, Berkley, on the 3rd of Jan., 1881, when the following officers were elected:—Bro. Geo. Fleming, W.M.; re-elected John Gillespie, D.M.; re-elected Andrew Walker, Treasurer; Walter Crawford, Sect.; Andrew Gillespie, Chaplain; Edward Brown, D. of C.; Committee, 1st John Middleton, 2nd R. J. Boyd, 3rd Andrew Ritchey, 4th Geo. Ritchie, 5th David Jackson.

The social given in Mrs. and Mr. McIntyre's house on Wednesday evening, was a very enjoyable affair. The house is large and was well lit up. Our generous and respected citizens, Mr. and Mrs. McIntyre, did all in their power to make those present feel at home, and we are glad to say their efforts were in vain. There were quite a number from the country and also from Flesherton. The amusements were entered into with a zest and all appeared to enjoy themselves heartily. The proceeds amounted to $20. The ladies of the society kindly thank the friends for their timely and liberal patronage, and feel incourage to go forward. The next social will be held on the evening of the 24th inst., in the house of Mr. Thos. Murray, Glenelg.

DUNDALK.

(From the Herald.)

It seems strange in our wintery climate to see waggons and buggies on the roads every day at this season of the year.

Dundalk is becoming an important station on the T., G. & B. Railway. There were loaded and shipped in three days last week 21 car loads of grain.

Business is good, and if the sleighing continues we may expect a good time in Dundalk. There are large quantities of grain, wood, telegraph poles and hay coming in daily.

The Fair was not as largely attended as we expected. There were a number of cattle on the ground with but few buyers. Prices ranged fair. There was a large quantity of grain from a distance.

We notice that W. H. Hewetson has several cases of goods ex. S. S. Circassian, which we hear contains silks, cashmeres, and other European dry goods. They were passed through the customs last week, and will be offered at very low prices.

W. H. Peterson has his new Woollen Mill in full working order. Mr. Peterson deserves credit for his energy and push, as it is only about two months ago since he purchased the lots to build on, and now he has every thing complete.

An Entertainment will be given in the Orange Hall Dundalk, by the Y. M. P. B. Society on Friday, January 20th. An able staff of speakers are expected among other names on the bill are T. S. Sproule, M. P., A. W. Lauder, M P.P., and W. Jelly, M.P.P.

An auction sale of farm stock and implements will take place on the farm of Mr. Lawrence Breen, lot 253, con. 2, West of T. & S. Road Melancthon, on the 2nd of February. This is an extensive sale. Mr. Breen having a large stock which will be sold without reserve as he is going west. Terms all sums over $5, 11 months credit on approved paper. 20 tons of well saved hay will be sold for cash.

The Masquerade Carnival at the rink was largely attended. The Masquers were well represented. There was a large attenance of visitors, and all seemed to fully enjoy themselves. The entertainment was enlivened by instrumental music:—D. Strachan, organist, J. McMillan violinist, and Professor Ketchum cornetist. The following characters were represented in costume;—Fairy Queen Sisters, Misses Rundle and Philips; Flower Girl, J. C, Atkinson; Swell Gent, W. Bull; Chines, D. McQuarrie; Irish Gentleman, Fred Middleton; Fat Man, R. Whitley; Tall Man, W. Rundle. Squaw, D. Vodden; Indian Summer, Thomas Lakings; Clown, W. Shaw. Best lady's costume, Misses Rundel and Phillips; best gent's costume, Wm. Bull, for which prizes were given by Mr. Stienhoff, the proprietor. The refreshment rooms were well patronized. All that could be desired on such an occasion was se ed by two ladies and one gent waiter. This was one of the best entertainments of the season. The best of order prevailed. We do not hesitate to say that Dundalk can boast of the best skating rink North of Toronto.

AROUND THE WORLD.

TIMELY WARNING.

Now is the season for sudden colds and distressing coughs, treat them with Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam, it cures influenza, asthma, croup, whooping cough, bronchitis, and all pulmonary complaints leading to consumption.

A Memphis tin man now thinks there is something in spiritualism after all, for he has been offered $1,000 for an old clock which has lately taken to striking in a mysterious manner, answering, according to an accepted code, all manner of impertinent questions which visitors ask about their futures.

GUILTY OF WRONG.—Some people have a fashion of confusing excellent remedies with the large mass of "patent medicines," and in this they are guilty of a wrong There are some advertised remedies fully worth all that is asked for them, and one at least we know of—Hop Bitters. The writer has had occasion to use the Bitters in just such a climate as we have most of the year in Bay City, and has always found them to be first class and reliable, doing all that is claimed for them.—Tribune

The exodus of negroes from Edgefield, S. C., and its vicinity has reached rather discouraging proportions. Not a negro is left upon some of the plantations. The colored preacher Hammond who incited the people to remove and collected a considerable amount of money with which to visit Arkansas and provide accommodations for his followers has not been heard from since his departure. It is feared that he is an adroit and despicable knave, though many of the negroes still retain their confidence in him.

HAD SUFFERED MANY PHYSICIANS.

And grew no better but rather worse. Mr. D. H. Howard, of Geneva, N. Y., after dismissing his physicians, tried nearly half a gross of the various blood and liver remedies advertised, with no benefit; when one bottle of Burdock Blood Bitters cured him of paralysis and General Debility. At the advanced age of 60, he says he feels young again, and is overjoyed at his wonderful recovery.

The freshmen of Brown University, in Providence, ordered their annual dinner of a caterer, and prepared to have an elaborate good time, including speeches and songs. At the time appointed, they marched in procession to the dining hall, with banners flying and appetites sharp. They found the tables littered with scant remnants of the feast, which had been eaten by the sophomores, who had imposed themselves on the caterer, and induced him to get the dinner ready an hour earlier.

"DON'T GIVE UP THE SHIP"

Were the memorable words of Commodore Perry. We repeat, "Don't Give up the ship," poor, despairing invalid, but try Burdock Blood Bitters. It cures others why not you? It renovates, regulates and tones all the organs of secretion, and restores lost Vitality.

The trustees of Fitch's Home for the soldiers, at Darien, Conn., announce that it has been refitted at the expense of its aged founder, and is now ready for the reception of disabled soldiers, or such aged and infirm persons, male or female, without regard to creed, as may need its shelter, according to the charter given by the Legislature of Connecticut in 1864. It is hoped that the institution will commend itself to the favorable attention of the public, and that by its assistance and generosity a large number of worthy persons may receive the comforts of a home.

LAME BACK.

Lumbago, Kidney complaint, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, and all pain and inflammation are speedily cured with Hagyards Yellow Oil. Croup, sore throat, colds, burns, scalds, bruises, frost bites, chilblains and all wounds of the flesh are quickly healed by Yellow Oil.

The town of Waynesville, Ohio, has been thrown into a state of excitement and dismay by the discovery that the mysterious disappearance during several years past, of innumerable articles of every description belonging to citizens of the place is due to the midnight maraudings of a venerable maiden lady whose reputation has always been above reproach. In, under and around her house have been found stores of movable property, including scarf pins, bricks, lumber, carpets, plasterers' hair, shingles, crockery, carriage aprons and a host of other things of all values and no value at all. No one can conceive what the woman's object was, for she does not seem to have sold or used any of her stealings. If there is such a disease as kleptomania this would appear to be a case of it.

RHEUMATIC REMEDY.

There is no better cure for Rheumatism than Hagyard's Yellow Oil used according to directions on the bottle. It also cures Burns, Scalds, Frost Bites, Bruises, lameness, and all wounds of the flesh. All dealers sell it, price 25 cents.

An Englishman named Robert Robson, formerly a policeman and recently a day laborer, has been declared by the Court of chancery the rightful heir of an estate valued at $1,200,000, which has remained in the hands of the Ecclesiastical commissioners since the murder of his grandfather in 1742. The heir, who is seventy-two years old, is staying at an inn in Newcastle where he has been driven almost to distraction by the blandishment of visitors claiming blood relationship of every degree. It is possible that the wretched Robson might have considered his fortune an equivalent for these trials had he merely fallen into the hands of sisters and cousins and aunts, but a worse fate was reserved for him. No fewer than four women have appeared to claim him as their lawful husband. If some enterprising stenographer would secrete himself in the heir's apartments he might produce a roaring farce in real life from the pages of his note book. Robson would doubtless consider it a tragedy, but that would not hinder the rest of the world from laughing.

HOW TO CURE A COLD

Upon the first feeling of chill or shivering remain in doors if possible, bathe the feet in tepid water, gradually increasing the heat as long as it can be comfortably borne, drink freely of warm ginger tea or sage tea, to induce perspiration, and use Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam according to directions on the bottle. Hagyard's Balsam cures coughs, asthma, and pneumonia.

GARFIELD'S GUARDED TOOMB.

So long a time has elapsed since the obsequies that many strangers visiting Cleaveland are surprised to learn that a detachment of United States infantry are still detailed to watch the vault where lie the remains of the late honored President. Night and day can be heard the measured tramp, tramp of the sentry on duty, and it is intended to continue this watchfulness until the body is deposited in ground. Through the grated door can be seen the elegant casket given by the Masonic brethren. Covered with beautiful flowers, kept fresh by loving hands, it is still visited daily by hundreds of people, many of whom eagerly seek the cast off blossoms as momentoes. Near the vault is the shelter house, and on the other side of the lake the white tents of the soldiers are pitched. At the base of the hill upon which the monument is to be placed, a glass house is to be erected, enclosing the funeral car, still trimmed with immortelles and the trappings of woe.

An aged couple who had been gazing with tear dimmed eyes upon the casket, approached the guard and asked if they might not be permitted to have a few flowerers from off the coffin. He told them he could not open the vault. They were much disappointed, and said they were from the distant South, and had always been rebels, but that the death of Garfield had changed their feelings, and that they had journey far for the privilege of standing by his toomb.

FISHING FOR OYSTERS.

The oyster fishery in these localities is carried on in two ways, either by tonging or dredging. The first method being confined to small areas and to a limited number of fishermen, and susceptible of use but in shoal water, need not be considered. The second method of taking the oysters is as follows: The instrument used is called a dredge or scrape, and resembles a large iron claw, the nails representing the teeth of the dredge. To the back of this claw, or the dredge, is fastened to a bag of iron meshwork large enough to hold two or three bushels. When the dredge is dragged along the bottom the teeth or claws dig up the oysters and shells, which pass between them and into the network behind. The action is somewhat like that of a harrow. The dredges vary greatly in size, being from two to five feet across the mouth, and of greater or less weight, according to the depth of the water in which it is intended to use them. The dredging vessels vary in size from five to thirty ton, and all use two dredges. When on the oyster ground the dredges are dropped one from each side, and a sufficient amount of line paid out to insure the taking of the teeth; the vessel is then kept under easy sail and at a moderate speed until the dredges are full, that being indicated by the strain on the dredging line and by other signs known to the fishermen. The instrument is then hauled in by means of a small winch, the contents emptied on the deck, and the dredge put over again. This is continued until the vessel is near the edge of the bed, when the dredges are recovered, the vessel put about and the dredging is resumed in the opposite course. While the dredges are in the water, the mud, sand, sponge, grass, or other debris brought up are separated from the oyster and, together with all oysters unfit for market, thrown back into the water.—Popular Science Monthly.

A Louisville bridegroom, named Edward Fee, who disappeared mysteriously several weeks ago, returned to his home on Thursday with the following extraordinary account of his absence; "I left the St. James hotel in New Orleans, Louisiana, on the afternoon of Nov. 26th, 1881, to visit the stock yards. While there I met a friend, who told me that a former partner of mine, named Reynolds, had been disposing of cattle which belonged to me. He stated that Reynolds was then in the city and I at once went in search of him. About dusk I found him on the Algiers ferry boat, when a fight between us ensued, and he knocked me into the river. I remember finding myself in the water, and from that to the 23rd of December everything is a blank. On that day consciousness returned to me, and I found myself in a hospital at Pensacola Florida. I was told by the surgeon in charge that I had been brought there by the captain of a vessel, the name of the vessel I do not remember, who had found me clinging to a piece of drift wood in the Mississippi river. As soon as I was able to travel I started directly to Louisville, arriving here Thursday forenoon. I am still suffering from the effects of my mishap, but am rapidly recovering.

MANHOOD

HOW LOST, HOW RESTORED.

WE have recently published a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical and nervous Debility, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage etc., resulting from excesses.

☞ Price, in a sealed envelope, only 6 cts., or two postage stamps.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicines or the use of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

☞ This Lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

A WONDERFUL WOMAN.

CHAPTER VI. Continued.

The man she had loved? he had treated her brutally—worse than man ever treated woman before, but there was no anger in her face or heart. There was no sorrow, there was not even pity, all feeling seemed dumb and dead within her. She only stood and looked at him with a sort of weary wonder. Three hours ago he had been so full of life, of youth, of strength of beauty, and now he lay more helpless than a new-born child. What a narrow step divided death from life.

The four men stood silent, awe-stricken. She neither seemed to heed or see them. Mr. Otis summoned courage at last to approach and speak.

'Miss Dangerfield,' he said with grave respect, you should not be here. This is no sight for you. Let Mr. Dangerfield lead you back to your father.'

She lifted her heavy eyes, and seemed to see him for the first time.

'Will he die?'

'I hope not—I trust not. But you must not be here when he recovers consciousness.'

'What do you mean to do with him she asked in the same low monotone. He cannot stay here. We will take him away?'

He looked at her doubtfully.

'Take him—where? To the Hospitial do you mean?'

'No, not to the hospital. I should rather you did not take him there. Can he be removed without much danger?'

'Well—yes; if he is removed at once.'

'Then—Mr. Otis, will you do me a favour?'

'Anything in my power, Miss Dangerfield.'

'Then take him to your own house. It is a great favour I ask, but you will do it, I know. The expense shall be mine. I don't want him to die.' A slight shudder passed over her as she said it; 'and there is no one else I can ask. Will you do this for me?'

She laid her hand on his arm and looked at him. A great compassion filled his heart for this girl, so cruelly bereaved through no fault of her own. he could not refuse.

'It shall be done. I will have him removed immediately, and if he dies it will be no fault of mine.'

'I knew I might trust you. If it is possible, I will go there and see him. He must not die, Mr. Otis, he must not.' A sudden, swift gleam came in to her dead eyes. 'He must recover, and he must leave here. Take him at once, and thank you very much.'

Then the tall white figure flitted away and was gone, and the four men stood confounded, and looked blankly into each other's startled eyes,

'What does she mean?' De Vere asked. 'What does she want the scoundrel to recover for? Egad; the only creditable thing in the world will be his loaving it.'

'It is for her father's sake, doubtless,' suggested Squire Talbott.

'Nothing of the sort,' interrupted Peter Dangerfield. 'She wants Dantree to recover for her own. If she has done with him I'm greatly mistaken. I wouldn't stand in Dantree's shoes when he recovers for the crown of England. She is in an unnatural state just now—she'll awake after a little and be all the more terrible for her present calm. What will your mother say, Otis, when you turn her house into a private hospital?'

'Whatever I do is brave and admirable in my mother's eyes. I will trouble you, Mr. Dangerfield, to order the carriage and the quietest horse in the stable. Every moment we loose now is of vital importance.'

Mr. Dangerfield obeyed. The carriage was brought round, the wounded man carefully covered from the cold, raw night air, carried out, and laid among the cushions. Squre Talbot, with little love for the stricken man, yet accompanied the assistant into Castleford. Gaston Dantree had been his guest, and thought, after his base and dastardly conduct to-night, he could never again cross the threshold of Morecambe, he still felt bound to see him safely to his destination.

Captain De Vere remained behind at Scarswood, at the solicitation of Mr. Dangerfield. He could not return to his lodgings while things were in this uncertain state, neither could he remain alone. How would this night end? Would Sir John recover again or would the New Year morning, breaking already, see him lord of this noble domain?

And upstairs, in the sick chamber, the dim night lamp flickered, and the ticking of the clock sounded in the dead hush. Sir John lay motionless, Dr. Graves sat beside him, his wrist between his fingers counting the beating of that sinking pulse. An eminent physician had been telegraphed for to London, but it was more than doubtful if he would find the baronet alive upon his arrival. And it Gaston Dantree died, would it not be as well so?

Beside him, at the foot of the bed, looking like a ghost of some dead bride in that spectoral light, Katherine sat. She sat quite motionless, her eyes rarely leaving the face upon the pillow her hands clasped upon her lap, her face like marble. 'At one fell swoop,' she had lost all—all! home, friends, fortune, lover, father, name; and yet it is doubtful if in these first hours she suffered much. She could not realize it—the suddenness and horror of the blow had stunned her; hysterics and tears of woman's uttermost agony might come hereafter—now she sat still and calm. Her heart lay like a stone in her bosom, a dull heavy pain throbbed ceaselessly in her head, but her misery was tearless and dumb.

Dr. Graves, watching her uneasily and furtively, wondered what kind of woman the girl was. So unlike all others he had ever known, sitting here without one complaint, one sob, one cry of pain, with her bridegroom lost to her on her bridal night, the father who had adored her, dying before her eyes.

And while the night light flickered, and the two pale watchers sat mutely there, the bright wintry sun arose—the happy New Year had begun. As its first rays stole in between the closed curtains, the sick man's eyes opened, and he rallied a little. His glance fell upon Katherine, a swift gleam of intelligence lit his eyes, his lips moved, and a few incoherent words came forth. In an instant she was bending over him, her ear to his lips.

'Darling papa, yes, what is it?'

He strove hard to speak, but again only that muttered, incoherent sound. But the girl's quick ear caught three words:

'Indian cabinet—will.' His thickening voice failed, his dim eyes looked with piteous, speechless agony up in her's.

'A will in the Indian cabinet, is that it, papa?'

He nodded eagerly—a flash of light crossed his dead like face.

'And you want me to get it for you?'

He nodded again. 'Quick!' he said, hastily, and she arose and left the room.

The Indian cabinet was in the library. There the lights still burned brightly, and there on the hearth rug her lover had stood—the lover to whom she had been ready to give up the world and all its glory—and who mercilessly cast her off. She looked darkly that way once. 'He will live,' she said to her self under her breath. 'And I will remember it.' Then she crossed to the tall cabinet, opened one drawr afterr another, and searched among the papers there for the paper she wanted.

She found it without much trouble, closed and relocked the cabinet, and returned to the sick room. Sir John still lay, breathing laboriously, with a hungry, eager light in his gleaming eyes.

'Shall I read it papa—is that what you mean?'

He nodded once more. She opened the paper—it was very short—she read clearly and distinctly its contents. It bequeathed to his beloved adopted daughter Katherine the sum of three thousand pounds—the portion of his late wife, and was unsigned. She understood instantly what it was he wished.

'You want to sign this, do you not?'

Another eager nod, another husky 'Quick!'

She laid the document upon the blotting book before him on the bed, and placed the pen in his hand. Dr. Graves hastily summoned Captain De Vere, and the two men stood by as witnesses while the stricken man essayed to sign.

Essayed in vain! The pen dropped useless from his fingers. Again Katherine lifted it and placed it in his hand—again he strove. The effort was futile; it fell from his fingesr, and with a low moan of agony, his nerveless arm dropped by his side.

'It is no use; all vital power is gone. He never will sign his name again,' Dr. Graves said; 'he is exciting himself dangerously and uselessly.'

The dying man heard, and understood. His eyes turned on Katherine with a speechless anguish terrible to see.

'Too late! too late!' they heard him groan.

'Oh, my God! too late!'

Katherine's arms encircled him; she pressed her cold face to his.

'Papa, darling,' she said softly and sweetly, 'I don't want you to grieve for me; to think of me even. You are very, very ill; very ill, papa, and had we better not send for a clergyman?'

He made a feeble motion of assent. She looked at Captain Devere.

'You will go?' she said.

He went at once. Then she bent close to him again, whispering gently and soothingly into his ear. But it is doubtful if he heard her. A stupor—the stupor which preceeds death—was gathering over him; his dull eyes closed, his pale lips muttered, he moaned ceaselessly; the great last change was very near.

The sun was high in the blue January sky now, the whole world jubilant with the glad sunlight of the New Year. And in the town of Castleford people talked with bated breath of the strange, dread tragedy at Scarswood, and of nothing else. In a little cottage at the remotest suburbs of the town, Gaston Dantrie lay, senseless and still; while life and death fought there sharp battle above his pillow.—And in that stately and spacious chamber at Scarswood its lord lay dying, while clegyman and physicians stoop by useless and in vain.

She never left him: she neither slept nor ate. As she had been from the first, tearless, noiseless, so she was to the last. The perfumed laces, the dead white silk of her triling robe, still swept their richness of the carpet; on arms and neck large pearls still shone, on her head the orange wreath and veil still remained. She had removed nothing but her gloves; what did it matter what she wore now? She sat beside the dying man, while the slow ghostly hours dragged on; an awful sight it seemed to the men who mutely watched her. Her wedding day! and she sat their bereaved more cruelly, more bitterly, than ever widow in the world before.

Morning came and passed. The short January afternoon wore on. The sun dropped low, the blue twilight shadows were gathering once more. That celebrated physician from London had arrived, but all the physicians in the great Babylon were of little avail now. Lower and lower the wintry sun dropped, flushing earth and sky with rose-light, and as its last red ray faded and died amid the trees of Scarswood Park, Sir John Dangerfield passed from Scarswood and all earthly possessions for ever. Without sign or struggle the shadow that goes before crept up, and shut out the light of life in one quiet instant from all the face.

Up and down, up and down in the crimson splendours of that New Year sunset, Peter Dangerfield paced under the leafless trees. And this was to have been her wedding day! No pang of pity; no touch of remorse came to him; it was not his nature to feel either. He only waited in a fever of impatience for the end.

It came. As he stood for an instant, his eyes fixed on that red radiance in the west, thinking how fair and stately Scarswood looked beneath its light, Dr. Graves approached him. One look at his face was enough. His heart gave a great leap. At last! at last! his hour had come.

'Sir Peter Dangerfield,' the physician gravely said, 'your uncle is dead.'

The late Sir John had been his friend; but a live dog is better than a dead lion. Sir John was dead, and Sir Peter reigned. It could be no harm to be the first to pay court to the new soverign.

'Sir Peter.' He turned faint and giddy for a moment with great joy, and leaned speechlessly against a tree. Then he started up, his face flushing dark red, and made hastily for the house. Never before had the old baronial hall look half so noble, half so grand; never before had the fair domain spread around him seemed half so stately an inheritance as now, when he stood there in the first January sunset, master of Scarswood.

CHAPTER XV.

"DEAD OR ALIVE."

The funeral was over, and a very grand and stately ceremonial it had been. There had been a profusion of mutes, of black velvet and ostrich feathers, a large procession of the carriages of the county families; a whole army, it seemed of the Dangerfield tenantry and the trades people of Castleford. For the late Sir John, during his brief reign, had made many friends, and over his death a halo of delicious romance hung. Miss Dangerfield was not Miss Dangerfield; his daughter was not his daughter, and over in that little cottage on the outskirts of the town, a young man lay—dying it might be—slain by the outraged baronet whom they were burying to-day.

It was a very solemn pageant. The bells of the town and of the hamlets about tolled all the day long. Scarswood Park had been alive from morning until night with people in carriages coming to leave cards. The principal shops in Castleford were shut, the principal church hung in black. And 'ashes to ashes, and dust,' had been spoken, and they laid Sir John with the dozens of other dead Dangerfields, under the chancel, where the sturdy Sir Ronald Dangerfield, knight, had knelt, in stone, for a hundred years, opposite his wife Elizabeth with a stone cushion between them.

The funeral was over, and in the pale yellow glimmer of the January sunset the mourning coaches and family carriages went their way, and the dead man's adopted daughter was riven back home. Home! what an utter mockery that word must have sounded in her ears as she lay back among the sable cushions in her trailing crape and bombazine, and knowing that of all the homeless, houseless wretches adrift on the world, there was not one more homeless than she.

The pale yellow glow of the sunset was merging into the gloomy gray of the evening as they reached Scarswood. Her faithful friend, Edith Talbot, who had been with her from the first, was with her still. The blinds were drawn up, the shutters unbarred. Scarswood looked much the same as ever, only there was a hatchment over the great dining-room window, and in the house the servants clad in deepest mourning, moved about the house like ghosts, with bated breath and hushed voices, as though the lord of the manor still lay in state in those silent upper rooms. It all struck with a dreary chill on the heart of Miss Talbot, the gloom, the silence, the mourning robes, the desolation. She shuddered a little and clung closer to Katherine's arm as they went up the wide, black slippery oaken stair case, down which Gaston Dantree had been hurled. But there was that in her friend's face that made her very heart stand still with awe and expectation.

She was as white as death. At all times she had been pale, but not like this; never before like this. As she had been from the first hour the blow fell, so she was still, silent, tearless, rigid. All those days and nights when Sir John Dangerfield had lain stark and dead before her, she had sat immoveable in the big carved oaken chair at his head, her clasped hands lyig still, her face whiter than snow, white almost as the dead, here eyes fixed straight before her in a fixed unseeing stare. Of what was she thinking as she sat there; of all that was passed? of all that was to come? No one knew. People who had thought they had known her best, looked at her in wonder and distrust, and began to realize they had never known her at all. Friends came and friends went, she never heeded; they spoke to her soothingly, compassionately, and she answered in briefest moncsylables and closed her lips more resolutely than before. The only one of them all she addressed directly was Mr. Otis, and then only in one short phrase, 'How is he?' The answer invariably was, 'Much the same; no worse, no better.' Mr. Otis, with his keen, thin face and steel-blue eyes, watched this singular sort of girl with even more interest than the rest of the curious. He was a young man who thought more than he spoke, and who studied human nature. Women at best are incomprehensible creatures, scarcely to be treated as rational creatures in the trying hour of life, but beyond all of sex this girl was a sphinx. She had lost lover, father, fortune, home, and name all in one hour, and she had never shed one tear, never uttered one complaint. Other women's hearts would have broken for half, and she, a child of seventeen, bore all like a Spartan. Was it that she did not feel at all, or, that she felt too much? Would this frozen calm outlast her life, or would the ice break all at once, suddenly and terribly, and let the black and bitter waters below rush forth?

'If it ever does, then woe to those who have ruined her,' thought Mr. Otis. 'This girl is no common girl, and not to be judged by common rules. I thought so from the first time I saw her happy and hopeful, I think so more than ever now, in her desolation and despair. She loved the man she has lost with a passion and abandon which, thank heaven, few girls of seventeen ever feel. She loved the father who is dead, the name and rank she bore, the noble inheritance that was to have been hers. And all has gone from her, ann she sits there like this! Let Mrs. Vavasor take care, let Peter Dangerfield be warned, and most of all, let Gaston Dantree die. for on my life I believe a day of terrible reckoning will come.'

But Gaston Dantree was not going to die: that matter was settled beyond a possibility of doubt before the day of funeral. He told her so now, as she asked the question, and as Henry Otis spoke the words, his eyes were fixed upon her with a keen, powerful look. She did not seem even to see him; her eyes looked out of the window at the gray shadows veiling the wintry landscape, a slight, indescribable smile dawned for a second over her white face.

'He will live,' she replied softly; I am glad of that.' She looked up and met the surgeon's level, searching gaze. 'I am glad of that,' she said again slowly, 'If such a lost wretch as I am has a right to be glad at all.—You have been very kind Mr. Otis,' She gave him her hand with some of her old frank grace. 'I will repay you some day if I can.'

He took the slim fingers in his, more moved than she knew. How could those wan little fingers work? how deadly white the young face! An infinite compassion moved him, and instant there dawned within him a love and pity that never left him. He longed with manhood's strong compassion to take this poor little wonanly martyr in his sheltering arms, and hold her there from sorrow, and suffering, and sin, it might be, in the dark days to come.

The only hours in which life and their old fire had come to the large, weary eyes of the girl, had been the hours when Peter Dangerfield had come into the death chamber, then a curious expression would set her lips hard, and kindle her furtive, ceaseless gleam in her eyes. Sir Peter! He was that now beyond a shadow of a doubt; the legal forms which would prove his right presently were only forms.

Sir Peter wore the weeds of woe well. He was pale and restless, his deep black made him look ghastly; his small, pale, near-sighted eyes blinked away uneasily from that statuesque figure sitting in tha tgreat arm chair. Mr. Otis noticed this, too; what did not those sharp eyes of his see?

'I am a poor man,' he said one evening, under his breath, as he watched the dark glance with which Katherine followed the new baronet out of the room; 'I am a poor man, and I would like to be a rich one; but for all your prospective baronetcy, all your eight thousand a year, Sir Peter Dangerfield, I would not stand in your shoes to-night.'

And now it was all over, and Katherine, trailing her black robes behind her was back at Scarswood. For the last time, Edith, she said softly to her companion, for the last time.

'Katherine,' her friend faltered, 'what do you mean? Oh, Kathie, don't look so; don't smile like that for pity sake. You make me afraid of you.

For a smile, strange and ominous, had dawned over Katherine's face as she met her friend's piteous glance.

'Afraid of me,' she repeated. 'Well, I am a hideous object, I dare say, by this time, and I don't dare to look in the glass for fear I should grow afraid of my self. Afraid of myself! That's just it; I am afraid of myself—horribly afraid; afraid, afraid, afraid.—Edith,' she caught her friend's arm with sudden strength, 'you like me a little now, yes, yes, I know you do; and in the years that are to come I know that you will hate me; hate and and abhor me! Edith I loved my father, dearly, dearly; but I tell you I am glad he is dead and buried to-night.'

'Oh, Katherine, Katherine.'

'I am only seventeen,' Katherine Dangerfield went steadily on, 'and I am strong and healthy, and likely to live for fifty years to come. What sort of a woman do you think I will be half or quarter of a century from now? Think of me as I am to-night, Edith Talbot, when the time comes for you to shrink at the sound of my name—an orphan, who had no father to lose, a widow in her wedding hour, a houseless, frendless wretch, trained to think herself a baronet's daughter and heiress.

THE LOCAL LEGISLATURE.

OPENING OF THE HOUSE BY THE LIEUT.-GOVERNOR.

THE SPEECH FROM THE THRONE.

THE CEREMONIES ATTENDED BY A BRILLIANT ASSEMBLAGE.

Mr. Speaker and Gentlemen of the Legislative Assembly.

It is with much pleasure that I once more bid you welcome to the metropolis of the Province, and that I congratulate you upon the encouraging circumstances under which you assemble for the performance of the responsible duties with which, as the representatives of the people, you have been put in charge. The public revenue for the year has been considerably exceeded the amount estimated; the year has been one of general prosperity, the result of the late abundant harvest, the general revival of trade in other contries, and the consequent demand for the products of our fields, forests, and mines; and the recent census has shown that the population of the province has in the last decade increased by nearly 800,000, and amounts to nearly two millions, notwithstanding the number of our people who, from various causes, have during several years past left the Province.

I regret that since your last session no progress has been made towards a recognition of the right of the province to that extensive portion of its territory, our title to which, notwithstanding the award of the distinguished arbitators appointed by the two Governments, the Federal authorities have continued to dispute. The grave practical evils resulting from the dispute have, since you last met, been greatly increased by an Act of the Federal Parliament transfering to the Province of Manitoba, so far as relates to provincial jurisdiction, the claim of the Dominion to the most valuable part of the disputed territory, including our organized municipalities south and east of the Height of Land. While the bill was before the House of Commons, I addressed to the Federal Government a despatch protesting, on behalf of Ontario, against this part of the intended Act. A copy of my despatch, with other papers relating to the territory, will be laid before you.

I regret that I have to refer also to the disallowance of the Act of last session for protecting the public interest in rivers, streams and creeks. The competency of the Legislature to pass the Act was not questioned, and the Act was disallowed mainly upon the ground, that the Minister of Justice did not approve of the mode or extent of the compensation which the Act gave to owners of property effected by the Act. The correspondence on the subject will be laid before you. The object of the Act is of such importance as well to those engaged in the lumber trade as to the Province in general, and the duty of asserting the right of the Legislature to deal according to its own judgment with all matters within Provincial jurisdiction is so urgent, that a bill for the same purpose as the disallowed Act will without delay be submitted for your renewed consideration.

I congratulate you that recent decisions of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council have set at rest all question as to the right of the Provincial Legislature to legislate as our interests may from time to time require, on matters on internal trade, and in particular on the law of insurance. Some further provisions seem now necessary in order to render effectual the legislation which had for its object the securing of uniform conditions in fire policies; and I invite your attention to the subject.

I regret that the right of the Province to property escheated for want of heirs—unanimously maintained by the highest courts in Ontario and Quebec, and acquiesced in by the Federal Government for several years—has, on a recent appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada by that Government in the name of the defendants in a well-known case, been negatived by a majority of the judges of the court. The case in litigation is but one of several cases of the same kind which have occurred since Confederation: and the constitutional question involved is so important, and some of the grounds on which the decision proceeds are of such far-reaching application, that I have lost no time in taking the necessary steps for obtaining a review of the judgment by her Majesty's Privy Council. There is strong reasons for expecting a favorable result.

I congratulate you on the general favor with which the Report of the Commissioners appointed to inquire into the Agricultural resources and requirements of the Province, has been received by all classes interested in agriculture. I have anxiously considered what further means may be employed to aid this great industry, and to promote the welfare of the population engaged in it. During recent years in Great Britain and other European countries, and also in the United States of America, and in the Australian colonies of Great Britain, great advantage has been found to result from the collection of reliable crop reports and other agricultural statistics. A measure to secure like advantage to this Province will be submitted for your consideration.

I have also to recommend to your consideration such changes in the law respecting the Agricultural and Arts Association as may increase the usefulness of that organization, and bring its operations into harmony with the present needs and circumstances of the country.

A bill respecting market fees will again be submitted for your consideration.

THE STANDARD.

Friday, January 20th, 1882.

Mr. Doll's adv., will appear next week, he has purchased Mr. Wilcox's stock at considerably less than 100c on the $, and intends selling for 30 days at first cost.

Our suggestion as to the advisability of having a cheap excursion over the Toronto, Grey & Bruce Railway has been adopted, and the Company announce an excursion for Monday, the 23rd inst. The train will leave Markdale at 7.—, arriving at Toronto about noon; returning, will leave Toronto at 6 p. m., thereby giving excursionists six hours in which to see the sights in the city. Fare for the round trip $1.50.

Mistakes will occur in the best regulated families, as all our readers know. An illustration of the truth of this old saying will be found in the report given of the social held at Mr. Angus McIntyre's last week in which we were made to say, through the carelessness of a compositor, that all the efforts of the genial host and hostess to make their visitors feel at home and enjoy themselves were in vain instead of not in vain. Lynch Law does not prevail in Canada otherwise there would have been a funeral in Markdale last week.

The Annual Meeting of Glenelg Ag. Society, was held in Dufferin Hall on Thursday, the 12th inst. There was a large attendance. We gave the officers elect last week. The Treasurer's report was read and recieved, also the auditors' report, everything being satisfactory. There was a balance of $113 in the Treasury, besides a paid membership for the year 1882 of 63, making a total of $179 on hand. The society have leased five acres of land from Mrs. Atkinson for ten years, and purpose building a Hall, and fencing the ground in the spring. Subscription lists are now out for the purpose of raising funds for the building and fencing, and we hope the public will be liberal in this matter, and we will have an annual show second to none in the county.

The annual meeting of the East Grey Agricultural Society was held in the Town Hall Flesherton, on Wednesday, the 18th inst.; it was not, however as largely attended as it should have been. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:—President, Mr. Thomas Kells, re-elected; 1st Vice, John Abbott, ex-Deputy Reeve of Proton; 2nd Vice, D. R. Ellis, Councillor, Euprasia,—Directors—Messrs. George Wright, Osprey; S. Damude, Flesherton; A. Munshaw, Flesherton; J. McMorris, Osprey; J. Cameron, Deputy Reeve, Holland; George, Richardson, Euphrasia; Joseph McArdle, Proton; — Rutheran, Collingwood Township; and Wm. Burnett, Artemesia. Auditors, Messrs. W. Clayton and Wm. Richardson, Flesherton. Mr. S. Damude was re-elected Sec.-Treas.—The advisability of enlarging the show grounds, and building sheds for stock, was brought up for discussion, and left with the directors for further consideration.

The annual meeting of the Artemesia Ag. Society for the election of officers was held in Flesherton on the 12th inst. The following officers elected for the ensuing year, viz: President, R. Oliver; Vice-President, A. Munshaw. Directors, J. Brodie, A. Down, J. M. Webster, J. Stewart, M. Akitt, and D. Campbell. Auditors, W. Clayton, and W. F. Doll. Secretary-Treasurer, J. Brodie. It was resolved to dissolve the union with East Grey County Society and hold a Township Exhibition.

PROTON AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The annual meeting of the Society was held in the Orange Hall, Dundalk, on the 12th inst. There was a large number present.

Thomas Hanbury, president of the Society, in the Chair.

The Secretary's Report, in behalf of the officers and directors of the Society, was read as follows:—

To the Members of the Proton Agr. Society.

We beg leave to state that the Society is in good working order, while at the same time we regret the legal difficulties that the Society had to contend with during the past year. We feel the prosperity of the Society has been effected thereby. In the year 1880 we reported a membership of 110; this year we only report a membership of 80, showing a decrease of of 30. We would say the samples in the various classes were of a superior quality, although the number of entries were not as large as they were the previous year.

Your Directors would urge the necessity of the show being held within an inclosure in future, as your directors consider the want of an enclosure a serious loss to the society.—A. G. HUNTER, Secretary.

The Auditors' Report was read.

Several items of legal expenses in the report were brought before the meeting by the Auditors, each bill was passed by the unanimous vote of the members, and the report adopted. It showed a membership of 78, and a balance of $59.74 on hand.

The resignation of Mr. John Scarlett was handed in and laid on the table.

The election of officers and directors for the ensuing year, resulted as follows:—President, Thomas Hanbury; Vice-President, John Anderson; Directors—Robert Black, Peter McGregor, Samuel Stokes, James Rosborough, Andrew Riddle, James Robinson, George Glazier, John Rundle, John Abbott.

On motion, F. Z. Nixon and Wm. Nelson were appointed Auditors for the ensuing year.

A. G. HUNTER, Sec'y.

ORANGE NOTES.

PROTON DISTRICT.

The District Orange Lodge of Proton met at the Hall, Edgerton Corners, on January 10th, 1882, for the election of officers and general business. The following Brethren were elected: Robert Kinnel, District Master; Joseph McArdle, Deputy District Master; George Rutherford, District Chaplain; Samuel Edgerton, District Secretary; John Abbott, District Treasurer; Alexander McConnell, D. Director of Ceremonies. After the members had taken up the insurance scheme, Dr. Christoe, of Flesherton, was appointed medical examiner for the Township of Proton.

SURPRISE PARTY.

A surprise party was held under the auspices of L. O. L. No. 1132 on Friday evening the 13th inst., for the purpose of making a presentation in the shape of a purse containing ten dollars to Mrs. John McKee, the wife of the last Past Master of the lodge, for the kind and courteous manner in which the members of the lodge have been entertained since its inauguration, some three years ago, by Mr. and Mrs. McKee and family.

The address was read and the presentation made by the District Master, Brother J. Brodie, on behalf of the brethren of the Lodge. The following is the address and reply:

The Members of Loyal Orange Lodge, No. 1132, to Mrs. John McKee, of Artemesia,

GREETING:

During the past three years of the existence of our lodge, its meetings have been held in the vicinity of your dwelling, and during this period we have, from time to time, been frequent visitors to your fireside; therefore, we cannot fail to remember your pleasant welcomes, and you open, frank and generous demeanor, with your gratuitous labor to make us comfortable. We thought sometimes that we surely tresspassed on your good nature, and yet nothing in your actions showed the slightest evidence of it. We find it to be our duty as well as pleasure, as a small token in a tangible form, to present you with this purse and small sum of money, trusting that, as a true friend to the order we love, you may live to see its extensive prosperity, and your partner and family, after being true to yur country and God, we may at last meet in more exalted friendship above.

Signed, on behalf of the lodge,
ROSS ROBERTSON, W. M.
WM. J. MCKEE, SEC'Y.

Brother McKee, on behalf of Mrs McKee, thanked the brethren for their kind mark of respect towards himself and family, trusting that they all might be long spared to enjoy the same fraternal feelings of good will and respect for each other.

The after part of the evening's entertainment consisted in partaking of an excellent tea provided for the occasion by the ladies present After the inner man had been satisfied, the light fantastic toe was tripped until the "wee sma' oors," when all sepparated for the irrespective homes, well pleased with the evening's enjoyment. "Happy to meet, sorry to part, in hopes to meet again."

ONE WHO WAS THERE.

OSPREY.

A very successful Tea meeting was held in McIntyre Presbyterian Church on the evening of Dec. 28th. After tea was served, the audience was entertained for at least three hours, by a number of interesting speeches, music, readings and recitations. Conspicious among the speakers, was Rev. D. McDonald of Creemore, whose humorous speech greatly moved the resibility of the assembly. The musical talent of the Township, which was well represented, was augmented by Miss Blain of Flesherton. Mr. Wm. Hamlin of Maxwell, gave an excellent recitation in his usual vigorus style. The financial proceeds of the evening, amounted to the sum of $70, exclusive of expenses. On the following Monday there were a Sabbath School Festival and Xmas tree in the same place, on which there were presents for the young in connection with the Sunday School, to the amount of $80.00.

At the annual meeting of the Osprey Agricultural Society, the following office bearers were elected for the year 1882:—Presidedt Wm. Guy, re-elected; First Vice, Joseph Taylor,; 2nd Vice R. Y. Berk; Sec., Treas., Josiah Gamey,; Directors, Joseph McMorrison, Andrew McGirr, J. R. Sing, D. Grant, Neil McLean, and Donald Richardson; Auditors, John Kirton, and W. L. B. Hamlin.

FROM "THE TIMES."

Editor of the Times.—The veterinary department in your valuable paper is always read by me with great interest and I value the information recieved from it a hundred fold more than the small amount paid for the paper. One year ago you published a letter from Dr. John Bates, relating the wonderful success he had in curing spaving and splints with Kendall's Spavin Cure, and his allusion's to using it now in his practice for several human ailments on account of the success he has always had with it. The above statements from so prominent a Physician gave me great faith in its efficacy, and as I had been afflicted for years with rheumatism and hip-joint lameness so badly that I could hardly walk at times. I produced a bottle and as it has completely cured me I wish to proclaim it to all the world as the most wonderful discovery ever made for the benefit of afflicted man as well as for the poor horse, for which it was first used. As this remedy must be of incalculable value to the world, I write this letter to express my thankfulness to you for ever mentioning it in your columns and to ask another favor in behalf of my fellow men who are afflicted in body, that you continue to make known to the world, the great value of Kendall's Spavin Cure, for both man as well as beast.

Respectfully yours,
ARNOLD PARKER.
Rochester, N. Y., Sept. 1st, 1881.

OYSTER SUPPER.

As Dr. Armstrong has become a resident of Markdale, we thought it not amiss to clip the following from the Parry Sound paper, which speaks for itself:—

Dr. Armstrong was entertained at an Oyster Supper, given by a few of his many friends here, on the eve of his departure for a new field of practice. It appears the doctor had accepted an offer from the "front" of a good practice (with big pay I suppose) before he fully realized how difficult it would be to take himself away from his friends and his patients here. The supper was given at the Armstrong House, and after the usual toasts, the doctor's health was drank in cold water. On his response, the doctor expressed his high esteem of the people of McKeller and its neighborhood, and his sorrow for having to part from us at least for a time. The chairman Mr. S. Armstrong, expressed the sentiment of the audience when he wished the doctor success in his new undertaking, and that he would be welcome back at any time should his place here not be filled by some other physician before his return.

We cannot now afford to be without a doctor. The people have got in the habit of expecting to find a doctor at McKeller, and we hope the practice here will not be left long unoccupied.

THE ELECTRICAL GIRL WHO LIVES AGAIN.

London (Can.) Advertiser.

It is now about three years since the Advertiser published the story of the Electrical Girl in the township of Romney. The tale passed through nearly all of our exchanges, and occasionally re-appears now. The story in brief was that the girl was so highly charged with electricity that she could not handle any article of steel. She was a veritable magnet, and needless, knives, &c., would cling to any part of her person. The publication excited a good deal of courtesy concerning the girl, and many people called upon her at her home. Recently she was taken ill, and the local physicians were called in. She described her peculiar sensations. In her knee-joints severe pains were felt, shooting at intervals as though a battery were at work and giving her intermittent shocks. The knee began to swell, and the pains spread to other parts in her body, generally becoming parmanent in the joints. All the doctors could do was of little avail. Occassionaly slight relief would be obtained, but in wet or in murky weather the pains would redouble in violence. Finally when the doctors had given up treating her, and regarded her simply as a physiological wonder, a tramp called one day at the house. While he was being given a meal he was told about and asked premission to see the girl. He had been a soldier in the Crimean army, and while working in the trenches around St. Petersburg he contracted rheumatism in the most severe form, and noticing that the girl's symptoms agreed with his, he pronounced her to be suffering from rheumatism. The parents of the girl was over joyed, but were again cast down as they recalled the fact that the doctors had said they could do nothing for her. "Why," said the tramp, "do you want to bother the doctors about rheumatism? Get a bottle of St. Jacobs Oil. It cured me, and will cure any case. I know plenty of old soldiers who have been cured of chronic rheumatism by the use of St. Jacobs Oil." The advice was taken, and the so called Electrical Girl is to-day prepared to add her testimony to the thousands of others who bear witness to the efficacy of the great German Remedy.

To the Editor of the London (Canadian) Advertiser.

DEAR SIR:—As you have given me a good deal of notoriety by writing of me as the Electrical Girl, I thought I would write to tell yon of my condition. * * * (Here follows the recital which is summerized above.) My parents obtained a bottle of St. Jacobs Oil, and to its effects I owe the fact that I am now able to walk without pain, and the swellings in the joints have all disappeared.

Yours very truly,
SUSAN J. HOFFMAN.

Correspondence.

NOTICE.—We wish it disinctly understand that we do not hold ourselves reponsible for the opinions expressed by our correspondence

REPLY TO MR. BOLAND.

MR. EDITOR.—In last week's issue of your paper I noticed a communication from Mr. Bowland, in regard to to the late municipal election. At the close of the poll he attributed his defeat to the election being held in Markdale. Since then, it seems, he has thought better of it, and tries to lay the blame on me, the, by him presumed, Meaford Road Correspondent, for a statement made by said correspondent, about the small interest taken in that neighborhood in the election. According to his theory, a correspondent of a local paper should not interfere in local affairs, or in any way express his opinion. How wise he is. He thanks the ratepayers of the Meaford Road and vicinity for their almost unanimous support. If he thinks he got a unanimous vote from here, I am satisfied. He says "if the entire vote had been polled correctly, Mr. Elliott's majority would have been only sixteen." Count again, Mr. Boland, and you will find the majority would be eighteen. He says that he "had enough votes left to turn the scale if they had turned out." Perhaps he had; for instance, his mover and seconder.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for your forbearance,

I am, yours, &c.,
JAMES BRODIE.

CREDIT VALLEY LEASE.

THE BENEFITS WHICH THE G. W. R. EXPECTS TO DERIVE.

The Chicago Tribune of Saturday contains an article from the pen of a member of its staff, who interviewed the General Manager of the Great Western Railway at Eastwood on the 1st instant, anent the recent purchase of the Credit Valley Railway by the G. W. R. authorities. The information contained in the appended extract may therefore be accepted as officially correct:—"The Great Western Railway has leased for 999 years the Credit Valley road, which runs from St. Thomas, the central point on the Canada Southern, to Toronto. A Company, backed by the Great Western, has been organized to build a line eastward from Toronto to a point of connection with the Canadian Pacific about 150 miles west of Montreal. At the commercial metropolis of Canada it will connect with the Quebec, Montreal, and Ottawa road, which in turn forms a close connection at Quebec with the Intercolonial road, whose eastern terminus is Halifax. The Quebec, Montreal, and Ottawa road is the property of the Province of Quebec. Negotiations for its purchase by Sir Hugh Allan are now on foot, and it is understood in Canadian railroad circles that his offer will be accepted. It was at first supposed that he was acting in behalf of the Grand Trunk people, but later information points conclusively to the fact that he is one of the Stephen-Osler-Childers syndicate, between whom and the Grand Trunk there has not been any harmony for several months. During the season of navigation there has for the past two or three years been an active rivalry between the Grand Trunk and Great Western over the west-bound emigrant business brought to Montreal by the Allan Steamship line. The Great Western has all along insisted that the Grand Trunk should divide the business west of Toronto, which is the common junction point of the two systems in Western Canada, and remain content with the absolute control of 330 miles of the traffic. This the Grand Trunk refuses to do, as its system touches all the important towns in Western Canada. In order to get any of the business the Great Western was obliged to enter into an alliance with the steamboat lines running on Lake Ontarion and the river St. Lawrence. This arrangement, however, was of value only during the season of navigation. When the boats ceased running on the lakes the whole of the traffic became the property to the Grand Trunk. The great Western people determined they would no longer submit. The Credit Valley road being in the market, they wisely took it in, so as to prevent its falling into the hands of the Grand Trunk; land, having thus practically two lines from the Michigan frontier to Toronto, They Came to the conclusion that they were in a position to force the fight on the Grand Trunk. To aid in this direction they joined hands with the Canadian Pacific Syndicate, and the indications are that before a year has elapsed there will be a well-built line runing through a thickly settled farming country and close enough to the Grand Trunk for a distance of 330 miles to give it as keen a competition as it may desire. It is also understood that as soon as Sr. Hugh Allan acquires the Quebec, Montreal, and Ottawa road he will make Quebec the summer terminus of the Allan Steamship line, the inland business of which will be given to the Quebec, Montreal, and Ottawa Railway. The Michigan Central will connect Chicago with this new Canadian line to the seaboard.

(FROM BRAZIL.)

The New Compound, its wonderful affinity to the Digestive Apparatus and the Liver, increasing the dissolving juices, relieving almost instantly the dreadful results of Dyspepsia, Indigestion, and the TORPID LIVER, makes Zopesa an every day necessity in every house.

It acts gently and speedily in Biliousness, Costiveness, Headache, Sick Headache, Distress after Eating, Wind on the Stomach, Heartburn, Pains in the Side and Back, Want of Appetite, Want of Energy, Low Spirits, Foul Stomach. It invigorates the Liver, carries off all surplus bile, regulates the Bowels, and gives tone to the whole system.

Cut this out and take it to your Druggist and get a 10 cent Sample, or a large bottle for 75 cents, and tell your neighbor about it.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

The most successful Remedy ever discovered, as it is certain in its effects and does not blister. READ PROOF BELOW.

FROM THE ONEONTA PRESS, N.Y.

Oneonta, New York, Jan. 6th, 1881.

Early last summer Messrs. J. B. Kendall & Co., of Enosburgh Falls, Vt., made a contract with the publishers of the Press for a half column advertisement for one year setting forth the merits of Kendall's Spavin Cure. At the same time we secured from the firm a quantity of books, entitled Dr. Kendall's Treatise on the Horse and his Diseases, which we are giving to advance paying subscribers of the Press as a premium.

About the time the advertisement first appeared in this paper Mr. P. G. Schermerhorn, who resides near Colliers, had a spavined horse. He read the advertisement and concluded to test the efficacy of the remedy, although his friends laughed at his credulity. He bought a bottle of Kendall's Spavin Cure and commenced using it on the horse in accordance with the directions, and he informed us this week that it effected such a complete cure that an expert horseman, who examined the animal recently could find no trace of the spavin or the place where it had been located Mr. Schermerhorn has since secured a copy of Kendall's Treatise of the Horse and his Diseases, which he prizes very highly and would be loth to part with at any price, provided he could not obtain another copy. So much for advertising reliable articles.

Kendall's Spavin Cure.

New Hamburg, Ont., Dec. 28th, 1881.

Mr. F. H. McCallum, Dear Sir:—The bottle of Dr. Kendall's Spavin Cure bought of you last summer gave me the utmost satisfaction and performed a wonderful cure upon a mare nineteen years old belonging to me, which was badly spavined for ten years. She was so lame that I could hardly get her to move. The lameness is entirely gone after using half a bottle of the cure, and she is like a young horse again.

Yours truly.
J. F. ROTH.

FROM A
PROMINENT PHYSICIAN.

Washingtonville, Ohio, June 17th, 1880

Dr. J. B. Kendall & Co., Gents:—Reading your advertisement in Turf, Field and Farm, of Kendall's Spavin Cure, and having a valuable and speedy horse which had been lame from spavin for eighteen months, I sent to you for a bottle by express, which in six weeks removed all lameness and enlargement and a large splint from another horse and both horses are to day as sound as colts. The one bottle was worth to me one hundred dollars.

Respectfully yours,
H. A. BERTOLETT, M. D.

Kendall's Spavin Cure.
ON HUMAN FLESH.

Thousands of trials on human flesh has proved beyond a doubt that "KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE" has sufficient strength to penetrate and virtue to cure the worst cases of rheumatism, corns, bunyons, frost-bites, or any bruise, cut or lameness which are not affected in the least by ordinary liniments. It does not blister but on the contrary removes all soreness.

St. Johns, P.Q., Oct. 27th, 1881.

Dr. B. Kendall & Co., Gents:—I have used your Spavin Cure with great success on spavins, curbs and splints. I know it to be a good remedy for ringbones, bone spavins, curbs, galls and all kinds of lameness and many other difficulties about the horse. One of my men sprained his ankle badly. I applied Kendall's Spavin Cure and I never saw anything work like it, he was well in a few days. I know it to be good for man as well as beast. I procured one of your Treatise on the Horse, by mail for 25c., and I think it was the means of saving me $100 on one horse that I treated according to the directions given in your book for displaced stifle.

Yours truly,
WM. J. PEARSON.

Dunham, P.Q., March 10th, 1879.

Dr. B. J. Kendall & Co., Gents:—About a year ago I fell in the road onto some ice and was badly hurt in the hip joint, which caused me much suffering. I tried various remedies but none gave relief, until I tried Kendall's Spavin Cure. I applied it full strength twice a day for two weeks during last October and it effected a perfect cure. I have since then been well and free from lameness. It is very valuable for man as well as beast.

Yours truly,
CHESTER K. GREEN.

Kendall's Spavin Cure.

Is sure in its effects, mild in actions as it does not blister, yet it is penetrating and powerful to reach every deep seated pain or to remove any bony growth or other enlargements, such as spavins, splints, curbs, ringbones, callous, swellings and any lameness and all enlargements of the joints or limbs, or for rheumatism in man or for any purpose for which a liniment is used for man or beast It is now known to be the best liniment for man ever used, acting mild and yet certain in its effects.

Send address for illustrated circular which we think gives positive proof of its virtues No remedy has ever met with such unqualified success to our knowledge, for beast as well as man,

Price $1 per bottle, or six bottles for $5. All Druggists have it or can get it for you, or it will be sent to any address on receipt of price by the proprietors, DR. B. J. KENDALL & CO., Enosburgh Falls, Vt.

A LECTURE TO YOUNG MEN
ON THE LOSS OF
MANHOOD

WE have recently published a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical and nervous Debility, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage etc., resulting from excesses.

☞ Price, in a sealed envelope, only 6 cts., or two postage stamps.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicines or the use of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

☞ This Lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

Messrs. Brown & Son, want 1,000,000 logs. Read their advertisement.

J. J. White, Dentist, will be at the Revere House on Wednesday next [illegible].

The sleighing for the past week has been good, the consequence is, business is lively.

Some of the largest saw logs we ever saw are being brought into Markdale the past week.

Mr. William Brown advertises a house to rent in this issue of the Standard. Advertisement in another column.

Messrs. Brown & Son, are running their saw mill till 12 o'clock p. m., every day now to enable them to fill orders.

Markdale skating rink is now in first-class condition, parties can secure season tickets at reduced rates from J. Welsh, proprietor.

Farmers are taking advantage of the recent snow fall. Grain, Railway ties, telegraph poles, wood, saw logs, &c., are coming in large quantities.

Am I —Dentists who have tried "TEABERRY." pronounce it the finest thing on the face of this earth for the teeth and breath. 5 cent samples.

Mr. Robt. Davis advertises the sale of valuable farm property on January 31st, in the village of Flesherton. See advertisement in another column.

We would draw the attention of our readers to the advertisement of Mr. Michael Akitt, proprietor of the Eugenia grist, saw and lath mill.

ST. VALENTINE. — The largest, cheapest, and most handsome stock of Valentines ever brought into Markdale, is now on exhibition at the Medical Hall, by A. Turner & Co.

Solomon was a wise man, and had he lived in Markdale he would have called upon McFarland and ordered an Overcoat, Undercoat, Pants, Vest, Hat, Boots, Ties, and Tobacco.

The Royal beauties of Europe owe much of their personal attractiveness to the influence of Ayer's Hair Vigor, which keeps the hair fresh and bright.

If you want to subscribe for the Montreal Herald and Weekly Star, or renew for the same, just hand in $1 at the STANDARD Office. We have secured the agency for Markdale.

Mr. Edward Davis wants 10,000 logs for his mill on the Meaford Road parties in the neighborhood of the above mill would do well to see him, as he is determined to keep his mill in full operation.

"Friendship," Cicero says, "is the only thing in the world concerning the use of which all mankind are agreed," but all writers agree that a good pen is a desideratum, and Esterbrook's will be found to be A 1.

We are glad to learn that Mr. Andy Brownlee, of Osprey Township, who was reported to have lost an arm by being accidently shot, causing amputation necessary, is again able to be about, and that the arm was not amputated; the bone only being fractured.

In Shakespere's time there was a tide in the affairs of men," now the tide is in the affairs of women. Wedding Dresses at McFarland's. Wedding Hats, Gloves, Laces at McFarland's. Lovely Mantles, Shawls and Corsets at McFarland's, selling at greatly reduced prices.

We are sorry to say that Mr. Alfred Malloy, who got his arm broken last week at the raising of Mr. Lever's mill, is still in a critical condition. The generous hearted people of Flesherton put their heads together and made up a purse of some $60 towards providing for his temporary wants, and that of his family, while he is in his present helpless condition.

E. D. Wilcox requests us to say, that he has sold his stock and Business to Mr. W. F. Doll, of Flesherton. Those having Watches, Clocks, or Jewellery at Mr. Wilcox's, are requested to call and get the same at once, and those owing accounts, will please call and settle them immediately. Those holding accounts against Mr. W. can have the same paid by presenting them.

BURIED ALIVE.—On Friday, the [illegible]th inst., while Miss Gamey, daughter of Thos. Gamey Esq., of Osprey, was milking a cow in the barnyard, a straw stack tumbled over burying her. Over an hour elapsed before she could be extricated; she came out alive however, and we understand not much the worse.

It is expected that when the Dominion Parliament meets the Government will take the duty off tea and allow it to come in free. W. J. McFarland would advise his customers and the public not to purchase tea in quantities until after the duty comes off, thereby saving from 5 to [illegible] cents per pound. He would also beg to announce that anticipating the removal of the tea duty he has purchased [illegible] chests, or 6,500 pounds of tea, to give after the duty is repealed. Don't purchase teas until you see the good value W. J. McFarland will offer you.

We visited Maxwell on Monday and found quite a stir in that place. Mr. Hamlin is doing an extensive business, Mr. Stinson, of Singhampton, is fitting up a place for a store, and will open out shortly; and yet another, Mr. [illegible]ron, is about opening in the same line of business in Mr. Hamlin's old stand. Mr. Tuck is doing a large business, and keeps a very orderly house and first-class table; every attention is apparently paid to the wants of the travelling public.

The Markdale Lodge of A. O. U. W. are making preparations to give a grand conversazione, social, musical and literary entertainment about the first week in February.

The Estrelle company are billed to produce the moral drama of Uncle Tom's Cabin, in Dufferin Hall, this, Thursday evening. They are spoken of very highly by the press throughout Canada and as they only remain one night in Markdale, we would recommend all who wish to see this thrilling piece, to not fail to attend.

Dr. Carson's Pulmonary Cough Drops are an excellent Expectorant loosening the phlegm far more readily than any other preparation. For Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Tickling in the Throat and Soreness and Tightness of the Chest, they have no equal. In large bottles at 50 cents. A. Turner and Co. Special Agents Markdale.

So great has been the rush of job work the past few months, that we have been compelled to purchase an additional press to enable us to keep up with the demand, and are now in a position to turn out work on the shortest notice, equal to any office in the County, and at prices which defy competition. Give us a call and judge for yourselves.

A good preventative for Fevers, Ague and Bilious Disorders is Dr. Carson's Stomach and constipation Bitters a strictly vegetable preparation. They tone the system, purify the Blood and increase the appetite, and render those taking them almost proof against disease, should be used in every case instead of pills. A. Turner and Co. Special Agents Markdale.

We are both glad and sorry this week. Glad to announce that such an energetic business man as W. F. Doll has made up his mind to go into business in Markdale; and sorry to lose our genial and whole-soul friend E. D. Wilcox, who has sold his business to Mr. Doll of Flesherton. Ed's name has become almost as familiar as "Household Words," and his smiling face will be missed for many a long day, but he has left a good man in his place, and we bespeak for him a generous support.

Never neglect a Cough or Cold as they are very apt to lead to serious Lung troubles. Dr. Carson's Pulmonary Cough Drops have a wonderfull effect in relieving and curing Coughs Colds and all affections of the throat and Lungs. As Dr. Carson is a well known Canadian physician of over 25 years successful practice, there is little wonder that his Remedies are so popular with the Canadian people. A. Turner and Co. DUNDALK.

(From the Herald.)

Large quantities of grain are coming into the market.

A big time at the rink on Monday evening. E. G. Gurney, champion skater of Canada, gave an exhibition of fancy skating on ice.

Remember the Auction Sale at McCullough's Hotel, Dundalk, on Saturday, Feb, 7th, when a number of cattle and sheep will be sold. For particulars, see bills.

During the past 30 days James McMillan, late of Flesherton, weighed and loaded fourteen thousand bushels of grain out of Wm. Nelson's granary. Good for Dundalk.

We notice the new arrival of Goods at the Glasgow House, consisting of Fancy Table Cloths, Tweeds, Blankets, &c.; very cheap. 50 dozen men's Collars, finest quality, stand-ups and turn-downs, at 10c each, or $1.20 per dozen. Give the Glasgow House a call.

HOW AN ARTIST TREATED HIS VISITOR.

To the Editor of the Salem (Mass.) Register.

I would have accepted your kind invitation to visit you in your new quarters with pleasure before this, had not my old enemy, Mr. Rheumatism pounced on me so suddenly. He arrived last Friday, and, without stopping to send up his card, rushed in and grasped me by the hand with such a grip that in a few hours my hand and wrist were so badly swollen and painful that I felt as though one of Mr. Hatch's coal teams had run over me. Mr. Rheumatism has been a constant visitor of mine for several years; always swells and puts on a great many airs and makes himself at home, devouring my substance and leaving me poor in flesh and pocket Last winter he came and staid two months. I then made up my mind that the next time he came I would change his diet, as he has always gobbled down everything set before him I was somewhat at a loss what to feed him with, but finally concluded to give him three square meals a day of St. Jacobs Oil—morning, noon and night. This fare he is disgusted with, and is packing up his trunk and will leave by to-morrow or next day; says he cannot stop any longer as he has pressing business elsewhere. He is a treacherous fellow, and I have no doubt he intends visiting some of our Salem friends; if he does just give him the same fare that I did and he won't stop long. J. S. LEFAVOUR.

A PUBLIC MEETING Should be called of the citizens of every city, town and village in the Dominion, to consider what should be done to prevent the hair from turning Grey —and falling out. If this important question received their earnest consideration they would unanimously decide that science had at last discovered something that would answer this purpose—and furthermore would recommend Cingalese Hair Renewer as being this something for restoring the hair to its natural color, and prevent its falling out. 50 cents per bottle. For sale by all Druggists.

Gold. Great chance to make money. Markdale, Dec, 28th, 1881. 68-tf

Is a compound of the virtues of sarsaparilla, stillingia, mandrake, yellow dock, with the iodide of potash and iron, all powerful blood-making, blood-cleansing, and life-sustaining elements. It is the purest, safest, and most effectual alterative medicine known or available to the public. The sciences of medicine and chemistry have never produced so valuable a remedy, nor one so potent to cure all diseases resulting from impure blood. It cures Scrofula and all scrofulous diseases, Erysipelas, Rose, or St. Anthony's Fire, Pimples and Face-grubs, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Tumors, Tetter, Humors, Salt Rheum, Scald-head, Ring-worm, Ulcers, Sores, Rheumatism, Mercurial Disease, Neuralgia, Female Weaknesses and Irregularities, Jaundice, Affections of the Liver, Dyspepsia, Emaciation, and General Debility.

By its searching and cleansing qualities it purges out the foul corruptions which contaminate the blood and cause derangement and decay. It stimulates and enlivens the vital functions, promotes energy and strength, restores and preserves health, and infuses new life and vigor throughout the whole system. No sufferer from any disease which arises from impurity of the blood need despair who will give AYER'S SARSAPARILLA a fair trial.

It is folly to experiment with the numerous low-priced mixtures, of cheap materials, and without medicinal virtues, offered as blood-purifiers, while disease becomes more firmly seated. AYER'S SARSAPARILLA is a medicine of such concentrated curative power, that it is by far the best, cheapest, and most reliable blood-purifier known. Physicians know its composition, and prescribe it. It has been widely used for forty years, and has won the unqualified confidence of millions whom it has benefited.

NEW FEATURES FOR 1882.

Legal Questions and Answers.—Questions involving points of law, and of interest to the agricultural community, will be replied to and explained by a duly qualified practitioner, and the replies published from time to time in THE WEEKLY MAIL.

The Agricultural Department of THE WEEKLY MAIL will be in charge of a thoroughly practical editor, who by special attention to it, proposes to make that department alone worth more than the whole subscription price of the paper. He will be aided by the following authorities:—

L. B. ARNOLD, Esq., President of the American Dairyman's Association, will contribute a series of articles on CHEESEMAKING and DAIRYING generally, and will reply to questions from subscribers upon these subjects.

HON. X. A. WILLARD, of Little Falls, N. Y., one of the best authorities in the world on Cheesemaking and Creameries, will contribute a series of articles on these subjects.

One of the leading Veterinary Surgeons of Canada will write on VETERINARY matters regularly, and will also answer all questions sent by subscribers in the MAIL.

THE WEEKLY MAIL is the best weekly newspaper published in Canada.

It contains more Cable and other Telegraphic News than any other weekly in the Dominion.

It contains during the year 300 columns of New and Interesting Stories.

It contains over 200 columns of Agricultural Matter, by the best writers on Dairying, Cheesemaking, Forestry, the care of Horses and Cattle, Fruit Raising, General Agriculture, &c.

It is noted for its Reliable Market Reports, Home and Foreign.

It is the cheapest and best Family Paper published.

Other measures which will probably be laid before you, and to which I invite your attention are a bill for amending and consolidating the law respecting line fences, ditches and water courses; a bill to provide for a general law for the construction of waterworks by cities, towns and villages; a bill providing for the crossing of railway tracks by streets and other roads; a bill for the inspection of boilers, with a view to affording additional securities against explosions; a bill to make provision for maintaining and promoting the public health; a bill for simplifying the laws concerning real property and conveyancing; a bill to remove some defects in the law of evidence; a bill to place on a more satisfactory footing the law of libel in certain cases; and a bill to facilitate the establishment of free libraries.

It having become necessary in the interests of settlement and revenue, to place under timber license a few townships lying to the south of French River and Lake Nipissing districts, the activity of the timber trade last year afforded a favorable opportunity of selling at public auction the right to cut the pine timber in these townships, covering the limited area of 1,321 square miles; and it is gratifying to know that the result was most satisfactory, the sale having (among other advantages) increased the available means of the Province by nearly three-quarters of a million of dollars, besides adding to the revenue the annual rent to which the purchasers are liable, and the dues on the timber which they may cut.

In consequence of circumstances not within the control of either government, the accounts between the Province and the Dominion are still unsettled; and the money coming from the Common School fund for local improvements in the counties in which the lands that produced the fund are situate, has not yet been received by the Province. In view of the prolonged delay, I recommended the payment of the principal (about $125,000) to the counties interested, out of the consolidated revenue of the Province, in anticipation of the receipt of the money from the Dominion.

The subject of constructing new Provincial buildings adequate to the growing requirements of the Province, and the necessities of the public service, has continued to receive my attention during the past year. Much more time than had been expected was consumed in procuring necessary modifications to be made in the plans received previously to your last session and in the preparation of the specifications. The preliminary work has now been completed; tenders have been called for; and the result will be communicated to you.

The Public Accounts, showing the receipts and expenditure of the past year, and the estimates of moneys required for the services of the current year, will be laid before you. The estimates have been prepared with every regard for economy consistent with the public interest.

I cannot allow the present opportunity to pass without expression in my own name, and in that of the people of this province, the grief and indignation which, in common with the whole civilized world, we felt at the shocking and unprovoked murder of the late honoured and lamented President of the United States. By no community was President Garfield's death more sincerely mourned than by the people of Ontario.

In now dismissing you to the onerous and important labours in which for some time you will be engaged, I desire to express the hope that your deliberations and decisions will, as on former occasions, be such as to manifest your wisdom and your patriotism, and as will contribute to the continued development of the varied resources of our great Province, and to the increased well-being of its inhabitants.

After the delivery of the speech the floor of the House was cleared, and in a few minutes an adjournment was declared

His Honour then left the Chamber and returned to Government house.

The Speaker took the chair at 3.45 p.m.

ANSWER THIS.—Did you ever know any person to be ill without inaction of the Stomach, Liver or Kidneys, or did you ever know one who was well when either was obstructed or inactive; and did you ever know or hear of any case of the kind that Hop Bitters would not cure? Ask your neighbor the same question.—Times.

HE USED TO BE A BOY HIMSELF.

The other day a show came to Little Rock and was shamefully imposed upon by Uncle Isom. While standing near the tent he saw a crowd of low spirited boys grieving on account of financial depression.

'Does yer yongsters wanter go to der show?' he asked.

The boys responded in noisy chorus

'Well, come on, den. I uster be a chile myself, an' unlike de' mos' of men, I hain't forgot it. Count dese boys,' he added, addressing the door keeper. The man began counting, and by the time the boys had passed in Isom was walking around, talking to acquaintances from the plantations.

'Here,' said the showman, 'give me twenty tickets.'

'What for? Does yer think me a lottery agent?'

'You passed in twenty boys, and I want the tickets or the money.'

"I doan owe yer no tickets, and I doan owe yer no money. I didn't tell yer ter pass de boys in. I said count 'em. I's always heard that showmen is good on rithmatic, an' I wanted to satisfy myself. Yer say dat dar was twenty boys. I doan' spute your word, case I ain't no mathertician. Sposen I take a lot ob boys to der bank an' axes him to count 'em, does dat signify dat de cashier is gwine ter pass 'em into de money room? No sah. Go back ter yer tent; I sees a crowd going in.'

The showman, remembering that he had left the entrance unguarded, turned and Isom walked away.—Little Rock Gazette.

A GOOD FILTER.

To have pure water in the house every family should have good filter, the health and comfort depends largely upon the use of properly filtered water. The liver is the same filter for the blood, and Burdock Bitters keep the liver and all the secretory organs in a healthy condition. It is the grand blood purifier, liver regulating tonic.

A CURE FOR HEADACHE.

What physician has ever discovered a cure for headache? Echo answers none. But Burdock Blood Bitters by their purifying, invigorating, nervine properties afford a cure in nearly every case. The health-giving principles of this remedy are unequalled by any similar preparation in the world.

A WOMAN WHO "SHOORD" A BEAR.

About 12 o'clock last Monday evening a lady living on First Avenue in Wood River City, Col., was followed home from Main St. by what she took to be a large New foundland dog. Arriving home, she paused at the door to open it, but it was some time before she succeeded. During this delay the animal got quite close to her, and as seemed harmless the lady called him in. Her surprise may be imagined when, in striking a light, she saw a huge black faced bear looking at her showing his teeth as if grinning at her mistake! more dead than alive the lady opened the door, and gathering her skirts as women sometimes do, began shooing the bear. Bruin, as if approaching the gravity of the situation, hurried out, whereupon the frightened lady fell into a chair, and did not recover her presence of mind for at least fifteen minutes, when she ran to a neighbor's and told of her adventures.—Wood River Times.

THE SECRET OF BEAUTY.

No cosmetic in the world can impart beauty to a face that is disfigured by unsightly blotches arising from impure blood. Burdock Blood Bitters is the grand purifying medicine for all humors of the blood. It makes good blood and imparts the bloom of health to the most sallow complexion.

BENEFITS OF A CLASSICAL EDUCATION.

By a recent change in the curriculm of the Milwaukee high school, Greek has been dropped from the studies, though Latin is still retained, and a city paper regards the dropping of Greek as a mistake. We think so, too. Years ago we held old foggy notions upon educational matters, and thought that English ought to be taught in the public schools. It seemed to us that as English was the language of the country and the English science the only ones used in business, it could not do the children any particular harm to teach them a little English occasionally—not too much, so that it would interfere with their Greek, Latin, painting, drawing and dancing, but enough so they could buy two yards of factory cloth at eight cents a yard and feel satisfied in their minds that it came to ten cents. We were running a little country paper at that time, and work as hard as ever we might we could not make any money, and we could not account for it. One day we dropped into a school examination, where Latin was being peeled off in great flakes, and Greek was being talked into a man filing a circular saw. We saw at once where we were making our life a failure and wasting our energies, we returned to the office determined to remedy the defect. We opened on the public the next week with plenty of Latin and Greek and the effect was wonderful. The public had been suffering for just that kind of thing and the edition was exhausted. Subscriptions began to pour in from alll quarters; we enlarged the paper and came to Milwaukee, still crowding its columns with Latin and Greek. The public knows the rest. Money has flowed in upon us so that we have to keep a man with a splint broom at the door to sweep it back. This is what Latin and Greek has done for us, and we can truthfully say that we had rather see a boy able to write a beautiful essay in Greek any time, than see him hanged for horse stealing. It is more creditable to him.—Milwaukee Sun.

MANHOOD

HOW LOST, HOW RESTORED.

WE have recently published a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical and nervous Debility, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage etc., resulting from excesses.

☞Price, in a sealed envelope, only 6 cts., or two postage stamps.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicines or the use of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

A WONDERFUL WOMAN.

The passion within her was rising now, strong, but surely rising. Her hands were clenched, her eyes bright in the creeping dusk, her voice deep, suppressed, and intense. Edith Talbot clasped her two hands caressingly round her arm, and looked beseechingly up in her face.

'Not houseless, not friendless, Katherine, darling, never that while my brother and I live. Oh, come with us, let Morecambe be your home let me be your sister, I love you, dear—indeed I do and never half so fondly as now. Come with us, and give up those dark and dreadful thoughts that I know are in your mind. Come, Kathie—darling—come.'

She drew her friend's face down and kissed it again and again. And Katherine held her tight for one moment, and then let her go.

'It is like you Edith,' she only said, 'like you and your brother. But then it was always the weakness of your house to take the losing side. I do not say much, but, believe me, I am very grateful. And now, my little pale pet I will send you home—you are worn out in your loyal fidelity to your fallen friend. I will send you home, and to morrow or next day you will come back to Scarswood.'

'To-morrow or next day! But when I come back to Scarswood shall I find Katherine here!'

Katherine was standing where the light fell strongest. She turned abruptly away at these words.

'Where else should you find me! You don't think Peter Dan—nay. I beg his pardon, Sir Peter will turn me on the street for a day or two at least. Here is your brother, Edith—I don't want to meet him, and I would rather be alone. You must go.'

The words sounded ungracious, but Edith understood her—understood the swift impetuous kiss, and the flight from the room. She wanted to be alone—always the impulse of all wild animals in the first throbs of pain. And though Katherine showed in no way nor even much looked it, Edith knew how the wound was bleeding inwardly, and that it was just such strong natures as this that would suffer most, and would suffer muterly.

'Going to stay all night at Scarswood alone, deuced strange girl that,' the squire grumbled. 'Never shed a tear since it all happened, they say—a woman that dosen't cry is a woman of wrong sort. She got Otis to fetch around that coxcomb Dantree, but now that she got him fetched around, what is she going to do with him? She's got to walk out in a day or two and leave that little cad of and attorny lord of the manor. She never says a word or lifts a finger to help herself. And I used to think that girl had pluck.'

'What would you have her do? What can she do?' his sister demanded, impatiently. 'What can any woman do when she is wronged, but break her heart and bear it?'

'Some women are devils, just that,' the young squire responded, gravely; 'and I believe to my soul Katherine Dangerfield has more of the devil in her than even the generality of woman. If Messieurs Dantree and Dangerfield have heard the last of their handiwork, then I'm a Dutchman. If Katherine Dangerfield can't have justice, take my word for it, Miss Talbot, she'll have revenge.'

His sister said nothing—she shivered beneath her sables and looked back wistfully towards Scarswood. She loved her friend truly and greatly, as girls rarely love; and, as Katherine had said, it was ever the way of her chivalrous race to take the losing side—a way that in troubled times gone by has cost more than one Talbot his head. A vison rose before her of Katherine alone in those empty, dark rooms, where death had been so lately, brooding with that pale, sombre face over her wrongs.

'With her nature, it is enough to drive her to madness or suicide,' Miss Talbot thought. 'I will go back to-morrow and fetch her with me, say what she will. To be left to herself is the very worst thing that can happen her now.'

Katherine was not alone, however. There had followed their carriage to Scarswood another, and that other contained the heir and the late baronet's lawyer. Mr. Mansfield, the Castleford solicitor, was talking very earnestly, concerning that unsigned and invalid will.

'You will pardon the liberty I take, Sir Peter, in urging you to do this poor young lady justice. Probably you need no urging—you have been her friend, who so recently thought yourself her cousin. Your late excellent uncle was my friend since your earliest youth—I know and you know how he loved his daughter—Katherine, I mean. I trust and believe, Sir Peter, you will do her justice.'

The smile on the face of the new baronet might have damped the old solicitor's hope could have seen it, but the fast-closing night hid it as he lay back in the cushions.

'How, pray, Mr. Mansfield?'

The sneer was just preciptable. It was there, however, and the lawyer remarked it.

'By giving her at once the three thousand pounds he wished to leave her in that unsigned will, if will it can really be called, drawn in formally by himself, and speaking of her only. I suppose the knowledge of this woman Vavasor's power, and his dread of her, prevented him from making his will properly, months ago. But to those three thousand pounds, the remains of his late's wife's portion, you, at least, Sir peter, have no shadow of moral right. Legally, of course, every thing is yours, but law, as you know, it not always justice.'

'I beg your pardon, Mr. Mansfield,' the other interupted cooly; "law and justice in this case go hand-in-hand. My late lamented uncle tried his best to defraud me of my rights—you can't deny that.'

'He is dead, Sir Peter, and you know the old Latin proverb: "Speak no ill of the dead."

'If truth be ill, it must be spoken, though the dead had been a king instead of a baronet; and I claim that I have a legal and moral right to everything—everything, you understand Mr. Mansfield—this three thousand pounds and all. I think, on the whole Miss Katherine Dangerfield has every reason to be thankful for the life of ease and luxury she has led—she who, for ought we know, might have been a beggar born. There is no need to get angry, Mr. Mansfield—I am speaking truth."

"Then am I to understand, Sir Peter," the lawyer said, raising his voice, "that you refuse to do her even this scant justice—that you mean to send her forth penniless into the world to make her own way as she best can? I am to understand this?"

"My good fellow—no," the young baronet said, in the slowest, laziest and most insolent of tones; "nothing of the sort—I shan't turn my late fair relative into the world. She shall live and enliven Scarswood and me by her charming presence as long as she pleases. But you will kindly allow me to make my own terms with her, and be generous after my own fashion. May I ask if it is to visit and condole with Miss Dangerfield that you are on your way to Scarswood now? I suppose we must call her Miss Dangerfield for convenience sake—her own name, if she had a legal right to a name, being enveloped in a delightful cloud of mystery any romance. I wonder how she finds it to be a heroine?"

"Sir Peter Dangerfield," the old lawyer began hotly; but the old baronet waived his hand authoritively.

'That will do, Mr. Mansfield. I have been in your office, I admit, and I have been an impoverished attorney while you were a well to do solicitor; perhaps you had a right to dictate to me then. Our relations have changed, I deny your right now. Be kind enough to keep your temper, and for the future, your advice.'

And then Sir Peter folded his small arms across his small chest, and looked with the malicious delight of a small nature through his eye glass at a discomfited solicitor.

'Owe him a good many home thrusts,' the baronet thought, with a chuckle. 'I think I have paid off one itstalment at least, I shall pay off all I owe before long.'

They reached Scarswood—dark and gloomy the old house looked up in the chill, gray, wintry twilight. A crescent moon swung over the trees, and the stars, bright and frosty, were out. No light gleamed anywhere along the front of the building; except the soughing of the night wind, no sound reached their ears.

'If one believed in ghosts, Scarswood looks a fit place for a ghostly carnival to-night.' Mr. Mansfield thought; 'It is like a haunted house. I wonder can poor Sir John's shade rest easy in the tomb, with his one ewe lamp at the mercy of this contemptible little wolf?'

'I am going to the library, Mansfield,' the new baronet said, with cool familiarty. 'If you or Miss Dangerfield wants me, you can send for me there. Only this promise; I will come to no other terms with her in your presence What I have to say to her, I shall say to her alone.'

He opened the library door, entered and closed it with an emphatic bang. The elder man looked after him on the landing.

'What does the little reptile mean? I don't half like the tone in which he speaks of Katherine. He doesn't maen to—no, he daren't—no man dare insult her in the hour of her downfall.'

He sent a servant to announce his presence, the French girl Ninon: she came to him in a moment, and ushered him into the room where Katherine sat alone.

It was her old familiar sitting room or boudoir, all fitted up with crimson and gilding, for she had ever liked bright colors. The firelight leaping in the grate alone lit it now, and before the fire, lying back in a great carved and gilded chair, Katherine sat. The bright cushions against which her head lay threw out with starting relief the gashtly palor of her face, and the dead black of her dress. How changed she was—how changed—how changed out of all knowledge. And there were people who had called her cold, and heartless and unfeeling because he had sat with dry eyes and still face beside her dead. 'Unfeeling;' and worn and altered like this.

She looked round and held out her hand, with a faint shadow of her former bright smile, to her friend.

'My dear,' he said, very gently, 'I do not intrude upon you too soon do I? But I could not wait; I came with Sir Peter straight from the funeral here. As things stand now, the sooner your affairs are settled the better.'

She lifted her head a little and looked at him.

'Peter Dangerfield here—so soon. He is in haste to take possession. Does he intend to remain all night? and am I to leave at once?'

'You are not to leave until you see fit, for a thousand Peter Dangerfields. I don't know whether he intends remaining over night or not; certainly not, though, I should say, if you should object.'

'I! What right have I to object? The house is his and everything in it. He is perfectly justified in taking possession at once, and turning me out if he sees fit.

'He will never do that, my child; and I think—I hope—I am sure he will act as common justice requires, and give you at once the three thousand pounds your father bequeathed to you in that unsigned will.

She half rose from her chair; a light flashed in her face; a rush of passionate words leaped to her lips. Mr. Mansfield drew back. It was the old fiery temper breaking threw the frozen calm of those latter days of despair. But all at once she checked herself; she who never before had checked a single emotion. She sank back slowly into her seat, and a strange set expression hardened her mouth.

'You think so, Mr. Mansfield; you thind he will be generous enough for that? And it is in his power not to give it if he likes—those three thousand pounds?'

'Certainly, it is in his power; but no one save the verriest monster would think of acting a part so thoroughly mean and base. He has come into a great fortune suddenly and unexpectedly, and you have lost one. Surely no wretch lives on earth so utterly despicable as to wish to retain also the portion of the late Lady Dangerfield. Sir John's last effort was to sign that will; it ought to be the most sacred thing on earth to Sir John's successor.'

She listened very quietly, the shadow of a scornful smile on her face.

'Mr. Mansfield, I am afraid there is some thing wanting in your knowledge of human nature, in your opinion of Sir Peter Dangerfield. You forget how long this new made baronet has been defrauded of his rights as heir presumptive. You forget that same months ago I refused to marry him; that I even insulted him; my abominable temper, Mr. Mansfield.—You forget he owes me a long debt, and that it is in his power to repay me And I think Sir Peter is a gentleman who will conscientiously pay every debt of that sort to the uttermost farthing.'

'My dear Miss Dangerfield—'

'And that is still another injury,' the girl said. 'I have presumed to wear an honorable and ancient name; I, a nameless waif and stray, born in an almhouse or a hovel, very likely. And you think he will really give this three thousand pounds to me? Did he tell you so, Mr. Mansfield?

'No, he told me nothing.' The old lawyer shifted away uneasily as he spoke, from the strange expression in the large, steadfast eyes. 'He said he would see you alone, and make his terms with you. I infer from this that he intends to do something. He is in the library; shall I go and send him here, or would you rather it were to morrow?'

She was silent a moment, looking into the fire, her mouth set in that hard, straight line. He watched her uneasily. He could not understand her any more than the others. Was she going to take it quietly and humbly like this? she, who two weeks ago had been the proudest girl in Sussex Was she going to accept Peter Dangerfield's dole of charity and thank him for his generosity? or did those compressed lips, the dry, bright glitter of those eyes, speak of coming tempest and revolt? He was out of his depth altogether.

'Well, my dear,' he said, fidgeting, 'shall I send him or—'

She looked up aroused from her trance.

'Send him by all means,' she said 'Let us see how generous Peter Dangerfield can be.

He got up, walked irresolutely to the door, hesitated a moment, then came suddenly back.

'And Kathie,' he said impetuously, if you should fling his miserable dole back in his face, don't fear that you shall ever want a home. I have no daughters of my own; come with me to Castleford, and brighten the life of two old humdrum people. Come and be my daughter for the rest of your days.'

He gave her no time to answer; he hurried away and rapped smartly at the library door. Peter Dangerfield's small, colorless face looked out.

'What is it?' he asked. 'Am I to go up stairs?'

'You are,' responded Mr. Mansfield, curtly; 'and as you deal with that poor child in her trouble, may the good, just God deal with you. I shall remain here and take her home with me if she will come.'

Peter Dangerfield smiled; an evil and most sinister smile.

'I think it extremely likely she will go,' he said. 'The two-story brick dwelling of Mr. Mansfield, the solicitor, will be rather an awkward change after the gaiety and grandeur of Scarswood, but then, beggars mustn't be choosers.'

He walked straight upstairs, still a smile on his face—still with that exulting glow at his heart.

'You have had your day, my lady,' he said, 'and you walked over our heads with a ring and a clatter. You queened it right royally over us, and now the wheel has turned, and my turn has come. There is not a slight, not a sneer, not an insult of yours, my haughty, uplifted Miss Dangerfield, that I do not remember; that I will not repay to-night.'

He opened the door without ceremony, and walked in. The room was brightly lighted now; she had lit the clusters of wax tapers in the chandeliers, and stirred the fire into a brighter blaze. With its crimson and gold hangings and upholstery, its rich velvety carpets, its little gems of paintings, its carved and inlaid piano, its mirrors, its lights, its warmth and perfume, it looked, as he opened the door, a rich and glowing picture of color and beauty. And in the trailing black dress, and with her white, cold face, Katherine, the fallen queen of all this grandeur, stood and looked at him as he came in.

She had left her seat, and was leaning lightly against the mantle, her hands hanging loosely, clasped before her. On those wasted hands rich rings flashed in the firelight, and on the left still gleamed Gaston Dantree's betrothal pirclet, a heavy band of plain gold. It was the first thing Peter Dangefield saw. He laughed slightly and pointed to it.

'You wear it still, then, my fair Cousin Katherine. And he will recover, Otis says. Well, who knows? You were madly in love with him when you were a baronet's daughter. He may prove faithful, and think better of jilting you when he recovers, and we may have the wedding after all. Let us hope so. He has used you badly; infernally, I may say—but then your angelic sex is ready to forgive the man they love seventy times seven.'

He took his place opposite her, and they looked each other straight in the eyes. It was the grave defiance of two duelists to the death.

'Was that what you came here to say, Sir Peter Dangerfield?'

'No, Katherine—I wonder if your name realy is Katherine, by the way; I must ask Mrs. Vavasor; I came here at old Mansfield's request to talk business and money matters. How nice it is for you, my dear, to have so many friends in the hour of your downfall; the Talbots, the Mansfields and that heavy dragoon, De Vere, who will do anything under heaven for you—well, except, perhaps, marry you. And you looklike a queen uncrowned to-night, my tall, stately Miss Dangerfield; not good looking, you know, my dear—you were never that—but majestic and dignified, and uplifted, and all that sort of thing. Ah! how are the mighty fallen, indeed! Only a fortnight ago you stood here ruling it like a very princess, on my soul, monarch of all I surveyed; and now, there isn't a beggar in the streets of Castleford poorer than you.'

She stood dead silent, looking at him. How his eyes gleamed; how glibly his venomous tongue ran. His little form actually seemed to dilate and grow tall in this hour of his triumph.

'And that other night,' he went on; 'do you remember it, Kathie? Oh, let me call you by the old familiar name to the last! That other night when I—a poor, pettifogging attorney, as I think I have heard Mr. Dantree call me—I had the presumption in the conservatory to as you to be my wife. It was presumption, and I richly deserved the rebuff I got for my pains; I deserved even to be called a 'rickety dwarf.' No one knows it better than I. You the heiress of Scarswood, and I not worth a rap. If I had been good-looking, even, like that angelic Dantree, with the face and voice of a seraph; but ugly and a dwarf, and only an attorney withal, you served me precisely right, Katherine. You adored beauty, and Dantree was at your feet; you worshiped him, and he worshipped your—fortune; a very common story. What a pity the Fates did not make us both hansome instead of clever. What chance has brains against beauty, particularly in a woman? You served me right, Katherine, and now, in return, I am to come before you to-night, and offer you three thousand pounds; mine to give or keep as you please.

He paused, his whole face glowing with sardonic light. Hers never changed.

'Go on,' she said in a perfectly steady voice.

He came a step nearer. What did that strange demonical light in his eyes mean now? She saw it, but she never flinched.

'Katherine,' he said, 'I can do better for you than that. What is a pitiful three thousand pounds to the late heiress of eight thousand per annum? I can do better for you, and I will. Why should you leave Scarswood at all; why not remain here as mistress still—with me?'

'Go on,' she said again in the same steady tone.

'Need I speak more plainly?' He drew still another step nearer, and all the devil of hatred and malignity within him shone forth in the gleam of his eyes. 'Then I will; it would be a pity for us to misunderstand one another in the least. Last September I asked you, the heiress of Scarswood, to be my wife. You refused; more, you grossly insulted me. To-night I return good for evil; let us forgive and forget. As lord and master of Scarswood, I offer you again a home here, this time not as my wife, but as my mistress!'

The atrocious word was spoken.—His hate and revenge had given him a diabolical courage to say what he never would have dare to say in cold blood. But at the last word he drew back. He was a coward to the core, and she had shown herself before now to have the very fury of a panther. And they were alone—she might murder him before he could reach the door. His first impulse was flight; and she saw it.

The twenty municipal libraries of Paris, containing in the aggregate 70,000 volumes were visited in 1881 by 251,000 readers, an increase of more 100,000 over the year 1880. In recognition of this striking evidence of their utility the annual grant was increased from 85,000 to 95,857 francs.

GET VACCINATED.

Just at present small-pox appears to be prevalent generally over the country. The newspapers and medical men are discussing whether or not vaccination should be practiced. Do not wait, however, to read the outcome of these discussions, but proceed to vaccinate yourself and family at once. Do not take the chance of having been vaccinated before. It is a too loathsome disease to dally with. There was a lady on the train with us, going to Bismarck, Dakota, who had received a telegraphic dispatch that her husband was lying sick there at the hotel. Judge of the general consternation, when, upon our arrival, and a physician had been called into the hotel, he pronounced it a case of small-pox. There were lively times there for a few moments. The husband had come from Montana, where small-pox prevails the year round, in some of the Swedish settlements, because the immigrants bring with them from the old world a prejudice against vaccination. The following week we proceeded into Montana where most alarming reports reached us of dead and dying small-pox victims. Go to a reliable doctor who will furnish pure virus, and have him vaccinate you at once.—American Agriculturalist for February.

HOW TO KILL WHEAT MOTHS.

I know of but one efficient remedy for this insect, and that applies as well to the weevil and to the Angoumois Grain-moth, which is said to do no little damage in the southern and southwertern part of our country. I have frequently seen every kernel of corn samples from the Gulf States perforated by this latter moth larva. The remedy proposed is Bisulphide of Carbon. We have only to pour a quantity of this into the bin at the bottom of the grain to kill al the insects. It is very penetrating and volatile, and equally deadly to all of the insect tribes. I think that a half pint of the liquid would destroy the insects in a bin of 50 to 100 bushels of grain. Not having experimented with grain in such quantities I cannot give the precise quantities of the liquid to be used in different sized bins of grain, but this can easily be determined by trial. To apply the remedy it is desirable to pour the liquid in at the bottom of the grain. To do this we can take a hollow iron cylinder—a gas-pipe will do well—and fit into it a wooden rod which shall be a little longer than the iron tube. One end of the rod is to be made sharp; now place the rod inside of the tube, and, with the sharp end down, force them both to the bottom of the grain; then having withdrawn the rod, turn in the liquid through the tube, which should be pulled out. The insecticide of course is left at the bottom of the grain, and, being very volatile, soon diffuses through the mass and converts the bin into an insect cemetery. Prof. A. J. Cook in American Agriculturist for February.

Forcing Rhubarb.—Outside of places where there are professional gardeners, the forcing of vegetables is very little known in this country. People in general are content with "things in their season," and do not trouble themselves to force or retard. Perhaps the easiest vegetable to force is rhubarb; and by taking a little trouble, material for pies and sauce may be had some weeks in advance of the supply from the open ground. The things needed are clumps of rhubarb roots, soil, and a dark warm place. The roots should be dug before the ground freezes, but in most places there is usually "open spell" this month when it may be done. As fine rhubarb as we ever saw was forced in a barrel or cask; the roots packed in on a layer of soil and surrounded by it, the cask covered tight, and set near the furnace in the cellar. A box to hold the roots, and set in a cupboard or closet in the kitchen will answer; or a box or barrel may be placed in the kitchen. Keep moderately warm, and see that the roots are sufficiently moist. A few roots will give an astonishingly abundant supply, much more tender crisp and less violently sour than the outdoor crop.—American Agriculturist for February.

The will of a recently deceased Dumfriesshire laird has been causing considerable discussion in the south of Scotland. The testator seems to have been a most eccentric person, for, a few months before his death, he threw a parcel to his forester which contained stock to the amount of £17,000, on which that fortunate servant is now living in luxury. He, in the same easy way, gave his coachman a check for £3,000, his shepherd scrip for £18,000, and a check for £3 000 to the aforesaid shepherd's brother. Shortly after he died, and on his will being opened, it was found that the good luck of the shepherd was far from exhausted, as except legacies of £6,000 each to the coachman and the brother, he was left the whole property, about £80,000. He now finds himself possessor of the estates on which he commenced his career as "the wee herd laddie," and in right thereof he has been appointed a Commissioner of Supply for the county.

If it is not out of place for your correspondent to express an opinion, we would say that there would be no difficult in finding another Post Master to take the place of Mr. Rowe when he leaves here.

AN OLD MAN SHOT DEAD AT HIS OWN FIRESIDE.

NARROW ESCAPE OF HIS NEPHEW.

THE HOUSE SET ON FIRE BY THE ASSASSIN.

No clue whatever to the Murderer.

SHELBURNE, Jan 22.—John Smith, a quiet an inoffensive citizen of the township of Amaranth, residing about four miles from here, was foully murdered in his own house last night about six o'clock. The unfortunate victim was a bachelor was about or over fifty years of age, and usually lived alone, but it happened when the murder was committed that a nephew name Jonny Smith, about fourteen years of age, was with him.

THE BOY'S STORY

is that his uncle and himself, after taking supper together, seated themselves at an open fire place, and shortly after he heard a report, either of a gun or pistol, and the old man fell. He looked toward the window from whence the report came and sawa tall man with a dark moustache. The boy immediately started for the door, which was opposite the window, when the man fired at him, the ball passed through the top of his cap. He ran for dear life towards a neighbor's house, which is quite a distance. After he had run a little way he looked back and saw

THE HOUSE ON FIRE.

He alarmed the neighbours as soon as possible, and returned with them to the burning building. They found the old man at the door dead, and one leg burned off below the knee. The old man was reputed to have been quite wealthy, and to have kept a large sum hidden in the house, but it is not known whether he had any at this time or not. There is except what can be gleamed from the boy's story. The greatest excitement prevails, as the old man was universally respected by all who knew him. Thos. Norton, M.D., coroner, will hold an inquest to-morrow morning at ten o'clock. J. P. MacMillan, county crown attorney, drove up from Orangeville this morning, and is doing all in his power to secure the arrest of the guilty party. The body is in charge of village constable Henderson.

SHELBURNE, Jan. 23.—The excitement caused by the murder of John Smith still runs high. The coroner's inquest commenced at ten o'clock to-day. The boy was examined to-day, and several other witnesses, but nothing new has been elicited. The people have grave suspicion as to the perpetrators of the crime. The post-mortem report of Drs. Barr and Bolston did not strengthen the boy's evidence, as they found no indications of wounds made by firearms. The skull of the deceased is badly fractured, and the wounds appear as if had been inflicted by a heavy stick. At the present writing (9 p.m.) the inquest is going on, and probably will last all day to-morrow. The hall is densely packed, it being impossible to get even standing room.

SHELBURNE, Jan. 24th The inquest on the body of John Smith, of Amaranth murdered in his own house on Saturday night, was resumed this morning by Coroner Norton. Several witnesses were examined, and they did not prove anything particular. The boy Johnny Smith is under the charge of constable Henderson, and has been locked up all day. He does not appear restless or excited. Detective Murray arrived to-day to work up the case. Great excitement prevails in the village.

ACCIDENT ON THE RAIL.

Yesterday afternoon, at 3.30 o'clock, a Toronto, Grey, and Bruce train, bound for Toronto, ran off the track at a point a mile south of the town of Owen Sound. The passenger car, postal car, and two freight cars were precipitated into the ditch. After the train had run over the bank a scene of the greatest consternation and terror ensued, some of the passengers shrieking, others rendered by the shock insensible, and lying apparently dead. There were about thirty persons on the train, a number of whom were seriously injured. Of those injured were: Mrs. Kelso, residence unknown; Mrs. Jones of Brampton; and Mrs. Olgivie, of Shelburne. Mr. Parker, commercial traveller, was also badly injured. The accident happened through the spreading of the rails, but the wreckage was shortly afterwards removed and the track left clear.

OTHER ACCOUNTS.

Mr. Stinson, of Vickers' Express, sent the following despatch to the Company's office in this city.—"Bad smash-up on the road. Not likely to get in to-night. J. STINSON."

Mr. Heywood, baggage-master of the T., G., and B. Railway, was interviewed at a late hour last night, but stated that he would be ignorant of the accident until the arrival of the branch train from Teeswater, which contained the baggage and express matter of the collapsed train. He apparently was unwilling to give any information concerning the accident.

Another Accident on the T. G. and B. Railway.—While a freight train on the Toronto, Grey, and Bruce railway was coming eastward on Saturday night the cars jumped the track a few miles this side of Orangeville. one of the employes named Doherty received serious injuries to his right thigh, the muscles of which were severed almost to the bone. He was conveyed to the city at an early hour yesterday morning. And taken to the hospital. It is supposed that no bones are broken, and that the injured man will likely recover. Neither his Christian name nor his place of residence could be ascertained by the hospital authorities.

FROM "THE TIMES."

Editors Times.—Seeing an article in your paper last week from Arnold Parker, I was impressed with the earnestness with which he appeals to you to continue to enlighten the world in regard to the means by which he was so miraculously cured of rheumatism and hip-joint lameness by using Kendall's Spavin Cure. The article to which he alludes by Dr. Bates impressed me so favorably with the real merits of this remedy that I tried it also for several blemishes on my horses and found it the most perfect cure I ever tried for spavins and other blemishes, as it completely removed the enlargement in every instance by continuing its use for several days after the lameness had subsided. The perfect success I have always had with Kendall's Spavin Cure led me to use it on my own person, and for the family with the very best results as a family liniment. While several of the cures made with it have been almost miraculous, none have been more satisfactory than several cures which I made with it of foot-rot and also sore teats as well as warts on teats of cows. I consider it a sure cure for sore teats or foot-rot in either cow or sheep. With the satisfaction this remedy has always given in every instance, I cannot refrain asking with my friend Parker that you continue to make known to the world this grandest discovery of the nineteenth century. Yours truly,

JAMES A. CAMPBELL.

The above letter, with one published last week, encourages us in our efforts to make our paper one of the most valuable Journals in the country and to all our patrons, and we now ask others of our readers who have been alike benefited by the letter published one year ago from Dr. Bates that they send us for publication, statements which they may wish to make for the benefit of others.—[Ed.]

NOTICE.—We wish it distinctly understand that we do not hold ourselves reponsible for the opinions expressed by our correspondence

TRAVERSTON, Jan. 25th, 1882.

To WM. HALL, Esq.,
Traverston P. O.

SIR:—I received a letter from your Solicitor, J. Masson, Esq., calling on me to apologize for the slander uttered by me on 26th Dec. 1881. I am at a loss to know what statement I made on that day that could be called a slander. The only statement I made that appeared to offend you, was, that you received one dollar and fifty-six cents that I did not think at the time that you were entitled to, and called upon you, as any ratepayer has a right to do, for an explanation. You made an explanation at the time, which I accepted as satisfactory.

THE EXCURSION.

MR. EDITOR,—Allow me, through the columns of your valuable paper, to give a few facts in regard to that memorable excursion to Toronto on last Monday. I took the train about nine o'clock at Markdale, which was due at 7.50, and quite naturally expected a great changes in speed comfort, &c., and a good time generally. The day was clear and cold, the thermometer registering 15 degrees below zero. Nothing, however, very remarkable transpired going South, and we arrived in Toronto at 3 o'clock p. m., being three hours behind time, nothing remarkable, as I said, for the T., G. & B. We were surprised to see not a particle of snow in Toronto, but it was intensely cold all the same, We had to do our six hours business in three, so there was no time to spare, and at the hour of six the majority of the excursionists were on hand at the Union Station, and at 6.35 the train moved out, carrying hundreds anxious to get home. Parkdale, the first stopping place, was reached in a short time, where there was a delay of about two hours; cause unknown apparently to any one. Well, as a natural consequence, the passengers grew anxious. Some stepped off and took the street cars back to the city, to remain over until the next day, while those remaining grew uneasy and thirsty; but strange to say there was no water to be had. One said, he supposed the train hands thought, as most of the passengers were from the country, they did not require water to drink, as they had plenty at home—Another supposed it being now a broad gauge, steel rail road, with powerful engines, they would not feel the need of any until their return. At length another engine was provided and a start made, and in a short time we came to a stand-still at Humber Summit, where they watered the Indians (engines); but the white people were not favored so much as to have a taste. After a delay of some twenty minutes we moved forward, stopping at the different stations and tanks, and arrived at Orangeville at 1 o'clock a. m., a distance of 49 miles from Toronto in 7 hours. Here the obliging conductor gave twenty minutes for refreshments; but we could not get a bite for love or money. The proprietor of Duffie's Hotel would not provide anything but drink. Well, we thought even at that time of night we could have procured a pie or a few buscuits, or a leg of a turkey; but no—not so much as the photograph of a chicken. Well, after cutting off two coaches, we left at 1 45, making Shelburne at 2.50, and Dundalk at 3.30. The passengers were becoming few and exceedingly quiet, many having departed for the land of nod. We next reached Flesherton Station at 3.35, and finally we reached Markdale at 4.20. I struck a match on entering my boarding house, thinking Jack Frost had his toeses out, and found the thermometer 25 below zero. I understand the manager made the excursion tickets good to return on any train Tuesday, giving parties a chance to attend to business which they were unable to complete on Monday, owing to the train being late.

MORALS.

Mr. Editor.

I am sorry to have to cast, or give a word of reproof, to the fathers and mothers, of the young men and boys who compose the Y. M. P. B. Association of Dundalk, boys and men who attend both church and sabbath schools throughout the year, and at their annual anniversary to call on the generous public and ministers of the gospel, to aid them in their annual celebration.

And in the face of all the good and true, with all the advice of the best men of the day, to attempt to keep up and have the old fashion dance and ball staggers me, beyond anything the public morals of the present day have to contend with—but think of the young men and women going direct from the church, after listening to able addresses and taking part in the Fire in Glenelg.—Yesterday (Wednesday the dwelling of Alex. Beaton, of the Township of Glenelg, took fire and was completely destroyed. We did not learn whether any of the furniture was saved or not, but it is not likely that much could be saved, as Mr. Beaton was in Durham at the time.—Grey Review.

(FROM BRAZIL.)

The New Compound, its wonderful affinity to the Digestive Apparatus and the Liver, increasing the dissolving juices, relieving almost instantly the dreadful results of Dyspepsia, Indigestion, and the TORPID LIVER, makes Zopesa an every day necessity in every house.

It acts gently and speedily in Billousness, Costiveness, Headache, Sick Headache, Distress after Eating, Wind on the Stomach, Heartburn, Pains in the Side and Back, Want of Appetite, Want of Energy, Low Spirits, Foul Stomach. It invigorates the Liver, carries off all surplus bile, regulates the Bowels, and gives tone to the whole system.

Cut this out and take it to your Druggist and get a 10 cent Sample, or a large bottle for 75 cents, and tell your neighbor about it.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

The most successful Remedy ever discovered, as it is certain in its effects and does not blister. Read Proof Below.

FROM THE ONEONTA PRESS N.Y.

Oneonta, New York, Jan. 6th, 1881.

Early last summer Messrs. B. J. Kendall & Co., of Enosburgh Falls, Vt., made a contract with the publishers of the Press for a half column advertisement for one year setting forth the merits of Kendall's Spavin Cure. At the same time we secured from the firm a quantity of books, entitled Dr. Kendall's Treatise on the Horse and his Diseases, which we are giving to advance paying subscribers of the Press as a premium.

About the time the advertisement first appeared in this paper Mr. P. G. Schermerhorn, who resides near Colliers, had a spavined horse. He read the advertisement and concluded to test the efficacy of the remedy, although his friends laughed at his credulity. He bought a bottle of Kendall's Spavin Cure and commenced using it on the horse in accordance with the directions, and he informed us this week that it effected such a complete cure that an expert horseman, who examined the animal recently could find no trace of the spavin or the place where it had been located. Mr. Schermerhorn has since secured a copy of Kendall's Treatise of the Horse and his Diseases, which he prizes very highly and would be loth to part with at any price, provided he could not obtain another copy. So much for advertising reliable articles.

Kendall's Spavin Cure.

New Hamburg, Ont., Dec. 28th, 1881.

Mr. F. H. McCallum, Dear Sir:—The bottle of Dr. Kendall's Spavin Cure bought of you last summer gave me the utmost satisfaction and performed a wonderful cure upon a mare nineteen years old belonging to me, which was badly spavined for ten years. She was so lame that I could hardly get her to move. The lameness is entirely gone after using half a bottle of the cure, and she is like a young horse again.

Yours truly.
J. F. ROTH.

FROM A
PROMINENT PHYSICIAN.

Washingtonville, Ohio, June 17th, 1880.

Dr. J. B. Kendall & Co., Gents:—Reading your advertisement in Turf, Field and Farm, of Kendall's Spavin Cure, and having a valuable and speedy horse which had been lame from spavin for eighteen months, I sent to you for a bottle by express, which in six weeks removed all lameness and enlargement and a large splint from another horse and both horses are to day as sound as colts. The one bottle was worth to me one hundred dollars.

Respectfully yours,
H. A. BERTOLETT, M. D.

Kendall's Spavin Cure.
ON HUMAN FLESH.

Thousands of trials on human flesh has proved beyond a doubt that "KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE" has sufficient strength to penetrate and virtue to cure the worst cases of rheumatism, corns, bunyons, frost-bites, or any bruise, cut or lameness which are not affected in the least by ordinary liniments. It does not blister but on the contrary removes all soreness.

St. Johns, P.Q., Oct. 27th, 1881.

Dr. B. Kendall & Co., Gents:—I have used your Spavin Cure with great success on spavins, curbs and splints. I know it to be a good remedy for ringbones, bone spavins, cuts, galls and all kinds of lameness and many other difficulties about the horse. One of my men sprained his ankle badly. I applied Kendall's Spavin Cure and I never saw anything work like it, he was well in a few days. I know it to be good for man as well as beast. I procured one of your Treatise on the Horse, by mail for 25c., and I think it was the means of saving me $100 on one horse that I treated according to the directions given in your book for displaced stifle.

Yours truly,
WM. J. PEARSON.

Dunham, P.Q., March 10th, 1879.

Dr. B. J. Kendall & Co., Gents:—About a year ago I fell in the road onto some ice and was badly hurt in the hip joint, which caused me much suffering. I tried various remedies but none gave relief, until I tried Kendall's Spavin Cure. I applied it full strength twice a day for two weeks during last October and it effected a perfect cure. I have since then been well and free from lameness. It is very valuable for man as well as beast.

Yours truly,
CHESTER K. GREEN.

Kendall's Spavin Cure.

Is sure in its effects, mild in actions as it does not blister, yet it is penetrating and powerful to reach every deep seated pain or to remove any bony growth or other enlargements, such as spavins, splints, curbs, ringbones, callous, swellings and any lameness and all enlargements of the joints or limbs, or for rheumatism in man or for any purpose for which a liniment is used for man or beast It is now known to be the best liniment for man ever used, acting mild and yet certain in its effects.

Send address for illustrated circular which we think gives positive proof of its virtues. No remedy has ever met with such unqualified success to our knowledge, for beast as well as man,

Price $1 per bottle, or six bottles for $5. All Druggists have it or can get it for you, or it will be sent to any address on receipt of price by the proprietors, DR. B. J. KENDALL & CO., Enosburgh Falls, Vt.

Rev. D. Williams, who was well known in this place, as well as Flesherton, Dundalk, and through this county generally, died in his residence in Walkerton, on Tuesday the 24th inst. The deceased has been in poor health for some years, the commencement of which was, we believe, an attact of congestion of the lungs while on the Markdale circuit. He was yet a young man, and his premature death will be sad news to hundreds who have in the past been profited by his society and godly life.

The Manitoba fever appears contagious and is becoming very prevalent. We understand that it is the intention of Mr. E. D. Wilcox Jeweller, who sold his stock and business to Mr. W. F. Doll of Flesherton, to take a trip to the Prairie Province. Mr. W. is a good practical watchmaker and a first class Telegraph operator He will doubtless have no trouble in securing a good situation should be desire one. He has been in business seven years in Markdale, and has won the confidence and respect of the entire community, and we but poorly express the sentiments of the people of the village and vicinity when we say, we deeply regret his intended departure, and wish him success in his calling wherever he may locate.

The second social given under the auspices of the Ladies Association of the Presbyterian Church, Markdale, in aid of the church building fund was given at Murray's, on Tuesday evening last. The night was clear, and the sleighing good. There was a good turn out from Markdale. The social was in every respect a grand success. The wholehearted host and hostes did all in their power to add to the comfort and enjoyment of those present, and each and all enjoyed themselves immensely. A large cake was to be cut and Miss McIntyre and Miss Donnelly were chosen as candidates for the occasion. Master John Richards was appointed to canvas for the former and Master Wesley Whitby for the latter. The canvas was entered into on both sides with more interest than an ordinary municipal election, and resulted in the election of Miss McIntyre. The proceeds of the social amounted to $32.

The greatest revolution in Steel Pen making is in the new turned up point pens, unexcelled for easy writing. Ask for Esterbrook's Tecumseh, Choctaw and telegraphic pens. For wholesale supplies, Brown Bros., Toronto.

We had a very severe snow storm on Saturday turning colder on Sunday. Monday was clear but very cold, the thermometer registering 15 below zero. Monday night however was much colder, when the mercury went down to 32, which was the coldest dip this season. Wednesday morning was quite moderate, 20 above zero.

Never neglect a Cough or Cold as they are very apt to lead to serious lung troubles. Dr. Carson's Pulmonary Cough Drops have a wonderful effect in relieving and curing Coughs Colds and all affections of the Throat and Lungs. As Dr. Carson is a well known Canadian physician of over 25 years successful practice, there is no wonder that his Remedies are so popular with the Canadian people. A. Turner and Co. Special Agents for Markdale.

A good preventative for Fevers, Ague and Bilious Disorders is Dr. Carson's Stomach and constipation Bitters a purely vegetable preparation. They cleanse the system, purify the Blood and increase the appetite, and render those using them almost proof against disease, should be used in every case instead of pills. A. Turner and Co. Special Agents Markdale.

Mr. E. D. Wilcox, begs to intimate to his many friends and customers that he has sold out his business to Mr. W. F. Doll of Flesherton. He would also wish to return his most sincere thanks for the very generous and liberal support he has recieved at the hands of the people of Markdale and vicinity during the seven years he has been in business here, and at the same time, would bespeak for his successor a continuance of the same.

Rev. D. Williams, who was well known in this place, as well as Flesherton, Dundalk, and through this county generally, died in his residence in Walkerton, on Tuesday the 24th inst. The deceased has been in poor health for some years, the commencement of which was, we believe, an attack of congestion of the lungs while on the Markdale circuit. He was yet a young man, and his premature death will be sad news to hundreds who have in the past been profited by his society and godly life.

The Manitoba fever appears contagious and is becoming very prevalent. We understand that it is the intention of Mr. E. D. Wilcox Jeweller, who sold his stock and business to Mr. W. F. Doll of Flesherton, to take a trip to the Prairie Province. Mr. W. is a good practical watchmaker and a first class Telegraph operator He will doubtless have no trouble in securing a good situation should he desire one. He has been in business seven years in Markdale, and has won the confidence and respect of the entire community, and we but poorly express the sentiments of the people of the village and vicinity when we say, we deeply regret his intended departure, and wish him success in his calling wherever he may locate.

Several Communications, and the Minutes of Euphrasia Council unavoidably crowded out.

Mr. Masson from Owen Sound, visits here as usual on Friday and Saturday, every week and has recieved instructions to lend company funds at 6 per cent. He has also a limited quantity of private funds for investment.

An extensive credit auction sale will take place on the farm of J. King, lot 24 con. 10 Euphrasia, on the 10th of Feb'y., when a quantity of farm stock implements &c. will be sold. 11 months credit on good paper. W. Shepherdson, Auctioneer.

AHA.—Dentists who have tried "TEABERRY." pronounce it the finest thing on the face of this earth for the teeth and breath. 5 cent samples.

FIRE.—On Monday morning the frame building occupied by Mrs. Caswell was discovered to be on fire, caused by a defective stove pipe. A crowd soon gathered, some setting to remove the furniture, while others try to save the building. At one time it seemed that the building must go, but through the strenuous exertions of our citizens it was saved.

Our subscribers will please bear in mind that when we decided to reduce the subscription to $1.00, it must be in advance, the reduction is but small to any one, but it amounts to $150.00 less to us. Therefore, we hope our subscribers will hand in their renewals at once. We venture to say there is not a better local paper in Canada the size of ours printed for the same price.

A PUBLIC MEETING Should be called of the citizens of every city, town and village in the Dominion, to consider what should be done to prevent the hair from turning Grey—and falling out. If this important question received their earnest consideration they would unanimously decide that science had at last discovered something that would answer this purpose—and furthermore would recommend Cingalese Hair Renewer as being this something for restoring the hair to its natural color, and prevent its falling out. 50 cents per bottle. For sale by all Druggists.

Dr. Sproule M.P., has announced by Posters, a serious of public meetings, where he will be glad to meet as many electors as can make it convenient to attend. The time and places are as follows: Flesherton, on Monday Jan. 30th; Rocklyn, Tuesday 31st; Thornbury, Wednesday Feb'y. 31st; Maxwell Tuesday 2nd; Shelburne, Friday 3rd; Dundalk, Satur. 24th. Each meeting to commence at 8 o'clock p.m., sharp.

Dr. Carson's Pulmonary Cough Drops are an excellant Expectorant loosening the phlegm far more readily than any other preparation. The Royal Scarlet Chapter, of the District of Artemesia, met at Flesherton Station, on the 14th inst., and by adjournment on the 18th, for the election of officers, and general business in connection with the Chapter. The following Sir Knight, Companion or the officers for the currant year viz: J. Brodie, W. C. C.; W. Wright, E. C.; J. Hales, Chap.; T. Elliott, C. S.; W. Rutledge, C. T.; G. Best, S. H.K A.; W. Brady, J. H.; A. Parks, O. H.

A SUCCESSFULL EXPERIMENT IN MELANCHON.—Mr. John McLean, who moved into the above township two years ago, prepared a piece of land for the purpose of raising clover seed. He sowed 14 acres with red clover and 11¼ with alsike, and has it thrashed, and marketed the most of The red clover yielded 65 bushels which is worth $5.25 per bushel, and the alsike, which he has shipped, 52 bushels and is worth $8. per bushel. He also had 12½ acres of peas, making in all 38 acres, the produce of which netted the handsome sum of $1.200. The seed was thrashed by Messrs. Doner from near Stayner.

ORANGE SOIREE IN PROTON.—The soiree of L. O. L No. 1202 came off on Wednesday, 18th inst., in their hall, on lot 28, con. 13, and was a success. After tea Bro. Joseph McArdle was voted to the chair. Apologies were received from Rev. Mr. Edmunds, Dr. Sproule, M. P., and Dr. Christoe. The following gentlemen addressed the meeting—Revs. Messrs. Eakin, of Dundalk, Turnbull of Shelburne, and Geo. Rutherford of the same place. Music was furnished by the Hopeville choir. Votes of thanks were passed to the ladies, the choir, the speakers and the chairman. The national anthem was sung, and the party dispersed well pleased with the evening's entertainment.

CHURCH OPENING IN PROTON.—The new W. M. Church on lot 14, 16th con. of Proton, was opened by Divine service on Sunday, 8th inst.; and a soiree on the following Monday evening. The opening sermon was preached on Sunday morning by the Rev. Mr. Fish, the superintendent of the district; the afternoon and evening services by the Rev. Mr. Barkwell, of Toronto, formerly of the circuit. The church, although large, was well filled. On Monday evening the tea party was the most successful ever known in Proton. Tea was served in the old church, and was a credit to the ladies of the congregation; refreshments were served from 5 until 8 p. m. The addresses, music, etc., came off in the new church. Rev. Mr. Edmunds occupied the chair. Addresses were delivered by the chairman and Revs. Messrs. Barkwell and Fish. Good music was furnished by the Flesherton choir. A subscription list was opened and about $500 was collected, which will about clear off the debt on the church. Votes of thanks were passed to the choir, the speakers and the chairman.

Gold. Great chance to make money. Those who always take advantage of the good chances for making money that are offered, generally become wealthy, while those who do not improve such chances remain in poverty. We want many men, women, boys and girls to work for us right in their own localities. Any one can do the work properly from the first start. The business will pay more than ten times ordinary wages. Expensive outfit furnished free. No one who engages fails to make money rapidly You can devote your whole time in the work, or only your spare moments. Ayer's
Hair Vigor,

FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

IT is a most agreeable dressing, which is at once harmless and effectual, for preserving the hair. It restores, with the gloss and freshness of youth, faded or gray, light, and red hair, to a rich brown, or deep black, as may be desired. By its use thin hair is thickened, and baldness often though not always cured. It checks falling of the hair immediately, and causes a new growth in all cases where the glands are not decayed; while to brashy, weak, or otherwise diseased hair, it imparts vitality and strength, and renders it pliable.

The VIGOR cleanses the scalp, cures and prevents the formation of dandruff; and, by its cooling, stimulating, and soothing properties, it heals most if not all of the humors and diseases peculiar to the scalp, keeping it cool, clean, and soft, under which conditions diseases of the scalp and hair are impossible.

As a Dressing for Ladies' Hair

The VIGOR is incomparable. It is colorless, contains neither oil nor dye, and will not soil white cambric. It imparts an agreeable and lasting perfume, and as an article for the toilet it is economical and unsurpassed in its excellence.

AROUND THE WORLD.

The project of the world's fair in Boston has been abandoned. Talk was plenty and money scarce.

The Government of South Australia are about to build a new House of Parliament at Adelaide at the cost of $4,000,000.

Ella Tunney ran heedlessly in debt for fine clothes at Seymour, Ind., and then committed suicide because she could not pay.

It estimated that the sum of 500,000,000, marks ($125,000,000) would be required for the purchase of the German railways by the State, as intended.

A GOOD FILTER.

To have pure water in the house every family should have good filter, the health and comfort depends largly upon the use of properly filtered water. The liver is the true filter for the blood, and Burdock Bitters keep the liver and all the secretory organs in a healthy condition. It is the grand blood purifying, liver regulating tonic.

A resident of Belfast, Ohio, has been put under bonds of $500 to appear before the Grand Jury on the charge of opening a letter from his wife to her father.

The rich Greek banker, Syngros, has contributed another 100,000 francs for the foundation of a National Archæological Museum at Olympia, where the relics of antiquity recently discovered are to be exhibited.

Mr. John Miller has just purchased from the Crown his farm of Scralister, Caithness-1,000 acres areable, 500 mountain pasture for $145,000. His rent was $4,875. This sum is a pretty good price for an extreme north of Scotland farm.

ANSWER THIS.—Did you ever know any person to be ill without inaction of the Stomach, Liver or Kidneys, or did you ever know one who was well when either was obstructed or inactive; and did you ever know or hear of any case of the kind that Hop Bitters would not cure? Ask your neighbor the same question.—Times.

A Chinese acrobat and juggler recently gave a performance at Brighton, England, in the course of which he fired a small cannon which he had balanced upon a sword held in his mouth. The cannon was directed toward the upper gallery, and when the smoke had cleared away it was discovered that the charge had blown the head off a boy sitting among "the gods."

A CURE FOR HEADACHE.

What physician has ever discovered a cure for headache? Echo answers none. But Burdock Blood Bitters by their purifying, invigorating, nervine properties afford a cure in nearly every case. The health-giving principles of this remedy are unequalled by any similar preparation in the world.

WORSE THAN WAR.

The throat has destroyed more lives than the sword, by imprudence in eating and intemperance in drinking; but when health becomes impaired the miserable dyspeptic may find relief in Burdock Blood Bitters. It regulates the bowels, acts upon the liver and kidneys, purifies the blood, and stimulates all the secretions to a healthy action.

Alexandra, Princess of Wales, has set in England one excellent fashion. She has made so public a display of her attachment to her sons and daughters that it has become the mode for the fashionable British matron similarly to express her affections. Small boys and girls now [illegible] completely eclipsed by [illegible] and pugs as the pets paraded by the ladies in victorias and on foot in Hyde park.

THE SECRET OF BEAUTY.

No cosmetic in the world can impart beauty to a face that is disfigured by [illegible] blotches arising from impure blood. Burdock Blood Bitters is the grand purifying medicine for all humors of the blood. It makes good blood and imparts the bloom of health to the most sallow complexion.

The number of beggars of all kinds who have made their appearance in the streets of Paris this winter has largely exceeded the usual number, though so far the weather has been mild and even sunny. The depots of Mendicity, are said to be already full, as well as the hospitals, while the jails are too small for the number of criminals of a different type. The police acknowledge that in the case of beggars they are, and always have been, all but helpless.

Carl Bock, who has been traveling in Borneo for the Dutch Government, who were very anxious to obtain accurate information as to certain tribes, visited Siban, Mobang, a cannibal chief, who, when he saw him, had fresh upon his hands the blood of no less than seventy victims—men, women and children— whom he and his followers had just slaughtered, and whose heads and brains, considered the tidbits, he had devoured. His appearance was unprepossessing.

CHILBLAINS.

These troublesome complaints may be speedily cured by Hagyard's Yellow Oil, the great rheumatic remedy, which, as an external application and as an internal remedy has a wider range of usefulness than any similar preparation in the world. All druggists sell it. 25c.

The state of the English Lord Chancellor's health is giving rise to considerable anxiety. He has now had a relapse which will probably necessitate his never again resuming his judicial duties. He overworked himself while at the bar. From the time when as Roundell Palmers, he, was called by Lincoln's Inn, in 1727, he labored more hours per day than any of his brother professionals, and after he became a Q. C. the extent of his practice alllowed him no rest. The daily habit of his life was to rest only two or three hours out of the twenty-four, and eat but little. The enormous amount of work he got through was the astonishment of all who knew him. Notwithstanding the extreme pressure of his business he never looked at any of his papers on Sunday; but even then he was not idle, for when he was not in his place of worship he was engaged in Sunday school teaching.

BURNS AND SCALDS

Are promptly cured as well as all flesh wounds, sprains, bruises, callous lumps, soreness, pain, inflammation and all painful diseases; by the great Rheumatic Remedy, Hagyard's Yellow Oil. For external and internal use. Price, 25c.

The Purest and Best Medicine ever Made.

A combination of Hops, Buchu, Mandrake and Dandelion, with all the best and most curative properties of all other Bitters, makes the greatest Blood Purifier, Liver Regulator, and Life and Health Restoring Agent on earth.

No disease can possibly long exist where Hop Bitters are used, so varied and perfect are their operations.

They give new life and vigor to the aged and infirm.

To all whose employments cause irregularity of the bowels or urinary organs, or who require an Appetizer Tonic and mild Stimulant, Hop Bitters are invaluable, without intoxicating.

No matter what your feelings or symptoms are what the disease or ailment is use Hop Bitters. Don't wait until you are sick but if you only feel bad or miserable, use them at once. It may save your life. It has saved hundreds.

$500 will be paid for a case they will not cure or help. Do not suffer or let your friends suffer, but use and urge them to use Hop Bitters.

Remember, Hop Bitters is no vile, drugged drunken nostrum, but the Purest and Best Medicine ever made; the "INVALIDS FRIEND and HOPE" and no person or family should be without them.

D.I.C. is an absolute and irrestible cure for Drunkeness, use of opium, tobacco and narcotics. All sold by druggists. Send for Circular. Hop Bitters Mfg. Co., Rochester, N.Y and Toronto, Ont.

A LECTURE TO YOUNG MEN
ON THE LOSS OF
MANHOOD
WE have recently published a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical and nervous Debility, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage etc., resulting from excesses.
☞ Price, in a sealed envelope, only 6 cts., or two postage stamps.
The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicines or the use of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.
☞ This Lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

A WONDERFUL WOMAN.

'Stop!' she cried and he stood as still as though he had been shot. 'You coward! You cur?' No words can tell the concentrated tone of her low, level voice. 'You have said it and now here me. This is your hour—mine will come. And here, before Heaven, by my dead fathers memory, I swear to be revenged. Living, I shall pursue you to the ends of the earth, dead, I will come back from the grave if the dead can! For every word you have sh ken to-night, you shall pay dearly—dearly! I have only one thing left to live for now, and that is my vengeance on you. The fortune you have taken I will wrest from you yet, the shame, the misery, the disgrace that is mine, you shall feel in your turn, I swear it! Look to yourself Peter Dangerfiefd! Living, I will hunt you down, dead, I will turn and torment you! Now go.'

She pointed to the door. It was the most theatrical thing imaginable. His courage rose again. She did not mean to spring upon him, after all He laughed, a low, jeering laugh, with hand on the door.

'Katherine, he said, 'do go on the stage. You'll be an ornament to the profession, and will turn an honest penny That speech, that attitude, that gesture, that tone were worthy the immortal Racheal herself. With the stage lamps, and an appropriate costume, a speech half so melodramatic would bring down the house. And if you die, you'll haunt me! Don't die Katie—you're to clever a woman to be lost to the world. And ghosts my dear, went out of fashion with the Castle of Otranto and the Mysteries of Udolpho. Think over my proposal, my dear, and good-night.'

He looked back at her once as he stood there, the leaping firelight full on her white face and black robe, and as he saw her then, he saw her sleeping or waking all the rest of his life. Then the door closed, and Katherine was once more alone,

CHAPTER XVI.

BEFORE MIDNIGHT.

The hours of the evening wore on. Sir Peter dangerfield shut himself up in the lower rooms, on the watch, however, for any sound upstairs. He had his revenge—he had offered one of proudest girls in England the most deadly insult a man can offer a woman. It was the hour of his triumph but in the midst of all he felt strangely nervous and uneasy.

'Dead or alive I will have my revenge.' The ominous word shaunted him. In the mouth of other girls they would have been melo-dramatic and meaningless, but Katherine Dangerfield was not like other girls. She meant them, and would move heaven and earth to compass her ends.

In her pretty wax-light, crimson-hung room, Katherine stood, long and motionless, where he had left her; her loosely clasped hands hung before her, her darkly brooding eyes never left the fire. Her face kept its white, changeless calm—her lips were in that hard, resolute, bitter line.

The sonorous clock over the stables striking eight awoke her at last from her trance. She started up, crossed the room, like one roused to a determined purpose, and rang the bell. Ninon came.

'I'm going out, Ninon—I am going to Castleford. It may be close upon midnight when I return, and the house will probably be shut up. Wait for me at the door in the southern turret, and when I knock let me in.'

'But, mademoiselle,' the girl cried, 'to Castleford so late, and on foot and alone!'

'I don't mind the lateness—no one will molest me. For the walk, I can do it in an hour and a quarter. Do as I bid you, Ninon, and say nothing to any one of my absence.'

The French girl knew her mistress too well to disobey, but she lingered for a moment at the door, looking back wistfully. She loved this young impetuous mistress, who scolded her vehemently one instnat and made up the next by a present of her best silk dress, She loved her, as all the servants in the house did. And never so well as now.

'If—if—oh! Mademoiselle Katherine, don't be angry, but if you would only let me go with you! The way is so long and so lonely, and coming home it will be so late. Mademoiselle, I beseech you! let me go too!'

'You foolish child—as if I cared for the lateness and loneliness. It is only happy people who have anything to fear. All that is passed for me. Go, Ninon, and do precisely as I tell you if you are still so silly to have any love left for such as I.'

The girl obeyed reluctently, hovering aloof on the landing. In five minutes the door opened and Miss Dangerfield, wrapped in a velvet mantle and wearing her little black velvet hat, appeared.

'You here still, Ninon! Do you know if Mr.—Sir Peter Dangerfield'—she set her lips hard as she spoke the name—'is any where in the passage below?'

'He is in the library, mademeiselle.'

'So much the better—we shall not meet, then. Lock my door, Ninon, and keep the key until my return.'

She glided down the stairs as she spoke, dark and noisless as a spirit. She met no one. Sir Peter was busy over papers, the servants were in their own quarters, the house was more silent than a tomb. Softly she opened and closed the ponderous portico door and flitted out into the night.

It was cold and clear and starlight, the moon had not arisen. In that light no one she met would be likely to recognize her. The January wind blew keen and cold, and she drew her fur-lined velvet closer about her, and sped on with swift, light, elastic steps,

The walk was unspeakable lonely. Until the lights of the town gleamed forth through the starry darkness she did not meet a soul. She had walked so rapidly that she was out of breath and in a glow of warmth. She slackened her pace now, making for a deserted back street, and pausing finally before the quiet, roomy, old-fashioned hostelry known as the Silver Rose.

'Does a lady named Mrs. Vavasor lodge here?'

The landlord of the Silver Rose started to his feet as the soft accents fell upon his ear. The next moment he was bowing low before the slender, black robed figure and the two grave, gray eyes.

The heorine of the day, the talk of the town, the reputed daughter of the late Sir John Dangerfield, stood before him.

'Yes, Miss Katherine. Please come in hout of the cold. Mrs. Vavasor does lodge here, but at present she happens to be hout.'

'Will she soon return?'

'Well, Miss Katherine I couldn't say, but I think it likely. She don't hoften be hout heven as late as this. If you would please to come in and wait,' looking at her doubtfully and pausing.

'If you will show me up to her room I will wait.' the young lady answered. 'I must see her to night. If you knew where she was you might send.'

The landlord shook his head.

'I don't know, Miss Dangerfield. She goes hout very seldom and never stays long. This way, if you please.'

He held a candle alotf, and led the way up-stairs, and flung open a door on the landing above.

'This be Mrs. Vavasor's sittin'-room Take a seat by the fire, Miss Katherine, and I dessay she'll be hallong soon.'

He went out and closed the door. Katherine stood in the centre of the room and looking about her with a certain amount of curosity in her face. The room was furnished after the stereotype fashion of such rooms. A few French novels scattered about were the only things to betoken the individuality of the occupant. The door of the chamber opened from this appartment stood ajar, and looking in with the same searching gaze something familiar caught the girl's eye at once.

The bed was an old fashioned four-poster, hung unwholesomely with curtains. Beside this bed a little table, scattered over with dog-eared novels. Parisienne fashion books, bonbonnieres, hand mirrors, and other womanly littter. In the centre stood an Indian box of rare beauty and workmanship. Katherine recognized it in a moment. It was one of hers, a farewell gift from a military friend when leaving India. She remembered how more than once Mrs. Vavasor had admired it among the other Indian treasures in her room, how all at once it had vanished mysteriously, and now here it was—Katherine's short upper lip curled scornfully.

'So,' she said, 'you are a thief as well as an intriguante, an adventuress. You have stolen my box. Let us see to what use you have put poor little Ensign Brandon's gift.'

She walked deliberately into the sleeping room and took up the casket It closed and locked with a secret spring; she touched it and the lid flew back. It contained a slim packet of letters tied with ribbon, and an old fashioned miniture painted on ivory, in a case of velvet ornamented with seed pearls.

In every nature there are depths of evil that come to light under the influence of adversity. Who is not virtuous untempted; who is not honorable untrie ? The dark side of Katherine's nature, that might have lain dormant and unsuspected even by herself for ever in the sunshine of prosperity, was asserting itself now. She delibe rately read the address on the letters. The paper was yellow with time, the ink faded, but the bold, firm masculine hand was perfectly legible still. Miss Harriet Lelarcheur, 35 Rosemary Place, Kensington,—that was the address.

She turned from the letters, pressed the spring of the picture case, and looked at the portrait within. Like the letters, time had faded it, but the bold masculine, boyish face smiled up at her with a brightness that even a score fo years could not mar. It was the eager, handsome, beardless face of a youth.

'A brave, gentlemanly face,' Katherine thought. 'What could a man like this ever have to do with her? Is this the lover she spoke of, from whom my mother parted her? Are these letters from him? Was her name Harriet Lelarcheur, instead of Harman? You may keep my Indian box, Mrs. Vavasor, and welcome, and I will keep its contents.'

With the same steady deliberation she put the letters and picture in her pocket, and walked back into the other room. There was a hard light in her eyes, an expression on her face not pleasant to see.

'On the road I am walking there is no turning back. To accomplish the aim of my life I must do to others as I have been done by. Mrs. Vavasor shall find me an apt pupil. Ah—at last! here she is.'

She turned and faced the door. As she did so, it was thrown impetuously open, and the woman she hated stood before her.

It was Mrs. Vavasor's last night in Castleford; her last night she had made up mind, for ever.

It was all over. The romance, the revenge, and the triumph of her life were finished and done. She had wrought out her vendetta to the bitter end. Her price had been paid twice over. With twenty thousand pounds as her fortune, she would return to Paris, launch out into a life of splendour, and end by marrying a title.

'I am still young; still handsome; by gaslight,' she mused, standing before the mirror, and surveying herself critically. 'I am one of those fortunate women who wear well and light up well. The French are right in saying that you can't tell a woman from a gnat by lamplight. With my twenty thousand pounds, my knowledge of this wicked world, my host of friends, what a life lies before me in my own delightful city of sunshine.—Yes. to-morrow I will go; there is nothing to linger in this stupid, plodding country town for longer—unless—unless—it be to see her in her downfall.'

She paced softly up and down the little sitting room. The hour was early twilight, an hour Mrs. Vavasor hated. Here were no tender twilight memories to come with the misty stars. Gaunt spectres of crime and shame, and poverty haunted horribly the dark record that lay behind this woman. So the curtains were drawn, and the lamp lit, and the firelight flickered on the masses of braided black hair and the trailing robe of wine silk.

'I should like to see her in the hour of her downfall,' she repeated. 'Should like to see her mother's daughter in the poverty and pain I have felt. And I shall one day, but not here. Somehow, I am neither superstitious nor a coward, but I feel half-afraid to meet that girl. I can see her now, as she came gliding forward in that ghostly way in her bridal dress, that face of white stone, and those wild, wide eyes. Ah! my lady! my lady! In the hour of your triumph how little you dreamed that my day would come too.'

She walked softly up and down, a subtle and most evil smile on her dark small face. The striking of the little clock on the mantel aroused her; it was eight, and she had an errand in Castleford before all the shops closed for the night.

She put on her bonnet, and wrapped herself in a large fluffy shawl, and tripped away. She was barely in time to reach the station whither she was bound before the shopkeeper locked his door. She bade him good night in her sweetest tones, and walked homeward glancing up at the great winter stars gleaming in the purple, bright sky.

'And Sir John is dead, and Sir Peter reigns! Sic transit gloria mundi! — Poor little pitiful wretch! It was like wringing his very heart's blood to part with his beloved guineas to me yesterday. I wonder how he and my haughty Katherine, my queen uncrowned, get on together up at the great house, and I wonder how my handsome Gaston does this cold January night. Ugh! She shivered under her furred wraps. She was a chilly little woman. 'This beastly British climate! And to think, that but for me she would be far away in fair foreign climes by this time, enjoying her honeymoon, the bride of a man she adored. Yes, I may go; no revenge was ever more complete than mine.'

She was singing softly to herself as she ascended the stairs. Everything had gone so well. She had had her vengeance and made her fortune at one clever blow, after to night a long vista of Parisian pleasures and Parisian life floated before her in a rosy mist. With the opera tune on her lips, she opened her door and stood face to face with—Katherine Dangerfirld.

She stood stock still. The song died on her lips; the sudden swift palor that overspread her face showed through all the pearl powder she wore She had said she was no coward, and she was not, but in this hour she stood afraid to the very core to face this girl she had wronged.

Katherine had risen and stood beside her, and Kath rine was the first to speak.

'Come in, Mrs. Vavasor, the room is your own. And you need not look such a picture of abject terror. I haven't come here to murder you to-night.'

Her voice was perfectly clear, perfectly steady. An angry sullenness came to the elder woman's relief. She came in, closed the door, and faced defiantly her foe.

'This is a most unexpected pleasure, Katherine Dangerfield. To what do I owe it?'

'And as welcome as unexpected, Mrs. Vavasor, is it not? To what do you owe it? Well, there are women alive—or girls if you will, for I am only a girl—who would have given you back death for less ruin than you have wrought on me. Oh, yes, Mrs. Vavasor, I mean what I say—death! But I am not of that sort; I am one of the pacific kind, and I content myself by coming here and only asking a few questions. I perceive there was no time to lose. I hear you leave Castleford to-morrow.'

'I do.' The widow's thin lips were shut in a hard, unpleasant line now, and her voice was sullen. 'Permit me to add that I am in somewhat of a hurry, and that the hour is late. I must pack before I retire. I quit Castleford to-morrow by the very first train.'

'Ah! Naturally, Castleford can't be a pleasant place for you to remain in. You are not popular here at present, Mrs. Vavasor. I will not detain you long. Of course it is at your own option whether you answer my questions or not.'

'Of course. What can I do for you, Miss Dangerfield?'

She threw herself into a chair, stretched out her daintily booted feet to the fire, and looked across with the same defiant face at her enemy. And yet her heart misgave her.

That colorless face, with its tense, set expression, it's curious calm, frightened her more than any words, any threats could have done. Katherine turned her grave eyes from the fire, clasped her hands together on the little table between them, and leaned slightly forward as she spoke.

Miss Dangerfield is not my name. You are the only one who knows. Will you tell me what it is?'

'No—decidedly.'

'That is one of the questions you will not answer. Here is another: Is my father alive?'

'He is.'

'My Mother is dead—really dead?'

'As dead as Queen Anne, Miss Dangerfield. I suppose we may as well continue to call you so to the last, for convenience sake. Your mother is dead; and. Katherine, you have been brought up a Christian and all that, and you ought to know. Do you suppose the dead see what is going on in this reeling, rocking little globe of ours? Because if they do, I sincerely hope your late lamented maternal parent is looking down upon you and me this moment.'

'You are a good hater, Mrs. Vavaso. Now, I should like to know what my mother ever did to you to inspire such deep, and bitter, and lasting hate. You hated her alive, you hate her dead, and you visit that hate, as bitter as ever, years and years after, upon her child. I don't blame you, mind; I don't say I would not do the same myself, under certain circumstances; only I am very curious to know all about it.'

Mrs. Vavasor looked at her doubtfully.

'You hate,' she said, 'and you talk to me like this, you who sit here so quietly, and speak like this after all the trouble and shame that would drive most girls mad. I don't think you know what 'hate' means.'

The shadow of a smile came over Katherine's face. She looked silently across at the speaker for an instant, that slow, curious smile her only answer.

'We won't discus that,' she said. 'Perhaps I came of a weak and pusillanimous race, and there is so much of the spaniel in my nature that I am ready to kiss the hand that hits hardest. Never mind me. Time is passing, Mrs. Vavasor; do one generous thing to your enemy at the last—tell her something more of her own story. You have had full and complete revenge; you can afford to be maganimous now.'

The perfect coolness of this unexpected address won its end. Mrs. Vavasor, plucky herself, admired pluck in others, and all women, good or bad, act on impulse.

'You are a cool hand,' she said, with something of admiration in her tone, 'and I may tell you this; you are of no weak or cowardly race, the blood that flows in your veins has been bitter, bad blood in its day. And you would like to know something more of your mother? Her eyes turned thoughtfully upon the fire, her mind wandered back to the past. 'I can see her now standing before me as plainly as I used to see her twenty years ago, tall and stately. You are like her, Katherine; the same graceful walk, the face at once proud-looking and plain-looking; the dress of black and orange, purple or crimson, she had a passion for bright colors, and the dark red flowers she used to wear in her hair. You are like her, and a little like your father, too; his way of smiling and speaking at times. You are most like him now as you sit there so quiet, so deep, so resolute. Katherine, you will make your way in the world, I think; women like you always do.

Will you go on, Mrs. Vavasor? Once more never mind me.'

Mrs. Vavasor laughed; all her airy easy self again.

'And you are realy anxious like this to know why I hated—why I still hate your dead mother? Well, I'm in the humor to gratify you to night; I have locked the past so closely up for such a length of time, that it is something of a relief and a pleasure to unlock it to-night. But to think I should tell it to you. These things come about so queerly; life is all so queer; such a dizzy, whirling merry-go round, and we all jumping-jacks, who just dance as our strings are pulled. And they call us responsible beings, and they tell us we can shape our own lives! Why, look you, I might have been a good woman; a rich woman; a model British matron; sitting at the head of a husband'stable; bringing up children in the way they should walk; going three times every Sunday to church, visiting the poor of the parish, distributing tracts and blankets at Christmas, and dying at last full of years, and good works, and having my virtues inscribed in letters of gold on a granite shaft. I might have been all this, Miss Dangerfield, and I wanted to be, but that dead mother of yours stepped forward, interposed her wand of authority, and lo! to-day, and for the past eighteen years, I have been a Bohemian; houseless, pennyless, reputationless. Now, listen, here is the story. No names, mind; no qustions when I have done. All you are to know I will tell you. Your father lives; you have hosts of relatives alive for that matter, but I don't mean you shall ever see or know any of them.'

She sank back in her chair, played with her watch chain, looked at the fire, and told her story in rapid words.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

Wagons loaded with the various products of Utah industries are constantly passing through the gate into the tithing house in Salt Lake. The Mormon law requires that one-tenth of all the things produced by the labor of the faithful shall be given to the church, and the compliance is in the main honest, though attempts at shirking are occasionally detected. The annual income from this source is kept a secret by the rulers, but has been estimated as high as $5,000,000, and undoubtedly reaches $3,000,000. "It is thought by the Gentiles," says a correspondent of the Boston Herald," and intimated by the saints themselves, that a portion of the tithing fund has been employed, and very effectively employed, in securing favorable legislation in the national Congress. The departed Brigham was wont to speak very contemptuously of Congress, boasting that he cared nothing for it, because he could influence its votes with money whenever he deemed it desirable. And there is reason to think that his boast was not wholly idle."

PERCHERON HORSES.

Harper's Monthly for February has a lengthy and exhaustive article on this subject, from which we make the following extracts:

The Percheron horse is undoubtedly the most symmetrical and powerful for his size, and possesses the finest action and greatest endurance of all the large breeds in Europe. His general type is also the most ancient of any of which we have record or tradition, and this is the principal reason why he is more prepotent than others in transmitting his superior qualities to his offspring.

Tradition asserts that the first great improvement in refining the large horses of France was made by Barb stallions captured from the Moors. In 731 thousands of these fine Barb stallions captured (for the Moors ride such only, and never mares) and distributed among the French soldiers, who, on returning to their farms, bred them to their own large native mares. The best and most uniform of this produce were then selected and coupled among themselves, the result of which, together with other well-made crosses from time to time since that period, gives us the improved Percherons of the present day, described as follows

Head clean, bony and small for the size of the animal; ears short, mobile, erect and fine-pointed; eyes bright, clear, large and prominent; forhead broad; nostrils large, open.

Neck a trifle short, yet harmoniously rounding to the body and gracefully curved.

Breast broad and deep, with great muscular development; shoulders sloping; withers high; back short; body well ribbed up; rump broad, long and moderately sloping to the tail, which is attached high; quarters wide, well let down, and swelling with powerful muscles.

Legs flat and wide, with hard, clean bones, and extra large, strong joints, cords and tendons; short from the hocks and knees down; pasterns upright; hoofs full size, solid, tough.

Action bold, square, free and easy.

Temper kind; disposition docile, but energetic and vigorous; hardy, enduring and long-lived; precocious; able to be put to light work at eighteen to twenty months old, possessing immense power for his size; never balking or refusing to draw at a dead pull; stylish, elegant and attractive in appearance; easy, elastic, and graceful in motion.

No tendency to disease of any sort, and especially free from diseases of the legs and feet, such as spavin, splint, ring-bone, grease and founder.

An easy keeper and quick feeder.

SOUTH AGRICULTUTAL SOCIETY.

The South Grey Agricultural Society held their annual meeting in the Town Hall, Durham, on the 18th inst. The president in the chair. Mr McKenzie read the financial report. The total receipts of the year was $1,941.67. Total expenditure $1,878.47, of which $636 was paid for prizes and $200 on grounds. leaving a balance of $63.20. Report was adopted. The directors report was then read and adopted. Mr. James Edge was then elected President for the ensuing year. D. Jackson, Esq., Mayor of Durham, 1st Vice President and 2nd Vice President, J. Ball; Directors: Glenelg, G. Binnie, C. Moffat; Bentick, H. Willis and J. Parks; Egremont, J. Murdoch and G. Huston; Normanby, E. Ard and C. Blyth; Durham, H. J. Middaugh. Auditors—J. A. Monroe and J. F. Mowat.

Some discussion took place in regard to exhibition on potatoes, etc., and particularly in regard to putting the name of the exhibitor on articles exhibited. A motion was then carried by a large majority that the names be put on all articles when placed on exhibition. There was a good attendance at the meeting.

At the meeting of the Board immediately after the annual meeting, Mr. A. McKenzie was elected Secretary.

The time for holding the Show was fixed for Thursday and Wednesday, Sept., 26th and 27th.

A number of committees were appointed.—Review.

IMPORTANT TO VOTERS.

Those entitled to vote should recollect that the assessor is to begin making his roll not later than the 11th February, and to complete it by the 30th April, and to return it to the clerk on 1st May.

In cities and towns the Council may provide that the assessment in towns, townships and incorporated villages between the 1st February and the 1st July.

Notice of appeal from assessment roll to the Court of Revision must be given to the clerk within 14 days after the return of the roll.

The Court of Revision to sit only after 10 days' notice has been given, and to be finished by 1st of July each year; except in cities, towns or villages, where the court shall be closed in six weeks from the time of returning the assessment rolls.

An appeal may be had to the County Judge from any decision of the Court of Revision.

Within 30 days after the final revision of the assessment roll the clerk shall make up from it, and print and post up and distribute the voters' lists.

Notice in writing of objections to voters' lists shall be served on the clerk within thirty days after the posting up of the lists in his office.

NEWS NOTES.

Mr. Colwell Graham, Reeve of Mulmur, was elected Warden of Dufferin for the ensuing year.

Eleven conductors on the Northern have signified their intention of resining next spring.

Fifty powerful engines for the Chicago and Grand Trunk are being built at the car-works in Montreal.

Hanlan has met his first misfortune since he arrived in England. Yesterday he wrecked his boat, but was able to wade to the shore.

A CAR BLOWN OF THE TRACK.—An idea of the strength of Thursday night's wind storm may be gained from the fact that an empty Grand Trunk flat car was blown off the track at the foot of Simcoe street and carried a considerable distance.

The County Council of Peel, now in session, have unanimously petitioned the Ontario Legislature in favour of the Act to confirm the agreement between the Grand Trunk and Toronto, Grey and Bruce.

The Council of the Township of Howick has adopted a petition to the Ontario Legislature in favor of confirming the agreement for the operation of the Toronto, Grey and Bruce Railway by the Grand Trunk.

THE ICE HARVEST.—Another harvest of lake Simcoe Ice has begun. The Northern and North-Western Railway are now supplying the public institutions of Toronto from Barrie, the scene of the great operations of 1879 and 1880. Enquiries are now daily being recieved as to quotations and the state of the ice, which is now ten or twelve inches thick and of as fine a quality as that of 1879 and 1880.

FOUND DEAD.—On Saturday Afternoon the body of a man named Martin Malcolm was found lying across the track on a siding on a Northern Railway yard. Deceased was given to drink, and when last seen, at a late hour on Saturday night, was intoxicated. So far there seems no doubt that the unfortunate man froze to death while rendered helpless by liquor.

FAREWELL SUPPER.

A complimentary supper was given at the Markdale House on Friday evening, 27th ult., to Messrs. E. D. Wilcox and Andrew McFarland on the eve of their departure to Manitoba. About 50 sat down to a most sumptous repast, got up in Mrs. A. Rutledge's usual stylish manner. After ample justice had been done to the toothsome viands The chair was occupied by Mr. Rae, and the vice chair by Mr. A. Turner. The first toast of course was our beloved Queen and the Royal Family, recieved with all the honors.

The army and navy: song, Red, White and Blue, Mr. A. McIntyre.

Commerce: responded to by Messrs. G. M. Haskett and H. Foster.

Agricultural interests of Canada responded to by Messrs. Wm. McLaughery and S. Miller, who spoke in glowing terms of the future prosperity of Agriculturists, and also expressed regret for the occassion of the present gathering the departure of the guests of the evening from our midst.

Our Guests: Mr. Wilcox expressed his happiness at meeting so many of his warm friends, and expressed sorrow at parting with them. Mr. A. McFarland said he was sorry to leave this, his home, for the past year, and would long remember the many happy days he had spent in Markdale.

The Learned profession brought forth Messrs. Rowe, Masson and Dr. Armstrong. Mr. Rowe made a brief speech, full of hope and enthusiasm, in regard to the used for and success of the legal profession. Mr. Masson complimented the citizens of Markdale as being a peaceable and law-abiding people, consequently his business here was not as profitable as it otherwise might be. Dr. Armstrong spoke in enthusiastic terms of the medical profession, showing the necessary for its [illegible] great [illegible] it had [illegible].

The Press: responded to by C. W. Rutledge, [illegible] of Markdale STANDARD.

The toast of the "Ladies" brought Messrs. W. & J. McDougal, Doll, Campbell and Young to their feet, Mr. W. McDougal gave a recitation, "Love in the Kitchen." Mr. J. McDougal spoke a few words in their favor, and also paid a high tribute to the guests of the evening. Mr. Doll spoke in the highest terms of the ladies, stating they were chief factors in our future prosperity, as without them our population would not increase, and would eventually die out. He also spoke very kindly and feelingly of the guests whom they had met to do honor. Mr. Campbell spoke briefly, which Mr. Young spoke highly of the guests, although he had been acquainted with them but a short time, he had found them good men and true &c. Mr. McIntyre gave "Mothers song to the Baby." Mr. Wm. McDougal sang "The Little Old Log Cabin on the Hill.

Dr. Sproule having arrived was called upon, and made a few brief remarks. He refered to the intended departure of the guests, and the universal good wishes of our people with they carry with them.

Mr. Campbell sang the "Cameron Band."

Mr. Robertson, Lumber Merchant, said he had been acquainted with Mr Wilcox for several years and regretted his departure. J. McDougal, favored the assembly with a song, as did Mr. John Richards with a recitation. Then came the toast of the Host and Hostess responded to by Mr. A. Turner. The health of the chairman and vice having been drank and responded to, a very pleasant evening was brought to close by singing the National Anthem, when all wended their way homewards. "Happy to meet, sorry to part and happy to meet again."

THE GRANGERS.

Grey Division Grange No. 2 met, according to announcement, in Markdale on Tuursday, the 26th ult. There was a good attendance, between 70 and 80 being present. There were many questions of interest and importance discussed, and a heavy days business was gone through with. The following officess were elected and installed for the ensuing year:—P. Christie, Meaford, Master; J. McArdle, Hopeville, Overseer; J. M. Webster, Eugenia, Lecturer; J. Bowes, Jr., St. Vincent, Asst. Steward; —— Kennedy, ——, Chaplain; W. Whitelaw, Meaford, Treasurer; J. Weber, Vandeleur, Secretary; J. Hickling, Osprey, Gate Keeper; Sister's Gifford, ——, Ceres; A. Drew, Markdale, Pomona; Hickling, Osprey, Flora; Moore, Holland, L. A. Stewardess. Bros. Palmer, Reid and Robinson, executive committee. J. M. Webster and H. D. Irwin, auditors.

From our own Correspondence.

A SURPRIZE PARTY, AND A PARTY SURPRIZED.

On Monday evening the 25th Jan., a large party numbering well up to 60 came swooping down the hill to Mr. Duncan Campbell's, and like a swarm of bees settled themselves down for the night, to the surprise of the old gentleman, who was heard making the inquiry, "Whar can a'the folk be gan the nicht," on being informed, he and the other members of the family soon made every preparation to make the visitors at home. The fun and jolity was kept up beyond the wee sma' oors, when all went home well pleased with the evening's amusement.

Some Manitoba weather if freezing will make it. Some blizzards.

We hear of some people who neglected to keep their probosis housed up, getting froze. Very careless of them.

From our Correspondent.

MR. SANDFORD FLEMING ON STANDARD TIME.

DEAR SIR—As one of your correspondents, who has no local news to communicate, I propose to lay before the readers of your paper the argument of Mr. Sandford Fleming, Chancellor of Queen's University, Kingston, before the meeting of the Geographical Society in Venice, in July last. This will be read with much interest, as it deals with a question of great practical importance.

The subject is the establishment of a Prime Meridian and Time Zero, to be common to all nations. The history of geographical science informs us, that a great number of initial meridians have at various times been employed by astronomers and navigators. It is well known that Claudius Ptolemy was among the first to fix a meridian of reference. Ptolemy lived in the second century, when the habitable world was thought to be limited to the countries around, or not far beyond, the shores of the Mediterranean. From time to time, as knowledge of the earth's surface extended, distinguished geographers arose, who adopted new initial meridians It is not necessary, however, to trouble the readers with a recital of the list of meridians, which, since the earliest period, longitudes have been reckoned. It is sufficient at this stage to refer to the fact, that geographers of different nations have generally selected for starting points, places of importance well known to them, and that as a rule they have chosen the capitals or the principal observatories of the nations to which they respectively belonged. Hence the multiplication of meridians of reference through the world. Within a comparatively recent period communications between the peoples of different nations have been greatly facilitated, and intercourse has proportionately increased. It has consequently been felt, that the variety of first mereidians is embarrassing and unnecessary. For a number of years the question of reducing this number has [illegible] consideration; it has been brought before the Geographical Congress at Antwerp, and again at Paris. The question has been examined by different Societies, and various proposals have been submitted, but unanimity with respect to the selection of a prime meridian to be common to all nations has in no way been attained. Repeated efforts have been made to gain general concurrence to the adoption of one of the existing national meridians, but these proposals have tended to retard a settlement of the question by awakening national sensibilities, and thus creating a barrier difficult to remove. Other proposals to select an entirely new initial line, unrelated to any of the first meridians at present recognized, have but little advanced the settlement of the question, as such a course encounters difficulties of another kind —difficulties so serious in their character as to render the proposal almost impracticable. There are reasons for unification of first meridians which every year become stronger, and, as the question effects the whole area of civilization, its consideration should be approached in a broad liberal spirit. While it may be urged that the selection of any particular meridian is less important than the adoption of a common first meridian, care should be taken to consider the interests of all people concerned or likely to be concerned, scrupulously avoiding offence to local prejudice or national vanity. On every account it is extremely desirable that an earnest effort should be made to seek for a solution of the problem. The unification of initial meridians has been advocated in the interest of geography, astronomy and navigation. I shall accept all the arguments which have been advance on behalf of those extremely important interests, and crave your indulgence while I submit additional reasons for the establishment of a common prime meridian for all the world. I propose to direct attention to arguments which spring from the relation of time and longitude, and the rapidly growing necessity in this age for reform in time-reckoning. If we take into view the whole earth, we have at the same instant in absolute time, noon, midnight, sunrise, sunset, and all intermediate graduation of the day. The telegraph system, which is gradually spreading like a spider's web over the surface of the globe, is practically bringing the view of the sphere before all civilized communities, It leaves no interval of time between widely separated places proportionate to their distances apart.

It brings points remote from one another, enjoying all the different hours of daylight and darkness, into very close contact. Under our present system of rotation, confusion is developed, and all account of time is thrown into disorder. The local civil day begins twelve hours before and twelve hours after the sun passes the meridian of a place. As the globe is constantly revolving on its axis, a fresh meridian is every moment coming under the sun. As a consequence, a day is always beginning somewhere and always ending somewhere. Each spot around the circumferance of the sphere has its own day, and therefore there are, during every diurnal revolution of the earth, an infinite num of local days, all beginning within a space of twenty-four hours. These days over-lap each other, and, theoretically, they are perfectly distinct as they are infinite in number. There are no simultaneous days except on the same meridian, and as the different days are always in the same various stages of advancement, difficulties must necessarily result in assigning a period when an event takes place.— The telegraph may give the exact local time of the occurrence, but it will be in disagreement with the local times on every meridian around the earth An event occuring on any day, may on the instant be announced somewhere else on the following day. About the period when one month, or a year passes into another month or year, an occurrence may actually take place in two different months, or in two different years, according to local reckoning. It will readily be conceeded that this system is extremely unscientific, that it possesses all the elements of confusion, and produces a degree of ambiguity which cannot long be tolerated; that as time rolls on it will lead to grave complications in social and commercial affairs; that it will produce serious errors in cronology; that it will be exceedingly inconvenient and troublesome when rapid intercourse becomes universal to bring the time of different countries and localities into agreement and that the necessity for doing so by additions and difference in longitude, will undoubtedly clog the ordinary business of the world. It is proposed to obviate the difficulty by a system of cosmopolitan time — reckoning, the chief peculiarity of which is the adoption of one particular meridian as a standard of time zero, and by an extremely simple arrangement regulating the time at all places on the globe by direct reference to the common standard. It is obvious that the world's time zero should coincide with the prime meridian to be used in common by all nations for reckoning terrestial longitude. I shall proceed to submit special and more urgent reasons for the selection of a common initial meridian and time zero, I shall confine my observations to the case of North America, but the following remarks will doubtless apply to other great divisions of the earth's surface.

EUPHRASIA COUNCIL.

A meeting of the Township Cauncil of the Township of Euphrasia was held, pursuant to adjournment, on the 31st December 1881. Members all present.

Minutes of last session of Council read and confirmed.

Thomas Brown was permitted to pay to the Township Treasurer the taxes charged against the N. ½ of lot 5, con. 6, amount being $14.04, less $5 for Statute labor, and the Clerk ordered to request the County Treasurer to strike off his books the full amount charged against said land for the current year.

The time for returning the Collector's Roll was extended for one month.

A contract entered into by James Gibson for road work, was carried over until next year.

The Reeve's orders were issued on the Treasurer to pay, as follows:— To William Dales, $34, for building bridge; John Pickering, $10, for relief of Mrs. Grey, an indigent; Wm. Blakely, $1, for repairing road scraper; William Wright, $3.50, for building culvert; William Blakely, $5, to pay for surveying side-road; Richard Snellgrove, $5, for removing fence from highway; Irwin Fawcett, $13, for cutting down hill; John Niel, $2, for repairing crossway; Richard Caretoot, $35, for cutting down hill; J. Farewell, $17, for printing; William Londry, $8, for building culvert; J. Kake, $5, for taking out stumps on road; Robert Hetherington, $5, for repairing bridge; E. E. Knott, Esq., $125, payment for fire safe; Thomas Abercrombie, $50, usual grant to Agricultural Society; R. Dunlop, Clerk, $45 for levying School Rates, $85, balance of salary and writing minutes for papers, and $20, for postage; David Miller, 50c, for repairing road scraper; Adam Clarke, $5, for keeping culvert clear of logs.

The amount of $19.30, charged in error against N. ½ of lot 11, con. 6, was struck off the Collector's Roll.

On motion being made and seconded, the Council adjourned sine die.

ROBERT DUNLOP, Tp. Clerk.

FROM "THE TIMES."

Editor of the Times:—In reading the last number of your paper, I noticed you asked all who had been benefited by the letter published in your valuable paper about a year ago, to write you the facts for publication. The letter from Dr. Bates created a great amount of excitement in this vicinity, as he is well and favorably known by every one here. His reputation as a man and as physician gave every one the utmost confidence in all his statements, and this of course soon made the name "Kendall's Spavin Cure" not only familiar but very popular. In reply to your request I will say: About nine years ago I slipped on the ice and sprained my right limb at the knee joint. I was very lame and suffered excruciating pain much of the time since, and some of the time thought I should be a cripple for life. Dr. Bates' letter printed in your paper gave me so much confidence in the virtue of "Kendall's Spavin Cure" that I tried it for my knee and less than one bottle completely cured me so that I have had no return of pain or lameness, for which, of course, I cannot feel too thankful. Since my recovery I have visited friends in the west and found that the following parties have used it with the grandest results in that part of the country. The Rev. John Rice, Hematite, Mo., used it on his own person for an injury of 35 years standing and performed one of the most wonderful cures I ever heard of. J. L. McLure, of Strong City, Kansas, cured a badly lacerated and poisoned hand, from a hog bite and also removed an enlargement near the hip joint which had become large and troublesome. He also used it for pleurisy and found that bathing his chest with it relieved him at once To my surprise I found that this wonderful remedy was better known in the west than it was in the east, and I found they were using it their for all animals as well as on human flesh with the very best of results, and I find so many cases wherever I go to confirm the favorable opinion I had already formed of it that I am glad of an opportunity of telling the readers of your valuable paper what I have learned in regard to it. Hoping to hear from others upon this very important subject, especially important to those who have suffered for years like myself, I remain,

Yours &c.,

J. B. ROYCE.

NOTICE.—We wish it disinctly understand that we do not hold ourselves reponsible for the opinions expressed by our correspondence

REPLY TO MR. GLENCROSS.

TRAVERSTON, Jan. 31st, 1882.

To the Editor,

SIR—Will you kindly allow me a small space in your valuable paper, to answer Mr. Wm. Glengross' apology for slander uttered by him on nomination day, at the Town Hall, as Mr. Glencross does not confine himself to facts. He says—"I am at a loss to know what statement I made on that day that could be called a slander. the only statement that I made that appeared to offend you was, that you received one dollar and fifty-six cents that I did not think at the time you were entitled to, and called upon you as any ratepayer has a right to do, for an explanation. You made an explanation at the time, which I accepted as satisfactory."

Now, sir, this statement is entirely false and misleading, as all fare-minded ratepayers present will bear me out in saying that Mr. Glencross never asked me any question at all, It was I that asked him questions which I thought it was pertinent for me to do, whereupon Mr. G. let his temper run riot with his reason, and said that if I (meaning himself) had $1 56 of your money in my pocket like Mr. Hall has. If others let me alone I would let them alone. Whereupon Mr. McRae, our worthy Reeve, came to the front, and said—"Gentlemen, this is very unfair and ungentlemanly of Mr. G. to accuse Mr. Hall of any such charge, as Mr. H. was as well entitle to what money he received as Mr. G., myself, or any other member of the Council, and if there is any blame, I am the one to blame, as I made up their amounts and issued checks therefor, and am ready and willing to shoulder any responsibility. Will you accept this explanation from me?" he said, which they did. But Mr. Glencross could not let the matter drop there, for through his canvas, and other places that afforded opportunity, he expressed himself thus: "I gave Hall a mouthful, and if he cannot swallow it, he can chew it.". On hearing this I made it my business to see Mr. G. in presence of others, and asked him to apologize through the STANDARD, or I would bring an action against him, which he positively refused to do, and I afterwards heard that he made use of a great deal of pretended bravado about the matter; but finding himself in the toils of the law, he, like any other cur, bolted that big mouthful himself, and made the above apology, which I accept; although it is just as the man said when he received a kick from an ass, rather a left handed compliment, but would take it from whence it came, consequently I give him a fool's pardon. And, sir, in the matter of dealing with figures, I think he is like what Dow says of the school boy "making figures lie that never lied before," for the matter he complains of was in my getting my commission on $27.50 at the rate of eight per cent. would, according to my calculation, amount to $2.20; but he said on nomination day $1.65, and now in his apology $1.56; and dear only knows what it will be some other time, therefore, I must come to the conclusion that his ability to dissect figures is just on a par with his dissecting dead dogs when he dissected the wrong one.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for your space, hoping this will finish my correspondence, as I have no desire either to rush into law or print, only to set the matter fairly before the public and let them judge who tells the true story.

I am, yours gratefully,

W. HALL.

MR. EDITOR—I saw in the "Grey Review" of the 19th Jan., an article in reference to a meeting held in the C. M. Church, Proton, as a reprint from the Flesherton Advance, in which it was stated that the members raised nearly all the money among themselves, the subscriptions from outsiders being unsolicited. Now what are the facts of the case? The facts of the case are these, that four fifths of those present at the Soiree was composed of outsiders, and men, women and children were solicited, pressed, nay, even craved for money, and if the figures were consulted you will find, I am confident, that over three-fifths of the money was raised by out-siders. So far did their craze go for money, that even parents were pressed for a subscription for their infant children.— Now how do these facts compare with the falsehoods of the correspondent of the Advance. What do you suppose could possess any person to attempt to palm off such an arrant untruth upon a credulous public. Perhaps, now, the Advance man will say that he was mislead: but who will believe him after giving publication to such a gassy deception. Thanking you for the space so kindly allowed, I am, &c.

PERKSCLUB.

To the Editor.

DEAR SIR,—While looking over last week's issue of your paper, I was surprised at the honor your Feversham correspondent gave to Mr. McAlear, the hotel keeper of that village, for closing his bar last Township election day, while it is well known that the reason he closed it was on account of a report that a certain candidate for municipal honors intended to have him fined if he sold liquor that day; which report, I understand, was a falsehood, circulated for the purpose of keeping a certain class from voting for the said candicate Now, sir, I do not know who your correspondent is, but I think he should not have given Mr. McAlear so much praise when he closed it through fear of being fined. If he had closed it for the purpose of preventing any undue influence being exercised from treating, then, I say, he would have been entitled to all the praise given him. It would be much to the credit of all hotel keepers if they closed their bars on election days, and also an honor to every candidate to refrain from treating for the purpose of influencing voters; but now, I am sorry to say, the candidate who spends most in treating is the surest to be elected, which is a disgrace to our Township and to the Council elected. Yours, &c., W. S.

INCONSISTENCY.

MR. EDITOR.—Last Monday night Mr. B. Wright lost a horse by being choked with the halter, while he, Mr. W., was attending church. On Tuesday he removed the carcass to the nearest vacant lot, about half a mile from the village, as directed; and strange to say received a notice from the owner of the lot the same day to remove the carcas off the premises, which notice was obeyed. Now where the inconsistency comes in is as follows:—The same man, Mr. Miller, had a beast died a few years ago on his next neighbor's farm, where the beast, with others, were pasturing. Mr. M. had the hide taken off, but did not bury the carcass, to say nothing of removing it off the premises, but left it to decay; being only a few rods from where the owner of the place was summer-fallowing, and that in the hot summer months, when it must have been almost unbearable to exist in the vicinity of a putrified carcass.

CONSISTENCY.

TWO ORGANS.—Regulate first the stomach, second the liver; especially the first, so as to perform their functions perfectly and you will remove at least nineteen-twentieths of all the ills that mankind is heir to, in this or any other climate. Hop Bitters is the only thing that will give perfectly healthy natural action to these two organs. —Maine Farmer.

TORONTO, January 2nd, 1882.

To the President and Directors of the different Agricultural and Horticultural Societies:

DEAR SIRS,—The Council of the Agricultural and Arts Association have decided to give Prizes and Medals for different purposes for the season of 1882; and wishing to give publicity to their intention, ask the hearty co-operation of the different societies in notifying persons who would be likely to compete, and think there can be no better time or place than at the Annual Meetings, where, if the Secretary will kindly read the following notifications, the Council will feel obliged:

FARM PRIZES-GROUP NO. 3.

1. Prizes will be awarded by the Agricultural and Arts Association of Ontario for the best managed farms in Group No. 3, comprising the following Electoral District Societies, viz.:

Bruce North, Huron East, Bruce South, Huron West, Dufferin, Huron South, Grey North, Perth North, Grey South, Perth South, Grey East, Wellington South, Wellington Centre, Wellington West.

2. Any farmer desiring to compete shall make his application in writing to the Secretary of the Agricultural Society of his District on or before 1st May of each year, upon which said Society may call a meeting for the purpose of deciding which of the applications shall be returned to this Association; but no Society shall return more than three competitors.

3. The full name and address of the selected applicants, attested by the Secretary and President of the Agricultural Society, to be sent to the Secretary of this Association on or before the 15th May annually.

4. There shall be two Judges appointed by this Association from outside the District being examined, who shall be paid their actual travelling expenses. In case of a dispute between the Judges, the President of this Association shall be called upon to act as referee.

5. The Judges shall keep a detail of marks awarded to each farm visited. They shall award to the best managed farm in each Electoral District a bronze medal, where three farms have competed, and instead thereof to the best managed farm in the group a gold medal, and to the second best farm a silver medal.

6. In addition to any other points that may be thought desirable by the Judges, the following shall be taken into consideration in estimating what is "the best managed farm."

(1). The competing farm to be not less than one hundred acres, two-thirds of which must be under cultivation.

(2). The nature of the farming, whether mixed, dairy, or any other mode, to be the most suitable under conditions affected by local circumstances.

(3). The proper position of the buildings in relation to the whole farm.

(4). The attention paid to preservation of timber and shelter by planting of trees.

(5). The condition of any private roads.

(6). The character, sufficiency and condition of fences, and the manner in which the farm is subdivided into fields.

(7). Improvements by removal of obstacles to cultivation, including drainage.

(8). General condition of buildings, including dwelling-houses, and their adaptability to the wants of the farm and family.

(9). The management, character, suitability, condition and number of live stock kept.

(10). The number, condition and suitability of implements and machinery.

(11). State of the garden and orchard.

(12). Management of farm yard manure.

(13). The cultivation of crops to embrace manuring, clearing produce per acre in relation to management, and character of soil and climate.

(14). General order, economy and water supply.

(15). Cost of production and relative profits.

7. The examination by the Judges to be not earlier than 1st July, and to be finished in September.

8. The report of the Judges to be submitted to the Board, and forwarded to the Commissioner of Agriculture.

These prizes, awarded in Groups Nos. 1 and 2, have given universal satisfaction, and the very valuable reports of the Judges will be published by the Commission of Agriculture, and distributed to applicants.

A number of circulars will be sent to the Secretaries of the different Electoral Societies in Group No. 3, for circulation.

PRIZE ESSAYS.

The Agricultural and Arts Association of Ontario will give a prize of $30 for the best Essay, and $20 for the second best Essay, on each of the following subjects:

1. MANURES: Their preparation, application and effect on growing crops, and in maintaining and increasing the fertility of the soil to which they are applied.

Competition on this subject to be restricted to practical farmers cultivating land within the Province of Ontario.

N.B.—Quotations of analysis to be excluded, and scientific and technical terms to be avoided as far as possible.

2. THE HOMESTEAD: Its arrangement and surroundings, with regard to convenience and comfort, combined with economy, healthfulness and picturesque appearance; including choice of site, dwelling house and offices, water supply, drainage, farm buildings, shelter belts, gardens and shrubbery.

Open to general competition.

Length not to exceed twenty-five pages foolscap, to be written on one side of the paper only.

Manuscript to be sent to the Secretary of the Agricultural and Arts Association, Toronto, not later than the 1st of August, 1882.

It having been decided at the Annual Meeting of the Agricultural and Arts Association of Ontario, held in London in September last, that the Council should institute a system of examinations, open to the young farmers of the Province, in the science and practice af Agriculture, comprising tillage, raising of crops, breeding, fattening an management of stock, dairying, forestry, &c., as adapted to the climate, soils and wants of Ontario —the object being to induce young people engaged in or intending for farming to prepare themselves, by a course of reading and observation, for examination in the before-mentioned subjects at certain convenient centres, who shall receive certificates of merit or scholarships according to the correctness and extent of the answers given to the respective questions comprised in the given papers—it will be for the new Council of 1882, at its first meeting in March next, to adopt a syllabus of the subjects for examination, and to make such regulations as may be requisite for carrying into practice the scheme that may be finally adopted.

It is hoped that a well-conducted effort of this character will be instrumental in eliciting a spirit of inquiry, reading, and observation among the young men of our farming community, and of promoting the advancement of our most important industry.

I remain, Dear Sirs,

Yours respectfully,

HENRY WADE,

Secretary Agricultural and Arts Association, TORONTO.

ZOPESA

(FROM BRAZIL.)

The New Compound, its wonderful affinity to the Digestive Apparatus and the Liver, increasing the dissolving juices, relieving almost instantly the dreadful results of Dyspepsia, Indigestion, and the TORPID LIVER, makes Zopesa an every day necessity in every house.

It acts gently and speedily in Biliousness, Costiveness, Headache, Sick Headache, Distress after Eating, Wind on the Stomach, Heartburn, Pains in the Side and Back, Want of Appetite, Want of Energy, Low Spirits, Foul Stomach. It invigorates the Liver, carries off all surplus bile, regulates the Bowels, and gives tone to the whole system.

Cut this out and take it to your Druggist and get a 10 cent Sample, or a large botle for 75 cents, and tell your neighbor about it.

A very impressive and appropriate memorial Sermon, was preached in the Methodist Church, Markdale, by the Reverend N. A McDiarmid, for the late Rev. D. Williams, whose death we noticed last week.

Ayer's pills are the best of all purgatives for family use. They are pleasant, safe and sure, and excel all other pills in healing and curative qualities.

Mr. E. D. Wilcox, left for Manitoba on Wednesday morning. A number of our citizens accompanied him to the station to see him off, and have a hand shake.

We want 10,000 able bodied young men to act as clerks in McFarland's store. They must expect to be busy all the time and keep from the Manitoba fever, as some of his clerks have the fever bad now and are not likely to recover.

According to notice in another column, the Euphrasia council will meet at the Town Hall, Rocklyn, on the first Friday in each month, during this year, for general business.

Mr. J. Masson, wishes us to state that he will not be in Markdale Friday and Saturday this week, having important business in Toronto those days, but will be here next week.

A small quantity of maple molasses made in January was brought to Markdale a short time ago. We did not learn the party's name, but the syrup was powerful good, yum, yum, we had a taste.

R. J. Sproule of Flesherton, has announced a discount sale of Fall and Winter goods for 30 days. Read his advertisement in another column, and then call for yourselves. Mr. Sproule means business.

Look here, dad, don't you think sisters look rather seedy? Jones' girls, who buy their Dresses, Mantles and Millinery at McFarland's looked spanking last Sunday. McFarland is boss, he imports direct."

A great amount of work has been done the past few weeks. Good sleighing and favorable weather has done a great deal for the public. Saw logs, wood, ties, square timber, has been coming into town in large quantities.

Remember the return visit of the Annie Estrelle company this (Thursday) evening in Dufferin Hall. The fact of this being the second performance in the same place inside of a month is sufficient guarantee that they are popular.

"There was a sound of revelry by night," and joys unmixed added its delight,
And history graved its grateful record when
The Esterbrooks brought out their Falcon Pen.

A good preventative for Fevers, Ague and Bilious Disorders is Dr. Carson's Stomach and constipation Bitters a purely vegetable preparation. They tone the system, purify the Blood and increase the appetite, and render those using them almost proof against disease, should be used in every case instead of pills. A. Turner and Co. Special Agents Markdale.

We acknowledge with thanks the receipt of $1. Subscription to the STANDARD from the following: R. H. Whitby, Brampton, John McNichol, Deep River, Mich., John Spaul, Clarksburg, Ont., and $1.25 from Thomas Grey, Alpena, Mich.

Mr. A. W. Eaton, has opened out in the blacksmith business in Richardson's old stand, we understand he has secured the services of a first class blacksmith to assist.

On Monday night last, Mr. B. Wright, while attending church, lost his young horse. The animal was tied up in the shed with a rope around its neck, and by some means succeeded in choking itself. The lost will be a serious one, as Mr. W., had paid $140 for the beast only a few weeks [illegible]

Dr. Carson's Pulmonary Cough Drops are an excellent Expectorant loosening the phlegm far more readily than any other preparation. For Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Tickling in the Throat and Soreness and Tightness of the Chest, they have no equal. In large bottles at 50 cents. A. Turner and Co. Special Agents Markdale.

St. Valentine was beheaded A. D., 271. He was a man endowed with a very generous and charitable disposition. It has always been customary to commemorate his festival by the interchange, between friends of missive of love and respect. This is the reason why Turner & Co. have on hand such a large stock of choice Valentines, for St. Valentine's day. Feb'y 14th.

We are informed that the Police Trustees are determined to enforce the law in regard to obstructing the sidewalks, roadways, &c. Henceforth people are not going to be permitted to make barnyards, woodyards, &c., of our streets and sidewalks. Oh! ye offenders of the past take timely warning unless you wish to be brought up before the Cadi, alias Wm. Brown, Esq., J. P., for infringing the rights of her majesty's liege subjects.

Never neglect a Cough or Cold as they are very apt to lead to serious Lung troubles. Dr. Carson's Pulmonary Cough Drops have a wonderfull effect in relieving and curing Coughs Colds and all affections of the throat and Lungs, As Dr. Carson is a well known Canadian physician of over 25 years successful practice, there is little wonder that his Remedies are so popular with the Canadian people. A. Turner and Co. Special Agents for Markdale.

Mr. Whitby has been appointed Assessor for Artemesia, and wishes us to state that he will raise the assessment this year throughout the township to, as near as possible, the cash value. It is time the different municipalities were moving in the same direction. It will make no difference as to the amount of taxes paid, provided all are served alike. Any Assessor is breaking his declaration of office who fails to assess property within 30 per cent of its cash value over or under.

Carl Bock, who has been traveling in Bornee for the Dutch Government, who were very anxious to obtain accurate information as to certain tribes, visited Siban. Mobang, a cannibal chief, who, when he saw him, had fresh upon his hands the blood of no less than seventy victims—men, women and children—whom he and his followers had just slaughtered, and whose heads and brains, considered the titbits, he had devoured. His appearance was unprepossessing.

Mr. John Inkster of Osprey lost a valuable spring colt last week very simply. The beast was fastened in the stall by a halter, and in some manner during the night got into the manger on its back, and was dead in the morning. He wishes us to give, for the benefit of others, a simple preventative to such accidents which he has learned since the above took place viz. to fasten a few strips across the manger which don't hinder the animal to feed and will be a sure prevention from getting into the manger.

A PUBLIC MEETING Should be called of the citizens of every city, town and village in the Dominion, to consider what should be done to prevent the hair from turning Grey—and falling out. If this important question received their earnest consideration they would unanimously decide that science had at last discovered something that would answer this purpose—and furthermore would recommend Cingalese Hair Renewer as being this something for restoring the hair to its natural color, and prevent its falling out. 50 cents per bottle. For sale by all Druggists.

DUNDALK.

(From the Herald.)

Beautiful weather after the cold snap, which was succeeded by a general thaw.

Business has been a little dull for the past few days on account of poor sleighing. A little more snow and business will be brisk again.

We are pleased to learn that Mr. J. McDowell who was so severly frozen, is improving, it was feared at one time that amputation would be necessary but now the doctors have better hopes.

Mr. Thos. Hanbury is making every preparation for the erection of his large and commodious brick building

Cathartic Pills

Combine the choicest cathartic principles in medicine, in proportions accurately adjusted to secure activity, certainty, and uniformity of effect. They are the result of years of careful study and practical experiment, and are the most effectual remedy yet discovered for diseases caused by derangement of the stomach, liver, and bowels, which require prompt and effectual treatment. AYER'S PILLS are specially applicable to this class of diseases. They act directly on the digestive and assimilative processes, and restore regular healthy action. Their extensive use by physicians in their practice, and by all civilized nations, is one of the many proofs of their value as a safe, sure, and perfectly reliable purgative medicine. Being compounded of the concentrated virtues of purely vegetable substances, they are positively free from calomel or any injurious properties, and can be administered to children with perfect safety.

AYER'S PILLS are an effectual cure for Constipation or Costiveness, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Loss of Appetite, Foul Stomach and Breath, Dizziness, Headache, Loss of Memory, Numbness, Biliousness, Jaundice, Rheumatism, Eruptions and Skin Diseases, Dropsy, Tumors, Worms, Neuralgia, Colic, Gripes, Diarrhœa, Dysentery, Gout, Piles, Disorders of the Liver, and all other diseases resulting from a disordered state of the digestive apparatus.

As a Dinner Pill they have no equal.

While gentle in their action, these PILLS are the most thorough and searching cathartic that can be employed, and never give pain unless the bowels are inflamed, and then their influence is healing. They stimulate the appetite and digestive organs; they operate to purify and enrich the blood, and impart renewed health and vigor to the whole system.

COUNTY COUNCIL.

[illegible] Council of the County of Grey met at the Court House on Tuesday 24th ult., at 2 o'clock p. m. A quorum not being present, the Council adjourned till 7 p. m.

The Council met at 7 p. m., the following gentlemen depositing their certificates as having been duly elected Reeves and Deputy Reeves of their respective townships:

Artemesia—Dr. Christoe, Reeve; A. Webster, Deputy Reeve.

Bentinck—D. McNicol, Reeve; J. Messenger, 1st Deputy Reeve; J. McCallum, 2nd Dep. Reeve.

Collingwood—N. McColman, Reeve; A. Campbell, 1st Dep. Reeve; W. Kerr, 2nd Deputy Reeve.

Derby—B. A. Stark, Reeve; Wm. Breen, Deputy Reeve.

Durham—G. McKechnie, Reeve.

Euphrasia—Robt. Myles, Reeve; T. Gilray, Dep. Reeve.

Egremont—J. Murdoch, Reeve; W. Lawrence, Deputy Reeve.

Glenelg—F. McRae, Reeve; T. Mullarky, Deputy Reeve.

Holland—W. Howey, Reeve; J. Cameron, Deputy Reeve.

Keppel—W. Totten, Reeve; J. Clark, Deputy Reeve.

Meaford—A. Thompson, Reeve.

Normanby—J. Blyth, Reeve; G. H. Schenk, 1st Dep. Reeve; W. Winkler, 2nd Dep. Reeve.

Owen Sound—J. Chisholm, Reeve; A. B. Lang, 1st Dep. Reeve; B. Malcolm, 2nd Dep. Reeve.

Osprey—A. McGirr, Reeve; A. McIntyre, Deputy Reeve.

Proton—P. McGregor, Reeve; J. Agnew, Deputy Reeve.

Sullivan—J. Dunnington, Reeve; J. Vasey, Deputy Reeve.

St. Vincent—C. R. Sing, Reeve; N. Read, Dep. Reeve.

Sydenham—W. Lang, Reeve; R. McCutcheon, Dep. Reeve.

arawak—T. McNaught, Reeve.

The Clerk then called on the Council to make their choice of Warden.

Moved by Mr. Thompson, seconded by Mr. McColman, that C. R. Sing, Reeve of St. Vincent, be Warden for the current year.

Moved by Mr. Blyth, seconded by Mr. Murdoch, that D. McNicol, Reeve of Bentinck, be Warden.

Moved by Mr. McKechnie, second by Mr. Lawrence, that R. Myles, Reeve of Euphrasia, be Warden.

A ballot was then taken, resulting as follows:—

Sing 17, McNicol 14, Myles 8. Mr. Myles' name being dropped, a second ballot was taken, the vote being—Sing 20, McNicol 19.

Mr. C. R. Sing was then declared duly elected Warden for 1882.

The Warden thanked the Council for the honor conferred upon him, saying he esteemed it a greater honor than to be elected to the House of Commons, as he represented the whole County of 7[illegible],000 people instead of one Riding. He thanked them for the honor also on behalf of the township he represented. He did not propose to write an address, as it took up time, and he thought the sooner they got to business the better.

Mr. McNicol tendered his congratulations to the Warden, and thanked his friends for the large vote given to himself.

On motion, a committee of five was balloted for to strike the standing committees for 1882, resulting in the [illegible] Messrs. Myles, McRae, McNicol and Cameron.

The Council then adjourned till 10 o'clock Wednesday Morning.

WEDNESDAY MORNING.

The Council met at 10 a. m. All the members present.

The Warden read several communications, which were referred to the various committees.

Dr. Christoe introduced By Law No. 300, to appoint County Auditors.

On motion, the Council went into committee to fill up By Law 300, Mr. Totten in the chair.

The Warden nominated on his part J. C. Spragge as Auditor; and Mr. R. [illegible]dgar was nominated on behalf of the Council; the salary of the Auditors to be $50 each.

The committee then rose, and reported by law as filled up by committee.

Dr. Christoe presented report of special committee to strike standing committees for the year, and on motion the report was received and adopted.

The standing committees for the year are as follows:—

Finance and Assessment—Messrs. McGregor, Dunnington, Blyth, McCutcheon, Chisholm, Murdoch, McKechnie, McGirr, Myles, Stark, Totten, Howey, McNicol, McNaught, Read, McColman, McRae, Christoe—Christoe, chairman.

Roads and Bridges—Messrs. Schenk, Agnew, Webster, Mularky, Cameron, Clark, Vasey, McIntyre, Malcolm, Kerr—Cameron, chairman.

Education—Messrs. McCallum, Campbell, McKechnie, Myles, Webster—McKechnie, chairman.

County Property—Messrs. Gilray, W. Lang, A. B. Lang, Kerr, Clark, McNichol, Thompson—A. B. Lang, chairman.

Printing—Messrs. MacRae, Malcolm Campbell, Winkler, Cameron—MacRae, chairman.

The Reeves of Bentinck, Collingwood and Holland were appointed a committee to enquire into the validity of the Treasurer's sureties, and report at present session of Council.

A committee was appointed to take into consideration matters contained in a resolution introduced by the Reeve of Glenelg, in reference to memorializing the Government in regard to assessment—the resolution to lie on the table till reported on.

A motion for appointing a special committee on specialties for the current year, was lost.

Moved by Mr. A. B. Lang, seconded by Mr. Thompson, That Messrs. Stark, Myles, McNaught, Christoe, Cameron, McNicol, McRae, Chisholm and the mover be a special committee to devise some scheme for the repair and maintenance of the gravel roads, and to report to this Council to-morrow.

Moved in amendment by Dr. Christoe, seconded by Mr. Myles, That the matter now before the chair be laid before the Road & Bridge Committee, and that the previous motion be laid on the table until said committee reports—carried.

The Warden read Treasurer's statement of non-resident lands.

On motion, Messrs. Jas. Murdoch and A. M. Stephens were appointed members of a board of audit, as required by law.

The Council adjourned till 10 o'clock on Thursday morning, to give committees time to prepare their respective reports.—O. S. Times.

A LECTURE TO YOUNG MEN

ON THE LOSS OF

MANHOOD

WE have recently published a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical and nervous Debility, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage etc., resulting from exce ses.

Price, in a sealed envelope, only 6 cts., or two postage stamps.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicines or the use of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

This Lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

"OUR FATHER."

BY SYLVICOLA.

"Our Father"—when the heart is pressed
With sorrow keen and deep,
And midst the rocks we learn to rest,
But only learn to weep.

'Tis then, and only then, we turn
Our tear-wet eyes, to Thine,
And all that name implies we learn—
So human, yet divine.

I've seen Thee in the lightening flash
That rent the heart of night;
I've heard amidst the thunder crash
Thy majesty and might.

But when Thy heart bends low to bless,
In pitty strong and deep,
I feel the holy tenderness
Of love that makes me weep.

'Tis love's sublimest joy to seek
The erring and the blind;
The strong is merciful and meek—
The mighty ever kind.

O blessed be the Master's name
Who taught our lips that prayer—
I too the holy sonship claim,
I too thy pity share.

—O. S. Times.

A WONDERFUL WOMAN.

CHAPTER XVI. Continued.

'Your mother was just my age when I first knew her—a little the elder, I think—and just married. She was not handsome, but somehow she was attractive; most people liked her; I did myself for a time. And she was a great heiress, she was the wife of the handsomest man in England, and she loved him—ah! well, as you loved poor Mr. Dantree, perhaps, and not much more wisely.

'I lived with her, never mind in what capacity; I lived with her, and knew more of her than any other human being alive, including her husband. Indeed, after the honeymoon—and how he used to yawn and smoke during the honeymoon, he saw as little of her as possible. She was the woman he was married to, and the woman he loved was as beautiful as all the angels, and not worth a farthing. It is a very old state of things, Miss Dangerfield; nothing novel about it.—Your mother was frantically jealous, and having the temper of a spoiled child, made his lor—I mean, your father's life a martyrdom, with endless tears and reproaches. When she sat sobbing sometimes, swelling her eyes, and reddening her nose, once I ventured to offer her my humble sympathy, and called my—her husband a wretch, Do you know how he recieved it? She jumped up and slapped my face.'

'I am glad to hear it,' Katherine said, with composure. 'She served you right.'

'Ah! no doubt! You would have done the same, I am sure. Well, it was about that time the romance of my life began. Your mother's brother came from Ireland to make her a visit, and we met. He was only twenty; I was your age, seventeen. He was handsome and poor—your mother had got all the money, he all the beauty of the family. I was—my modesty makes me hesitate to say it, considered pretty in those days—that is, in a certain gipsy style of prettiness. It was a style that suited him at least, and earth turned to Paradise, and we were among the blest.

'I don't need to tell you what followed, do I?—the meeting by chance the appointments the twlight walks, the moonlight rambles, the delecious blisful folly of it all? No need to tell you your own experience is recent. Let me skip the sentimental and keep to hard facts. A month passed—courtship progresses rapidly with two people of twenty and seventeen. We were engaged, and we must be married at once, or life would be insupportable. But how? Youths of twenty and girls of seventeen cannot marry clandestirely and yet legally in England, expect under very great difficulties—under perjury, in fact. As deeply as he adored me, he was not prepared to perjure himself on my account. We must try a Scotch marriage for it—there was nothing else—and think about the legality afterward. He was poor—I was poorer. What we were to live on after marriage was an unanswearable question. We never tried to answer it—we must be married first at all risks—time enougth to think of all these prosaic details after.

'No one suspected our secret—this folly and my presumpton, that is what they termed it. We had fixed the day of our flight—we had packed our portmanteaus—in less than a week we would be in Scotland, and united as fast as Scotish marriage can unite, when of all of a sudden my la—your mother's sharp, grey eyes were opened and saw the truth. A note of his to me fell into her hands, and she opened and read it. Fot an honorable thing to do—eh, Katherine? It told her all—of our flight in two days, of our proposed marriage—all.

'I have told you. Katherine, that you are like your mother. you are. You have taken all your troubles quietly, and made no outcry no complaint. She took things quietly, too. Three hours after she got that note she came to me, quiet, composed, and determined.

'Harriet,' she said, 'I am going into the country for a day—only a day. Pack a few things and be ready to accompany me in an hour.'

'I stood confounded. He was away? what would he say when he came back? But it was impossible for me to disobey, and then—only for a day. We would be back in time after all.

'For a day! Katherine, she never stopped until we were in Cornwall. She had an uncle a rector there; he and his wife lived in a lonesome old gray house on the sea coast. It was late at night when the rumbling stage coach brought us to the door, and I was worn out with fatigue. I ask for some tea; my—your mother gave it to me graciously, with her own hand, a smile on her lips, and a sleeping potion in the cup.

'You must be tired, my poor Harriet,' she said, 'and you didn't think we were coming all the way to Cornwall. No more did I, but I took a sudden fancy to pay the old place a flying visit.'

'A flying visit?' I repeated, wearily. Then you mean—

'To return to town to morrow, my dear child. Certainly you don't suppose I would stay here, and in the height of the London season, too? But I think country air and solitude will do you good. Good night Harriet, you look sleeply, don't let me keep you awake!'

'I remember her laughing as she went out, then my eyelids swayed and fell, and I slept the sleep of the drugged.

'The noon sunshine of the next day filled my room when I awoke. I had not been to bed. My head ached, my eyes felt hot and heavy—I was unused to opium in any shape then, and its effects sickened me. I struggled wearily with memory. With a sharp pang I recollected it was the day fixed for my wedding day, and I was here alone, and he was—where?

And she had done it all. The first glow of that fire of quenchless hate that has burned ever since kindled in my heart then. I went down stairs silently enough, and asked the rector's lady for my mist—for your mother. And the rector's lady—in the secret, too—laughed in my face, and told me she was gone. Gone! While I slept she was far on her way back to town, and I was left behind, without a penny in my pocket, a prisoner in that stupid Cornish rectory.

'Katherine, I shall pass over this time. It is nearly twenty years ago, but to this day I can't look back without some of the frantic misery and pain I endured them, I was only seventeen, in love, and a fool, but the pains of fools are as hard to bear as the pains of wise men. I understood it all—I was never to see him again. She had found us out, and this was her plot! I threw myself face down upon the floor of my room, and lay there for twelve hours, neither moving, nor eating, nor speaking, and then I got up and went down stairs and—kept silent, still, and waited.

'Two months passed away—two months. A short time enough, ough, as I recon time enough now—an eternity then. My order of release came at the end of that time. Old Markham, the butler, was sent for me, and I was taken back to town I asked him just one question on the road.

'Where was young Mr.——?' and I got the answer I looked for. Mr. ——had joined the—Rifles, and gone out to Canada a fortnight before.

'I said no more. I went back to town, and your mother and I met. She looked a little afraid of me in the first moment—and she had reason.

'You must forgive my running away and leaving you, Harriet,' she said. 'It was a whim of mine, a practical joke, knowing how you hate the country, you child of London. It won't happen again, and I have hosts of presents for you that I know you will be charmed with.'

'I thanked her and took the presents—took everything that was given to me, and bided my time. I knew, as well as though she had told me, how she had laughed and ridiculed her brother into the army, and out of England, I knew it all, and she knew that I knew it, but we never spoke of it—never once— until the hour of her death.

'There, Katherine! that is my story, that is the secret of my hatred of your mother. Don't you think she deserved it?'

'From you—yes,' Katherine answered promptly; 'at the same time. I think she did exactly right. She knew what you were, doubtless, and took the only means of saving her brother. Gentlemen and officers don't, as a rule, marry their sisters' waiting maids.'

Mrs. Vavasor sprang to her feet. That random arrow had sped home.

'It is false!' she gasped. 'I was no waiting maid—you know nothing—'

'It is true!' exclaimed Katherine, also rising. 'You were a waiting maid and I know all I desire know at present. My mother was a lady, her brother was an officer in the—th Rifles, my father lives and will recognize her old servant when he sees her, Harriet Lelacheur!'

Mrs. Vavasor stood white, terrified, dumb. Good Heavens! what a fool she had been to speak at all to such a girl as this.

'You see I know your real name among your many aliases. As I have found out that, so shall I find out all the rest. As surely as we both live and stand here, I shall one day discover my father and punish you. I devote my life to that purpose—to finding enemies—on you, on Peter Dangerfield, on Gaston Dantree. I shall one day be avenged for all the bitter, cruel wrong you have done me. I am only a girl, alone in the world, without friends or money, but I shall keep my word. Secretly and in the dark as you have worked, so I shall work, and when my time comes the mercy you have shown will be dealt back to you. Now good night, Mrs Vavasor. We understand each other I think.'

She opened the door, looked back once, darkly, menacingly, then it closed after her, and she was gone.

Ninon sat up for her mistress. It was close upon midnight when that mistress reached Scarswood. But she felt no fatigue—some inward spirit, whether good or evil, sustained her. As she parted with the girl, she laid two sovereigns in her hand.

'You have been a good girl, Ninon,' she said kindly, to a very capricious mistress. Thank you for all your patience, and, good night.'

She went to her room, but not to sleep. It was disordered—she set it to rights. Her jewels—all—lay in her velvet and ivory casket, her rich dresses hung in the wardrobe and closet, her bridal dress among them. She took a small portmanteau, and packed a few articles of dress and linen, a few of her most cherished presents [illegible] it. Then, still dressed as she was sat down by the window and waited for the dawn.

It came—rosy and golden, and touched the eastern windows into flame. Then she arose, and taking the portmanteau in her hand, went softly out down the stairs and alone to that door in the turret by which she had gone out and came in last night. She closed it noislessly—the household were not yet astir—and walked rapidly down the crisp, frozen avenue to the gates. The rising sun shot red lances through the brown boles of the aud trees, gilded the windows and turrets tall chimneys of the old hall, making a wonderful bright and fair picture of early morning beauty, had she but turned to see.

But she never looked back.

CHAPTER XVII.

"RESURGAM."

'And how is your patient to night, Mrs. Otis? Any change for the better yet?'

Dr. Graves asked the question, blustering in like the god of the wind. A high gale roared without, a few feathery flakes floated past the window stormy twilight. In the little sitting room of the window Otis' cottage a bright fire burning cheerily, the red, warm light streaming through the window curtains far out upon the frost bound road.

A frost-bound and lonely road, utterly forsaken this bleak January afternoon, on the very outskirts of Castleford, a full quarter of a mile from any human habitation, and flanked on one side by a low, gray Methodist chapel set in the centre of a grave yard. The white and gray headstones glimmered athwart the wintery gloaming, now, like white and grey ghosts.

Mrs. Otis, sitting placidly before her pleasant fire, got up as Dr. Graves came noisily in. She was the neatest of all little women, done up in a dress of bombazine, a spotless white neckerchief and widow's cap, and a pale, placid motherly face.

'Good evening, Dr. Graves, I thought it was Henry. Come to the fire; bitterly cold, is it not, outside? My patient—well, I don't see much improvement there, but Henry says he improves, and of course Henry knows best. Take this chair; do, and try and thaw out.'

Dr. Graves took the cushioned rocker, and spread himself luxuriantly to the blaze.

(Where is Henry? I wanted to see him.'

'Oh, among his poor patients somewhere; he will be along to tea presently. Any news to-night, doctor? I mean—'

'You mean the Scarswood Tragedy, of course, ma'am—nobody in Sussex. I believe, talks of anything else latterly. No, no news, and no news in this case does not mean good news. The funeral is over, as you know, and there is no will, and every thing falls to that pitiful, pettifogging little screw of an attorney, Peter Dangerfield; everything, Mrs. Otis; everything. He is Sir Peter now; and among all the baronets who have reigned at Scarswood since the days of James I., I don't believe such a baronet ever disgraced a good old name. She has not got a rap, not a farthing, ma'am—poor as a church mose, and poorer, for church mice can steal, if they get a chance, and she can't. She has got to work now, Mrs. Otis; got to go out into the hard world and earn the bread and beef of every day life. Nursery governess or something of that sort; she is not qualified for even that, poor thing!'

'But, Doctor Graves, this seems a little too dreadful; to cruel. Where are all her friends; all our resident gentry? Must all desert her because she chances not to be Sir John's real daughter?'

'She is down in the world, Mrs. Otis, and it is the way of the world to speed the misserable sinner who falls with a parting kick. Still in this case a few have come forward and offered her a home generously enough. The Talbots, for instance, and old Mansfield the lawyer. But she is a young woman of a very uncommon stamp, ma'am, and charity is charity, gloss it over as you may. She has acted very strangely from the first; in the last way any reasonable man might expect. But you can never tell, by what you previously knew of her how a woman will act in any given emergency. The Turks and other heathens who don't treat them as rational beings are in the right of it. They are not! Don't laugh, Mrs. Otis, it is nothin to laugh at. There is that young woman. Quick tempered, passionate. proud, generous, loving, just the sort of young woman to break out into tears and hysterics, and sobs and reproaches, making the place too hot for everybody, tearing her hair and rending her garments. Well, how does she act? She sits there like a stone, never says a word, never sheds a tear, and broods, broods in sullen silence. Women who don't cry and scold are women to be distrusted, ma'am. If I had seen her in hysterics I would have pittied her; as it is, I honestly declare she frightens me. Now then, ma'am, I will take a look at our wounded snake in the grass, and be off before it gets any later and colder.'

He jumped up and stalked away to a large airy chamber opening off this cosy sitting room. Like everything in and around the widow's cottage, it was daintily neat and clean. The last rays of the chill January day came through the muslin curtains and fell upon Gaston Dantree, lying motionless upon the bed.

It was an awfully death-like face—in his coffin the man would hardly look more ghastly, more utterly bloodless and lifeless than now. His faint breathing, his fluttering pulse were barely perceptible—no more. His damp, dark hair fell loose and nearly over the white pillows, and in all its spectral bloodlessness his rarely perfect face kept its dark Southern beauty still.

Dr. Graves took his rist between his his fingers and thumb, drew out his watch, and [illegible] professional shake, and proceeded to count with that owl-like solemnity of visage venerable physicians counting a patient's pulse ever do wear.

And over her cosy fire little Mrs. Otis sat and mused sadly enough on the fate of that unhappy young lady who a brief days ago had been the brightest and most blissful of petted heiresses and happy brides elect.

'And how strange that among all she knew—Dr. Graves and all—she should have chosen my Henry to come forward and cure the man she loved' she thought with that glow of pride widowed mothers of only sons always feel. 'No doubt she knew, if others are too stupid to find out, how clever he is, how good, how thoughtful, how kind! No woman could ever be more tender in a sick room than he; and if it be possible for earthly drugs to bring this unfortunate young man round, Henry is the one to do it. But I doubt it; I doubt. He looks like death, and knows nothing nor nobody. Hark! here is Henry now.'

She started forward. The front hall door opened, quick footsteps crossed the passage, the sitting room door was flung wide. and Mr. Henry Otis, booted and spurred, stood pale as a ghost before his mother.

'Henry,' the word was a low, frighened cry, but Henry Otis' eye turned from her to the bed room.

'Is she there? Who is that?' He strode across the room to the inner chamber, then fell back with a look of sick disappointment. 'Dr. Graves,' he said, 'only you. And I was sure I should find her here.'

'Find whom here? What do you mean young man?

I mean Miss Dangerfield. What! don't you know? She ran away either last night or this morning from Scarswood, and no tale or tidings of her are to be found. I thought she might of come here to —to see him.'

'Run away!' the widow and doctor both exclaimed.

'Yes—run away—to her death, most likely.

'Henry! Good Heaven!

'Women have ben driven to their death before now by men; girls have committed suicide for less than she has undergone. It is not those who make the most outcry over their troubles that feel them deepest. What she has left to live for—robbed of all at one blow?

He spoke bitterly; more bitterly than they dreamed he felt. Months ago he had lifted his eyes to the darkly brilliant heiress of Scarswood, and been mad enough to fall in love with her. To him she had looked the fairest, brightest, best of women, and not his own mother, even guessed it. But some of the sharp, cruel pain of loss broke out of his voice now.

'When I think of her and of him—the traitor—the dastard!'—he looked angrily towards the sick room—'I feel as though I should like to strangle him. If she is dead then Peter Dangerfield and Gaston Dantree are as surely murderers as ever Cain was.'

'Mr. Henry Otis,' exclaimed Dr. Graves with asperity, 'will you restrain this incoherent language and violent manner, and tell us in a composed Christian way what has happened? Miss Dangerfield went home all right after the funeral, with Miss Talbot. Did she run away herself, in the night, or did Peter Dangerfield turn her out?'

'Scarcely that, I think,' Henry Otis returned. 'Even he would hardly do that. Miss Talbot left her at Scarswood, and went home with her brother. About nine o'clock she suddenly made her appearance before the landlord of the Silver Rose, where the woman Vavasor has been stopping, asked to see her, and was shown to her room. Mrs. Vavasor was out; she returned in about half an hour, and they were shut up together till half-past ten.—Then Miss Dangerfield left the house alone and on foot, looking more like her own ghost, the landlord says, than herself. Her French maid, Ninon, let her in a little before mid-night; she gave the girl money, bade her good night, and left her. In the morning she was gone. Search has been made. My own opinion is that she has made away with herself.'

'And my opinion is, she has done nothing of the sort!' curtly interposed Dr. Graves. 'Only arrant cowards commit suicide, and whatever blood flows in Miss Dangerfield's veins there is not a drop of coward in it. She will live and to terrible purpose, as Peter Dangerfield, Gaston Dantree and that other little villain Vavasor will yet find. Katherine Dangerfield, wherever she is in this, is not in the other world, take my word for that.'

As he took up his gloves and hat, with the last emphatic words, there came a rap at the door. What presentiment was it that sent Henry Otis to answer it with such a very unprofessional bound? He threw it open, and—yes—there in the spectral, wintry dusk before him stood the tall, slender, sombre figure; its black robes, its white face, and great solemn eyes; there stood Katherine Dangerfield.

He could not speak a word; the unutterable relief of seeing her alive and there, for a moment almost unmanned him. It was she who spoke first, in that faint, sweet voice that haunted him for ever after his life long.

'May I come in? It is very cold, and I want to see him.'

KEEP THE FEET DRY.

This is the season of sloppy weather so productive of colds and lung troubles; neglected cold or damp feet is a source of these difficulties. Cure your cough with Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam. Pleasant to take and always reliable.

SCRIPTURE CONFIRMED.

An English clergyman who traveled through the Holy Land a few years ago in company with Dr. Moses D. Hoge, of Richmond, Va., describes one of the scenes in their travels in the following words: "When Jesus sat by Jacob's well, he could see the hot dusty path across the plain which He had travelled. On his right hand as he looked back, stood close by Gerizim, the most prominent object in sight, to which the woman would surely have pointed as she spoke. We saw the site of its temple from the place where we rested. Ebal rose behind us, the white road between it and Gerizim leading straight into Shechem, now Nablem, about half an hour off. We spent the day ascending to the summit of Gerizim, tested the acoustic property of the valley betwen the two hills, on which were set the blessings and the curses mentioned in Deuteronomy xxvii. I was on the slope of Mont Gerizim, while Dr. Hoge went some distance up that of Mont Ebal, the space between us being between half and three quarters of a mile. Indeed as I saw the Doctor ride down from the spot on Gerizim where we stood across the valley and creep up the side of Ebal till his horse looked no bigger than an ant, it seemed almost foolish to make the experiment we contemplated. I fancied it would be impossible to hear his voice over the chasm beneath us. We had arranged to give signals. He was to take off his hat, which was covered with larg white puggery, for me to begin; but the distance between us was too great for me to distinguish any such indication. However, at last seeing he had fairly stopped. I read aloud slowly one of the psalms for the day, feeling all the while that I might just as well have addressed the House of Commons from Lambeth Palace.

Then I paused, I had understood the Doctor to say that he would recite the 31st Psalm, and turned to it in my prayer book. Great was my surprise, when from that little dot on the hill side I heard in his voice across the valley. The Lord is my shepherd, etc.' It is the 23rd! I exclaimed to his friend whom he had left with me. This was a severe test, and it was made more so by a party of Turkish soldiers who hearing me, came out of some barricks, which lay beneath us, and began talking.

When I rejoined the Doctor, I found he had heard me plainly. Indeed he remarked on the difference between versions of the Psalms I had read and that which he was familiar within America. Two companions who remained in the valley between us, distinguished every syllable with the greatest ease. What a scene and service it must have been when the blessings and the curses, were said by the thousands under Joshua, from those hills!

No article ever attained such unbounded popularity in so short a time as Burdock Blood Bitters, and that too during the existance of countless numbers of widely advertised bitters and blood purifiers. It is evident that this medicine begins its work at once, and leaves no desirable effect unattained.

WHY FARMERS DO NOT SUCCEED.

The Southern Farmer's Monthly contains the following admirable suggestions, which farmers should duly note:—

Why some farmers do not succeed.
They are not active and industrious.
They do not keep up with improvements.
They are wedded to old methods.
They give no attention to details.
They think small things not important.
They take no pleasure in their work.
They regard labour as a misfortune
They weigh and measure stingly.
They are wastful and improvident.
They let their gates sag and fall down.
They will not make compost.
They let their fowls roost in the trees.
They have no shelter for stock.
They do not curry their horses
They leave their ploughs in the field.
They hang their harness in the dust.
They put off greasing the waggon.
They starve the calf and milk the cow.
They don't know the best is the cheapest.
They have no method or system
They have no ears for home enterprise.
They see no good in a new thing.
They never use paint on the farm.
They prop the barn door with a rail.
They milk the cows late in the day
They have no time to do things well.
They don't believe in rotations of crops.
They do not read the best books and newspapers.

THE CAUSE OF COLDS.

Are getting overheated in hot rooms or crowded assemblies, sitting in a draught, or cooling too rapidly after exercise, muffling up extra and changing to lighter wrappings, cold and damp feet. No matter what is the cause Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam is the cure for all throat, lung and chest diseases, that so often terminate in consumption.

THE STANDARD.

Friday, Febrary 10th, 1882.

In another column will be found an advertisement, announcing that the stores and dwelling in the Reid block are now ready to rent. The stores are being fitted up in first class style and the dwellings over the stores are ready for any one who wish a really comfortable residence. The first flat consists of a kitchen, dining room, parlor, and a spare bedroom; the upper flat is divided into 4 sleeping apartments, with a large hall in the centre. The bedrooms are large, well lighted and airy. The carpenter work was done by Messrs. Byers and Thompson, and the mason work and plastering by M. James Reid of Markdale, assisted by his cousin Mr. James Reid of Mount Forest, and does all parties concerned very great credit, in fact it is without a doubt the best building of the kind in Markdale. There is two stores and two dwellings in the block, and we would advise any person in want of a good stand for business purposes or a comfortable dwelling to apply early, as such desirable premises will not long remain without tenants.

Dr. McGregor is speaking of leaving here for the North West in the spring. The Dr. has been eminently successful in his profession and has a very large practice here, and it would be a pity if he were to leave. It is to be hoped he will change his mind.—O. S. Advertiser.

NEW ENGLAND.

The Annual Grange Supper took place on the evening of the 30th of January. The afternoon was occupied in examining the samples from the Grange Supply Company, after which the oysters and other good things were served. After this interesting part of the programme was over the meeting was called to order by the Master. Mr. James Morwood was appointed chairman and gave a short address. He then called upon Mr. Evenson, (the Grange Supply Agent,) who spoke chiefly upon the workings of the Supply Company. Then followed Messrs. R. Buchanan, T. Weber, and J. Brodie of the Meaford Road Grange, R. Hicks, (non-granger,) T. Yelland and D. H. Elis, of New England Grange. The meeting passed off harmoniously and all seemed well pleased.

New England is badly in need of a post office. We would suggest that some of our influential men and those interested in it take in hand and try to get a connecting link between Markdale and Rocklyn, via Vandeleur.

STREET LETTER BOXES.—The new pillar boxes are now in position, and will be found a great convenience to our citizens, especially to the ladies, as those residing a distance from the Post Office can post their letters without travelling so far. The letter boxes are situated at the corner of Bay and Russell Streets, at the corner of Poulett and Division Streets, and at the cornor of Poulett and Campbell Streets. Mr. Edward Paterson has the contract for collecting the letters and taking them to the Post Office, and the boxes will be emptied three times a day—at 6.30 a. m., 2 p. m., and 4.40 p. m.—O. S. Times.

BORROWING PAPERS.—There is a class of newspaper readers who are always finding fault with the editor for what he publishes and yet these are the ones who never pay anything for the support of a paper. They will borrow a paper from a neighbour and then after reading through they will say that it is good for nothing. Such mean conduct deserves to be discountenanced by every right thinking individual. The man who is too mean to pay for a newspaper now a days should not be premitted to read one.

MEAFORD ROAD.

From our Correspondence.

The annual Tea Meeting in connection with the Union Sabbath School, held here on the 31st ult., was a most decided success being far ahead of the expectations of the most sanguine. The tea and cakes were all that could be desired both in excellance and quantity. The attendence was large, the church being filled to the very door. The children preformed their part most admirable, both in their recitations, and dialogues. The singing was excellent. The amount realised was $45. Every body, both small and great, expressed themselves as being higly pleased.

The pale horse and his rider has paid this neighbourhood another visit. His victim this time was Mr. Edward Foley, who came to reside here some five or six years ago. He was a quite citizen, and a good neighbor. His end was peace.

A LADY'S EXPERIENCE.

Mrs. T. A. Gist, No. 1204 Walnut street, Philadelphia, Pa., writes: "I had inflammatory rheumatism very badly. In one foot and ankle it seems to have taken hold with the determination to stay some time, and the morning I obtained the St. Jacobs Oil I could not put my foot down to the floor, even for an instant. I used it that evening for the first time, and the next morning for the second time and that afternoon put my foot down for several minutes. On Sunday following I could stand and walk a few steps. On Tuesday could walk about my room, and went down stairs by holding on the banisters. Now I can walk quite well, and there is very little pain left. Just think! one bottle and a half and I am almost free from pain. It is a wonderful medicine.

EUGENIA.

From our own Correspondence.

The fourth annual supper given on January the 18th, by the members of Eugenia Grange No. 684, was one of the most successful entertainments of the season. Early in the day sleighs began to arrive, bringing baskets loaded with every kind of cookery, which the medical faculty pronounce to be unfit for the despeptic. One would have imagined that the lady members had entered on a contest to see who could provide the greatest quantity and best quality. Each lady member had, with one exception, made a point of providing for at least 23 to 30 visitors, so the supper was ample.

Although disappointed in some able speakers, yet, judging from the remarks which we overheard, all seemed well pleased with the evenings entertainment, which was kept up until a late our. The thanks of the Grange are tendored to all those who lent their assistance towards the evening's enjoyment with songs, music, recitations, dialogues and speeches.

These suppers are not got up simply for the pecuniary benefit derived from them, as the Grange, financially, is in excellent standing. The outside public look forward eagerly for the Grange supper—they come around and almost demand it.

A. Gifford, Meaford, touched upon the benefit of the Grange Fire Insurance, also the Mutual Aid Association; abolition of Market Fees, &c. His remarks were well received.

The proceedings were brought to a close by singing God Save the Queen, when all went home well pleased with the Eugenia Grange supper.

BUNESSIN.

From our Correspondent.

On Monday, 16th January, above a score of the young people of Bunessin surprised the Manse, Priceville, and succeed quietly in placing within its walls stores to last for many days. Nor did they forget the bay mare, Jennie, whose bin was not large enough to hold one half of the clean white oats they brought. After a refreshing cup of tea, which was got up a la mode, the lads and lasses amused themselves with singing and a variety of interesting games.

Though the Manse is not often visited by so many and so much at one time, yet such visits on a small scale are of frequent occurrence. The good people all over the congregation always remember that the occupants of the Manse, like other sensible folk, need such things as potatoes, flour, meal, pork, beef, mutton, turkey, goose, fowl, butter and cheese. They bring also such things as socks, and the yarn to make and mend them—things ever welcome with the thrifty housewife, because they not only furnish necessary clothing, but also the opportunity of teaching the bairns how to knit and work for themselves. The barn is not left empty.

These things may seem homely and common place for presentation, but they are just the things needed in every well regulated family. Though they may, in these years of plenty, be not worth their weight in gold, they are worth their value in gold.—D.

COUNTY ORANGE MEETING—SOUTH GREY.

The annual meeting of the L. O. Co. Lodge of South Grey, was held at Flesherton Station, on Tuesday, 7th inst. There was a large attendance. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

Council adjourned to meet on the first Monday in February, 1882; and will meet hereafter on the first Monday in each month during the year.

W. J. BELLAMY, Clerk.

THE LAND BOOM IN MANITOBA.

Canada is convulsed with the Manitoba land speculation craze at the present moment, everybody is investing his little pile in town lots, speculators are hastening to the scene of action with thousands of dollars. Discontented business men are giving up business and travelling westward. Big stories are told of fortunes being made in a few days Some say it is impossible to lose any money by investing in land; that everybody is sure to return home rich and prosperous, and such stories, but for the benefit of our readers we give a few facts in regard to this kind of speculation, and caution them against investing in paper towns which may perhaps in the future be nothing more than an ordinary farm. No doubt large amounts have been made by persons investing in land, but as a rule they get rid of it just as quick as they can make a little on their purchase and while the fever lasts. A person cannot lose much by taking up land but even that can be over done. A person taking up a farm of poor land, which will perhaps be twelve or fifteen miles from the railroad, stands a poor chance of making more than an ordinary living, and when he is sixty or seventy miles distant his chances are still less.

The Toronto World has the following remarks on the subject which are to the point:

"To the land scoopers, Manitoba furnishes the 'suckers,' and they are caught in this way. Four or five sharks go to work and get a tract of land of 500 acres, say Smith, Brown, Jones, Robinson and Dicksen are the proprietors, but they have it all in one name say Smith. Along comes Brown, and he offers Smith $5 an acre for the 500 acres. The sale is made and duly registered. Jones now steps up to Brown and offers him $14 an acre. They finally close at $16. It is now Robinson's turn to go to Jones and offer him $5,000 for one hundred acres. Dickson buys another one hundred acres for $6,000. All these transactions, but not a dollar passes hands. Now the time has arrived to look for the Ontario suckers. Accordingly Robinson and Dickson hie themselves off to Ontario to exhibit their scheme. By this time it is perhaps knocked into town lots on paper. The open-mouthed Ontarian is shown the plans. He is told of how land that was bought for $2 has changed hands repeatedly at $5, $10, $20, $30 and $50 He is shown the registered transfers—and that the boom has now commenced. The Ontario dupe believes what he is told, buys the land, and then the 'big five' go home and devide."

As an illustration of paper towns when the Grand Trunk boom was abroad about thirty years ago, town plots were laid out at every station and cross roads. Scarboro' Junction is not much of a place to-day; there is a hotel there and a couple of houses, and you can get all the land you want at about $60 to $80 an acre. But when the Grand Trunk was building it was town-lotted, sold at high prices, and ruined many a man. A place was also laid out at York, and to day you can't find it. Mimico, on the west side of Toronto, was sold off in lots. Land is less than $100 an acre there to-day. Gordon Brown, Sandford Fleming and others got up a town and called it Balmoral, on the Grand Trunk somewhere between Toronto and Weston where an immense sale of lots took place, and everyone lost his money. Every one seemed mad to buy these lots. You could not find Balmoral if you went out there to-day. Malton is a station further up the Grand Trunk. It was to become a mighty centre of commerce. Well, lots in the great (prospective) town of Malton were sold by auction in Montreal and other towns for £100 a lot; now they won't bring $80 an acre. Brampton has got to be something, but many a hard-earned dollar was lost there in lots. One man bought a number of lots there at between £50 and £60 each; he held on for years and years, till finally in 1878 he sold them at the rate of $100 an acre. Shakespeare was to be another of these great towns; well, the remains of the fence-posts around its town lots are still standing. Tullamore, out in Chinguacousy, is another of these towns that never came to a head, but which ruined many a man. All over Ontario can be found the marks of these paper towns. So will it be in Manitoba.

GOATS TO PROTECT SHEEP.

The farmers of Hunterdon and Somerset counties, New Jersey, use goats to protect their sheep from dogs. Two goats can drive away a dozen dogs, and two are about all each farmer puts in with his sheep. As soon as a dog enters the field at night, the goats attack him, and their butting propensities are too much for the canine, who soon finds himself rolling over and over, a few repetitions of this treatment causes the dog to quit the field, limping and yelling. Formerly when a dog entered a sheep field at night, the sheep would run, wildly around and cry piteously. Since the goats have been used to guard them, they form a line behind the goats and seem to enjoy the fun. The idea of utilizing goats in this way came from the West, where they are put in sheep pens to drive away wolves.

FROM "THE TIMES."

Editor of the Times.—I have been watching the correspondence in your paper for the past few weeks with much interest. Having been in the practise of medicines for many years I have learned to have no confidence in the many proprictory medicine which are on the market and it was through the excellent recommendation given by Dr. Bates, and the knowledge I had of his veracity and ability as a physician that ever led me to lay aside my long existing prejudice to try the only wonderful remedy, named Kendall's Spavin Cure which I find so many of your readers have also found to be so valuable. Rheumatism has afflicted me for years, and have all the skill I have professed to have in treating others I found myself unable to do anything to cure myself entirely. After suffering for years he difficulty became located in my hip and nothing that I could do seemed to effect it until I began to use Kendall's Spavin Cure, which has cured me completely. In all my experience as a physician I have never been able to make any compound which penetrates so thoroughly and works so admirably in removing old standing ailments, and at the same time hardly produce any irritation of the skin. It has done such wonders with me that I have the utmost confidence in its efficacy, and can recommend it with a confidence that the proprietors do not claim too much for it.

Respectfully,
J. R. PORTER, M. D.

ESTABLISHMENT
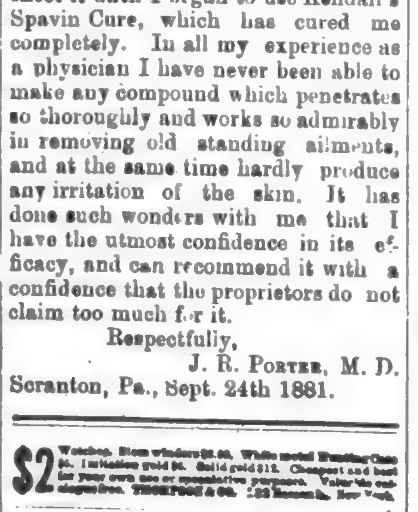
WORLD.



M. W. DUNHAM,
Wayne, Du Page County, Illinois, U. S. A.
(35 miles west of Chicago.)

During the past 17 months 390 STALLIONS AND MARES have been imported from France to this establishment, being MORE than the combined importations of all other importers of Draft Horses from all parts of Europe for any one year.

One-fifth of the entire number of Imported French Horses in America can be seen on his farm. His Importations have included the Prize Winners of the Universal Exposition, Paris, 1878, and nearly all the Prize Horses of the Great Shows of France since his importations began. They also carried off the honors at the Centennial, 1876; and, at the Great Chicago Fair, 1881, Mr. Dunham's Herd of PERCHERONS, in competition with the largest and finest collection of Clydesdales ever shown, consisting of the prize winners at the Great Shows of Scotland and England, was awarded the Grand Sweepstakes Prize of $1,000 and Grand Gold Medal.

100 PAGE CATALOGUE sent FREE on application. Contains over 40 Illustrations and the history of the Percheron race. Order "CATALOGUE X."

EVERY LARGE BREEDER & EVERY NEIGHBORHOOD NEEDS A PERCHERON STALLION

BECAUSE thirty years' trial has demonstrated that when bred to the common mares of the country the produce is more uniform, are easier keepers, better workers, and sell for more money on the market than any other class of Horses.

ZOPESA
(FROM BRAZIL.)

The New Compound, its wonderful affinity to the Digestive Apparatus and the Liver, increasing the dissolving juices, relieving almost instantly the dreadful results of Dyspepsia, Indigestion, and the TORPID LIVER, makes Zopesa an every day necessity in every house.

It acts gently and speedily in Biliousness, Costiveness, Headache, Sick Headache, Distress after Eating, Wind on the Stomach, Heartburn, Pains in the Side and Back, Want of Appetite, Want of Energy, Low Spirits, Foul Stomach. It invigorates the Liver, carries off all surplus bile, regulates the Bowels, and gives tone to the whole system.

Cut this out and take it to your Druggist and get a 10 cent Sample, or a large bottle for 75 cents, and tell your neighbor about it.

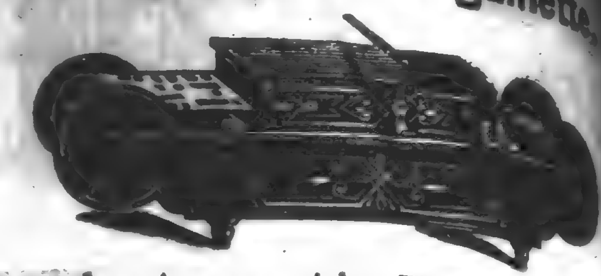
Mechanical Orguinette,



An Automatic Reed Organ

"The Orguinette may now be called a celebrated instrument. In tone it is equal to the Cabinet Organ, but the organ must be manipulated by an artist in order to produce music; the ORGUINETTE is on the other hand entirely mechanical in its action, and at a trifling expense it can be made to furnish an unlimited supply of all kinds of music.—Toronto Globe."

"The Orguinette is indeed a musical wonder. It is a miniature reed organ, with as strong and melodious a tone as the Cabinet Size. It surpasses the Cabinet Organ for the reason that the ignoramus in music can play it as well as the most accomplished professor. THE ORGUINETTE is strong and accurate in its mechanism, and consequently not liable to get out of order."—Montreal Gazette.

"The Orguinette is the most perfect automatic musical instrument yet invented. Its repertorie is unlimited, the tone is remarkably good."—Montreal Star.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

The most successful Remedy ever discovered, as it is certain in its effects and does not blister. READ PROOF BELOW.

FROM THE ONEONTA PRESS.

Oneonta, New York, Jan. 6th, 18[illegible]

Early last summer Messrs J. B. Kendall & Co., of Enosburgh Falls, Vt., made a contract with the publishers of the Press for a half column advertisement for one year setting forth the merits of Kendall's Spavin Cure. At the same time we secured from the firm a quantity of books, entitled Kendall's Treatise on the Horse and his Diseases, which we are giving to advance paying subscribers of the Press as a premium.

About the time the advertisement first appeared in this paper Mr. P. G. Schermerhorn, who resides near Colliers, had a spavined horse. He read the advertisement and concluded to test the efficacy of the remedy, though his friends laughed at his credulity. He bought a bottle of Kendall's Spavin Cure and commenced using it on the horse in accordance with the directions, and he informed us this week that it effected such a perfect cure that an expert horseman, who examined the animal recently could find no trace of the spavin or the place where it had been located. Mr. Schermerhorn has since secured a copy of Kendall's Treatise of the Horse and his Diseases, which he prizes very highly and would be loth to part with at any price, provided he could not obtain another copy. So much for advertising reliable articles.

Kendall's Spavin Cure.

New Hamburg, Ont., Dec. 29th 18[illegible]

Mr. F. H. McCallum, Dear Sir:—The bottle of Dr. Kendall's Spavin Cure bought of you last summer gave me the utmost satisfaction and performed a wonderful cure on a mare nineteen years old belonging to me which was badly spavined for ten years, and was so lame that I could hardly get her to move. The lameness is entirely gone after using half a bottle of the cure, and she is like a young horse again.

Yours truly.
J. F. [illegible]

FROM A PROMINENT PHYSICIAN

Washingtonville, Ohio, June 17th, 18[illegible]

Dr. J. B. Kendall & Co., Gents:—Seeing your advertisement in Turf, Field and Farm of Kendall's Spavin Cure, and having a valuable and speedy horse which had been lame from spavin for eighteen months, I sent to you for a bottle by express, which in six weeks removed all lameness and enlargement and a large splint from another horse and both horses are to day as sound as colts. The one bottle was worth to me one hundred dollars.

Respectfully yours,
H. A. BERTOLETT, M.D.

Kendall's Spavin Cure ON HUMAN FLESH.

Thousands of trials on human flesh has proved beyond a doubt that "KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE" has sufficient strength to penetrate and virtue to cure the worst cases of rheumatism, corns, bunions, frost bites, or any bruise, cut or lameness which is not affected in the least by ordinary liniments. It does not blister but on the contrary removes all soreness.

St. Johns, P.Q., Oct. 27th, 18[illegible]

Dr. B. Kendall & Co., Gents:—I have used your Spavin Cure with great success on sprains, curbs and splints. I know it to be a good remedy for ringbones, bone spavins, galls and all kinds of lameness and many other difficulties about the horse. One of my men sprained his ankle badly. I applied Kendall's Spavin Cure and I never saw anything work like it, he was well in a few days. I know it to be good for man as well as beast. I procured one of your Treatise on the Horse, by mail for 25c., and I think it was the means of saving me $100 or more, in that I treated according to the directions given in your book for displaced stifle.

Yours truly,
WM. J. FRASER.

Dunham, P.Q., March 10th, 18[illegible]

Dr. B. J. Kendall & Co., Gents:—About a year ago I fell in the road onto some ice and was badly hurt in the hip joint, which caused me much suffering. I tried various remedies but none gave relief, until I tried Kendall's Spavin Cure. I applied it full strength twice a day for two weeks during last October and it effected a perfect cure. I have since then been well and free from lameness. It is very valuable for man as well as beast.

Yours truly,
CHESTER K. GRIMM.

Kendall's Spavin Cure.

Is sure in its effects, mild in action as it does not blister, yet it is penetrating and powerful to reach every deep seated pain or to remove any bony growth or other enlargements, such as spavins, splints, curbs, ringbones, callous, swellings and any lameness and all enlargements of the joints or limbs, or for rheumatism in man or for any purpose for which a liniment is used for man or beast. It is now known to be the best liniment for man ever used, acting mild and yet certain in its effects.

Send address for illustrated circular which we think gives positive proof of its virtues. No remedy has ever met with such unqualified success to our knowledge, for beast as well as man.

Price $1 per bottle, or six bottles for $5. All Druggists have it or can get it for you, or it will be sent to any address on receipt of price by the proprietors, DR. B. J. KENDALL & CO., Enosburgh Falls, Vt.

Mr. Samuel McCaw, the well-known Conductor on the Whitby and Lindsay Railway, says Dr. Carson's Stomach and Constipation Bitters cured me of Dyspepsia. I always keep them in the house, and consider them invaluable as a family medicine. A Turner and Co. Special Agent Markdale.

A PUBLIC MEETING should be called of the citizens of every city, town and village in the Dominion, to consider what should be done to prevent the hair from turning Gray—and falling out. If this important question received their earnest consideration they would unanimously decide that science had at last discovered something that would answer this purpose—and furthermore would recommend Cingalese Hair Renewer as being this something for restoring the hair to its natural color, and prevent its falling out. 50 cents per bottle. For sale by all Druggists.

We have recieved several complaint of late of the non-delivery of our paper and other mail matter, in some cases two days after being mailed here, and in others our paper has not been recieved until eight days after publication. If this were the first complaint we would pass it over, but hardly a week elapses without recieving some such complaint and "patience has ceased to be a virtue," we will, therefore, if the nuisance complained of is not remedied, have the P. O. Inspector up and ascertain with whom the fault lies.

Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis, Pains in the Throat and Chest, relieved and cured by the use of "Dr. Carson's Pulmonary Cough Drops. The most reliable testimony has been received as to their efficacy. In Bottles, 50 cents. A. Turner and Co. Special Agent Markdale.

DUNDALK.

(From the Herald.)

Our winter so far, is said to be the finest that we ever had in this part of the country. Our winter at most cannot be very long.

G. R. Middleton has moved his stock of goods into his new store, of which further notice will be given.

The Proton Ag. Society, as per posters, held a special meeting of the members of two years standing, to decide upon a place to hold the fall exhibition of the Society, which resulted in the unanimous vote that the show of the Society be held in the village of Dundalk, for this and future years. This will settle a long disputed question which has rested between parties as to where the show of the Society be held. Now that the matter has been fully settled, we hope that all parties will use their influence to make the coming show of the society a grand success and that it may be a benefit to all interested.

Messrs. Wm. Nelson, and John Hanbury, Contractor, have gone to see Winnipeg, in Manitoba, should they like it, they will most likely purchase. We wish them success.

Mr. John Vert, our Township Clerk has been so ill of late, that he has been unable to attend to the duties of his office. The Council saw fit to appoint Mr. Cavanagh, pro tem to fill the office of clerk, we hope to see Mr. Vert soon able to attend to the duties of his office.

A. G. Huntre, is making some alteration in his premises which he purchased lately from Mr. Nickle.

We are pleased to inform the inhabitants of Dundalk and vicinity that the Dundalk mills are now manufacturing a superior grade of flour. The time has now come when the inhabitants can support home manufacture.

On Tuesday, the usual monthly fair was held. There was a large attendance of farmers and others, but the stock shown and offered for sale was very limited. There was a good demand for working oxen, and several were sold. The auction sale, by J. W. Morrow, of farm stock, was good. We may expect a large fair next month.

Last Thursday evening presented a gay appearance at the Skating Rink, on the occassion of a grand carnival. There was a large attendance of visitors present than on any other occasion since the commencment of the present season — both young and old—from far and near. There was a large number in costume, dressed in the habiliments, characterestic of the various nationalities and callings through life. The following are some of the principal characters represented:—

Miss M. McCanackie, Kitchen Maid; Miss A. McAulay, Eearly in the Morning; Miss M. McAulay, Late at Night; Miss H. Phillip, Flower Girl; Miss A. Phillip, Fairy Queen; Misses. S. Kay and P. McGregor, Spring; Miss J. Lamon, Red Riding Hood; J. Strain, Darkey; J. McGregor, Night and Morning; J. Vodden, Old Bags; W. Sutton, Turk; W Bull, and J. Marshal, Soldiers; M. Wilson and W. Rundle, Clowns; R. Whitley, Irish Gentleman, W. McArthur, Indian; T. Middleton, Bedtime; Y. Nixon, Autumn; G. Fry, St. Jacob's Oil. The only disappointment of the evening was that of the promised band, which failed to put in an appearance. However, through the kindness of Messrs W. and J. Potter, assisted by Mr. McMillen, good instrumental music was furnished, and by the management of Mr. Steinhoff, the courteous proprietor and manager, the best of order prevailed, and all fully enjoyed themselves.

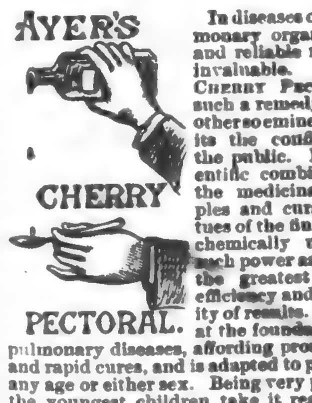
THE BEST REMEDY

FOR

Diseases of the Throat and Lungs.

AYER'S



CHERRY

PECTORAL.

In diseases of the pulmonary organs a safe and reliable remedy is invaluable. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL is such a remedy, and no other so eminently merits the confidence of the public. It is a scientific combination of the medicinal principles and curative virtues of the finest drugs, chemically united, of such power as to insure the greatest possible efficiency and uniformity of results. It strikes at the foundation of all pulmonary diseases, affording prompt relief and rapid cures, and is adapted to patients of any age or either sex. Being very palatable, the youngest children take it readily. In ordinary Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Bronchitis, Influenza, Clergyman's Sore Throat, Asthma, Croup, and Catarrh, the effects of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL are magical, and multitudes are annually preserved from serious illness by its timely and faithful use. It should be kept at hand in every household for the protection it affords in sudden attacks. In Whooping-cough and Consumption there is no other remedy so efficacious, soothing, and helpful.

Low prices are inducements to try some of the many mixtures, or syrups, made of cheap and ineffective ingredients, now offered, which, as they contain no curative qualities, can afford only temporary relief, and are sure to deceive and disappoint the patient. Diseases of the throat and lungs demand active and effective treatment; and it is dangerous experimenting with unknown and cheap medicines, from the great liability that these diseases may, while so trifled with, become deeply seated or incurable. Use AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and you may confidently expect the best results. It is a standard medical preparation, of known and acknowledged curative power, and is as cheap as its careful preparation and fine ingredients will allow. Eminent physicians, knowing its composition, prescribe it in their practice. The test of half a century has proven its absolute certainty to cure all pulmonary complaints not already beyond the reach of human aid.

Notice to Contractors.

AS WE HAVE A LARGE QUANTITY of Saw Logs at our mill this season, we will give contractors a good chance. The logs will be all skidded in the woods. A good shanty and stable also in the woods. Any parties wishing to have a contract of the kind will do well to see us. The distance to haul, about two-and-a-half miles, on a good road.

People had far more right to become dyspeptic, and remain gloomy and miserable, than they have to take poison and commit suicide. If the stomach becomes weak and fails to perform its functions, Burdock Blood Bitters will speedily remedy the trouble.

A TRUE GENTLEMAN.

"I beg your pardon," and with a smile and touch of his hat, Harry Edmond handed to an old man, whom he had accidentally stumbled against, the cane which he knocked from his hand. "I hope I did not hurt you. We were playing too roughly."

"Not a bit," said the old man, cheerily. "Boys will be boys, and it is best they should be. You did not harm me a bit."

"I'm glad to hear it," and lifting his hat again, Harry turned to join his playmates with whom he had been frolicking at the time of the accident.

"What did you raise your hat at that old fellow for?" asked his companion, Charley Gray, "He's only Giges, the huckster."

"That makes no difference," said Harry; "the question is not whether he is a gentleman, but whether I am."

DESERVING OF PRAISE.

Too much cannot be expressed in favor of that unsurpassed remedy for coughs, colds, asthma, croup, sore throat, and all lung complaints. If you suffer from neglected colds, try Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam. The cost is trifling, only 25 cents.

PROVINCAL APPOINTMENRS.

His honor the Lieutenant-Governor has been pleased to appoint the following gentlemen commissioners, under the provisions of the License Act of 1879, in and for the undermentioned License Districts:—

HAGYARD'S YELLOW OIL.

Will be found invaluable for all purposes of a family liniment. Immediate relief will follow its use in all cases of pain in the stomach, bowels or side; rheumatism, colic, sprains and bruises. For internal and external use. It has no equal in the world for what it is recommended. For sale by all dealers at 25c per bottle.

A BAD BLUNDER.

At a church sociable some time ago the local student was detailed to assist a young lady, whom he had long admired from afar, in making out a new Sabbath school library list.

The prospective minister found the task by no means an unpleasant one, as the charming young creature read out the title of each book from the title page, while he delightedly copied it into the catalogue before him. In fact, there flitted through the mind of the sedate and rather bashful youth several times the question whether the amiable maiden, with her pretty figure and bright eyes, could not be induced to become the "sharer of his labours and toils."

"I believe I would ask her to-night if I only dared," thought the young man. "But I don't dare, so there's the end of it." And with gloomier face than before he continued his work calling out, "Next book?" almost as mechanically as fast as he had transcribed the former title. He was aroused from his reverie by the following rejoinder to one of his demands for "next book."

"Why don't you do it?"

He started as though the girl had been reading his thoughts.

"Do what?" he inquired, by way of drawing her out. But the young lady replied not a word. To gain time he again said

"Next book."

"No time like the present," said the maiden, with an encouraging smile.

"I see it is of no use to hide my thoughts from you, Miss M.," he said, struggling with embarrassment. "Your last two remarks have shown me how perfectly you realize my state of mind. I will, therefore, follow your advice and embrace the present opportunity of asking you whether you are willing to accept me as your partner for life. Your answer, I am confident from these remarks, will be affirmative."

It was the young lady's turn to be embarrassed.

"To what remarks do you refer?" she said.

"To the two sentences in which you so delicately blended words of advice and encouragement on this most important of subjects, when you said, 'Why don't you do it?' and 'No time like the present.'"

The girl looked puzzled for a moment, and then burst into a merry laugh. 'Why, those were the titles of the books you called for. Well, you have got yourself into a pretty fix,' and she laughed at the discomfitted student maliciously.

'Miss M.,' said the young man, springing up with sudden earnestness, 'I beg you will consider the words which I cannot now recall. Be mine and I shall be perfectly happy. Refuse me and you will make me miserable for life. Will you be mine?'

'Yes, yes: don't make such a noise about it or somebody will overhear you.'

MRS. PARTINGTON SAYS.—Don't take any of the quack nostrums, as they are rig mental to the human system; but put your trust in Hop Bitters, which will cure general disapation, costive habits and all comic diseases. They saved Isaac from a severe extract of tyfoid fever. They are the best plaster of all. —Boston Globe.

A LECTURE TO YOUNG MEN

ON THE LOSS OF

MANHOOD

WE have recently published a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical and nervous Debility, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage etc., resulting from excesses.

☞ Price, in a sealed envelope, only 6 cts., or two postage stamps.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicines or the use of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

☞ This Lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

A WONDERFUL WOMAN.

CHAPTER XVII. Continued.

There was something so forlorn in her look, in her loneliness, in the soft plaintive tone—something so like a spirit about her, that the words he would have spoken died on his lips. She stood before him alive, but surely death was pictured on her face.

'Come in,' he said simply, and she glided past him, and into the presence of the other two.

'My child! my child!' Mrs. Otis said, with a motherly cry; 'thank Heaven, you are alive, and have come to us. Sit down, let me warm your hands. Oh! my child, what a fright you have given us all! Where in the world have you been?'

She sank wearily down in the chair and let her hands lie in the elder woman's warm clasp.

'I have been with Hannah,' she answered slowly at Bracken Hollow with my nurse.* And to-morrow I leave Castleford, and I could not go you know, without seeing Gaston, poor fellow. I would have come before, but I—I didn't know—my head feels all wrong some how, and I think I have been half asleep all day. And the walk was so long—so long, and so cold—oh me! and I was so dizzy and stupid all the way. How warm your fire is, and how nice it is to sit here!'

Her voice died drowsily away, her hood dropped against the back of the chair, her eyelids fell heavily. The three about her looked in one another's startled faces in dead silence. What did this mean?

'My child—Miss Dangerfield!' Mrs. Otis murmured. Oh, look up, don't lie like that, Miss Katherine, Miss Katherine!'

'Yes, papa,' drowsily 'but I am so sleepy, and don't want to get up for breakfast yet. Has Gaston come? It is cold for him to ride from Castleford to-night—and he hates the cold, poor Gaston! Call me when he comes papa—I want to sleep now.'

Her eyes heavily closed again, her mind was wandering. Her troubles had been too much for her then, after all, and had turned her brain. Dr. Graves bent over her and shook her slightly.

'Katherine! Katherine!' he called, 'rouse up—Gaston has come—Gaston is here!'

She sat up and gazed at him, a bewildered look in her eyes,

'Who calls?' she asked, 'Oh, Dr. Graves is it you! Where am I? is papa sick again? Why, this isn't—' She looked around, memory seemed slowly struggling back. 'Yes, I know now,—this is Mr. Otis house—Gaston is here.' She rose up suddenly, fully herself. 'I am going away, and I want to see Gaston. How is he to night; Mrs. Otis?'

'Much as he has been from the first, Miss Dangerfield—little better, little worse.'

'But he will not die? Mr. Otis, you told me he would not die!'

'I think he will not I have seen worse cases recover. It is a sort of concussion of the brain. He does not suffer or, at least is conscious of no suffering.'

'Thank heaven for that!' she said softly. 'May I see him at once now, and alone? I don't know when I will see him again; and, Mr. Otis, you have been so kind, will you take care of him till he is quite well again? I can't pay you now—I am poor—but some day, if I live, I will.'

'I need no pay. For your sake, Miss Dangerfield, I will care for him gladly. I would cherish a dog that had been yours.'

She held out her hand to him with the old bright grace.

'Thank you. I knew I might trust you. I must go before it gets too late, Please take me to him at once.'

He led her to the chamber door. White, cold, and motionless, in the fast fading day light, Gaston Dantree lay. She had not seen him since that fatal wedding night, and now she saw him again—thus. She stood an in instant, then she entered and closed the door. They heard the soft rustle of her dress as she knelt beside the bedside, then silence fell.

No one spoke. The moments passed, the night had entirely shut down, the wind howled through the desolate churchyard, whose ghostly gravestones they could see glancing in the darkness. A hushed expectation held them—of what they knew not—a strange, prophetic awe. Mrs. Otis was the first to move. The mantel clock struck six, she turned softly and lit the lamp, and stood waiting again.

Five minutes—ten—no sign, no sound from that inner room. Fifteen—twenty—the two men looked at each other uneasily. Twenty-five—thirty. Then Dr. Graves spoke,

'She has been there long enough. It is no place for her in her present state. Mrs. Otis, do you go and tell her to come out.'

The little widow, full of foreboding, tiptoed to the door, and tapped. No answer. A second tap, louder; still no reply. A third tap—louder this time, but the only answer profoundest silence.

'Open the door, mother!' called the voice of her son, sounding strange and husky—'open at once!'

Mrs. Otis obeyed—ever so little at first, and not looking in.

... enter?'

Still no response. Then she opened the door wide, and recoiled with a cry.

'Henry, the child has fallen—she has fainted!'

Henry Otis was in the room before the words were spoken. Katherine was lying on her face on the floor by the bedside, where she had softly fallen. In one second she was uplifted in Henry Otis' arms and borne into the light. Her head fell limp over her arm, her eyes were closed, her features rigid. He laid her upon a sofa—the two doctors bent over her—one with his hand on her heart, the other on her pulse. The heart lay still, the pulse beat no longer. Rigid, white, stark she lay, already growing cold.

'Oh, Henry, speak!' his mother cried. 'Doctor Graves, tell me, has she fainted?'

The elder doctor removed his hand from her heart, and stood up very pale himself in the lamplight.

'Not fainted, madam,' he said quietly: 'dead!'

Sir Peter Dangerfield sat alone in the library at Scarswood, the silken curtains were drawn, firelight and lamplight made the room brilliant, his purple easy chair was drawnup before a writing table littered with deeds and documents, and Sir Peter in gold bowed spectacles, was trying to read.

Trying—not reading. For ever between him and the parchment page, a face menacing and terrible kept coming—the face of Katherine, as he had seen her last.

Where was Katherine? Dead or alive, she had sworn to be revenged Was she dead? He shuddered through all his little craven soul and heart at the thought. Men had looked at him darkly and askance all day, and turned coldly away from him while he spoke. There had been whispers of sucide. What if while he sat here in his warm, lighted, luxurious room, she lay stark and frozen under the stars dead by her own hand?

There was a tall, smoke-coloured bottle on another table, with glasses. He was usually a very anchorite for abstemiousness, but he sprang up now, with a muttered oath, filled him self a stiff glass of brandy, and drained it at a draught.

'I wish to heaven I had given her that infernal three thousand, and be hanged to it!' he muttered, flinging himself back sulkily in the chair. 'Curse the luck! What's the use of a title and a fortune if a fellow's life is to be badgered out of him in this way There's that greedy little devil, Mrs. Vavasor, not a penny would she throw off. And now there's Katherine. I wish I hadn't said what I did to her. If they ever find—I mean if they find her—I'll give her that three thousand if she takes it, and have done with the whole confounded thing. But she's so confoundedly proud that likely she'll turn cantankerous and refuse. There's no pleasing a woman anyway, refuse it and you insult her, offer her it and you insult her more.

Oh, come in, whoever you are, and be hanged to you!'

This pleasant concluding adjuration was in response to a rap at the door. A tall, serious foot man in purple plush breeches and white stockings appeared.

'Dr. Graves, Sir Peter,' spake this majestic menial, and vanished.

Sir, Peter arose, as Dr. Graves, hat in hand very pale and solemn of visage, stood before him. News of Katherine at last. He grasped the back of his chair with one hand, and faced his visitor almost defiantly, as one whoshould say 'whatever has happened I at least have had nothing to do with it.'

'Well, sir?, he demanded.

'Sir Peter Dangerfield, I bring news of—Katherine. She is found.'

The little barnet's heart gave a great leap. Found, then she had not committed suicide.

'Ah!' he said, with a look of sulky injury. 'I knew as much. I thought she wasn't the sort of girl to take arsenic or throw herself into the nearest mill stream. So she's found is she. And where has she been pray since she ran away from Scarswood?'

He resumed his chair, folded his arms and looked up at his visitor. But still Dr. Graves kept that face of supernatural solemnity.

'When she ran away from Scarswood, Sir Peter, she went to her old nurse in Bracken Hollow. About three hours ago, while I was at Ottis' cottage, seeing that unlucky chap, Dantree, she came.'

'She did! To see Dantree, too, I suppose. Extremely forgiving of her, I must say, but not in the least like Katherine Dangerfield. Perhaps she is going to turn romantic sick nurse to her wounded cavalier, and end by getting him to marry—'

'Stop, Sir Peter Dangerfield!' the old doctor said hoarsely: 'not another word. Katherine Dangerfield will never marry Gaston Dantree or any other mortal man. She is dead.'

'Dead!' Sir Peter leaped from his chair as though he had been speared.

'Dead, Graves! Good God! I thought you said—I thought—'

His white lips refused to finish the sentence; he stood staring with horror-struck eyes at the elder man.

'Yes, Sir Peter—dead! Of heart disease, no doubt, latent and unsuspected This is how it happened:—She came to see Dantree before leaving Castleford—those where her words. She looked shockingly ill and haggard, and her mind seemed to wander a little. She fell into a sort of stupor as she sat before the fire and complained of her head. We aroused her after a little time, and she went into the sick room. She shut the door, and we heard her kneel down. There was a long silence; so long, so profound, that we grew alarmed. Mrs. Otis knocked again and again at the door, and received no answer, Then we opened it and went in. She had fallen on her face and was stone dead.'

'Great Heaven!'

'She must have been dead some already growing cold. I left her there when I found life utterly extinct, and nothing more possible to be done, and came here. It is shocking, Sir Peter—it is horrible. And only yesterday, as it were, this house was all alight for the wedding.'

And then the old doctor's voice broke, and he turned his back abruptly on Sir Peter and faced the fire.

Dead silence fell. The clock ticked, the cinders dropped, Dr. Graves looked fixedly into the coals, and Sir Peter sat stiff and upright in his chair quite ghastly to look at.

'Dead or alive, I will be revenged.' The horrible words rang in his ear like his own death knell. They meant nothing, perhaps; they were but the passionate, impotent rage of an outraged woman, who knew his cowardly nature to the full, but they did their work. Katherine was dead! and Katherine was vindictive enough to carry her hatred and revenge into that world of shadows whither she had gone, and come back from her grave and pursue him. Greater and wiser than poor little Sir Peter Dangerfield have devoutly believed in ghosts; he was superstitious to the core. And Katherine was dead—dead—dead! Great, heavy drops stood on his pinched, palid face, and his voice was husky as he spoke:

'Dr. Graves, there must be some mistake here—there must. She could not die in that way; it is too horrible—and she was so young; and so strong; never sick a day in her life, by George. Oh, it is impossible, you know; entirely impossible. It is a fit or a faint, if you like, not death. Let us go back and see what can be done for her; I will go with you. Let us be off at once. I tell you she can't be dead. I don't want her to die, It is a prolonged fainting fit, doctor; take my word for it; nothing more. Strong, healthy girls like Katherine don't drop off in a minute like that.'

'Sir Peter,' the old physician the old physician said quietly, 'I am sixty-five years of age, and for the past forty years I have seen death in all its phases—lingering and instantaneous. And I tell you she is dead. But we will go to her, as you say; you can convince yourself with your own eyes.

But still Sir Peter would not be convinced, would not, could not 'make her dead.' He hurried from the room, changed his dress, ordered round his horses, and in fifteen minutes the two men were galloping full speed through the keen frosty night into Castleford.

The town laid hushed and dark; it was close upon eleven now, neither spoke a word; the breathless pace did not admit of talk. They reached the Otis' cottage, its whole front lit, and figures flitted rapidly to and fro.

And Peter Dangerfield's heart under his riding coat was throbbing so rapidly, he turned sick and reeled dizzily for an instant, as he sprang from the saddle. The next he rallied and followed his leader in.

On the sofa in the little sitting-room where they had first placed her, Katherine still lay. They had removed her hat and cloak, and loosened all her clothes, but over that rigid face the solemn seal of eternal sleep had fallen. They had closed her eyes and crossed her pulseless hands, and calmly as though sleeping, and fairer than ever in life, she lay. The haggard look had all gone, and a great calm lay upon it.

Sir Peter Dangerfield saw her again.

There were three persons in the room. Beside Otis and his mother, the old ex-Indian nurse from Bracken Hollow, sad, gaunt and gray, sat close by her nursling swaying ceaselessly to and fro, and uttering a sort of moaning cry, like a dumb creature in pain. She lifted her inflamed eyes and fixed them with savage hatred upon the palid face of the baronet.

'Ay,' she said bitterly; 'you are a fine gentle, now, little Peter Dangerfield, and you do well to come and look at your handiwork; for you are her murderer, you and that lying, false faced villain lying yonder, as sure as ever men were murderers.—The law won't hang you, I suppose, but it has hung men who deserved it less. I wonder you aren't afraid to look at her; afraid she will rise up from her death-bed and accuse you.'

He turned his tortured face toward her, quite horrible to see in its fear and ghastliness.

'For heaven's sake, hush,' he said, I never meant this, I never thought she would die. I would give all I am worth to bring her back to life. I could not help it—I would not have had it happen for worlds. Don't drive me mad with your talk.'

'Liar!' old Hannah cried, towering up and confronting him; double liar and coward. Who refused her her dying father's bequest? who offered her the deadliest and most dastardly insult it is possible to offer woman? and you say you are sory, and ask me not to drive you mad. I tell you if the whole town rose up and stoned you, it would not be half your deserts. I say again, I wonder that, dead as she lies there before you, she does not rise to accuse her murderer. Mr. Henry Ottis, this is your house, and she thought you her friend. Show yourself her friend now, and turn her murderer out!'

'Hannah, Hannah, hush?' interrupted Mrs. Ottis, scandalized and alarmed. Whatever Sir Peter might be, it was not in this good woman's nature to do other than reverence to the lord of Scarswood, the man of eigth thousand a year.

But her son stepped forward—pale, cold, stern.

'Hannah's right, mother,' he said, 'and he shall go. Sir Peter Dangerfield, this house is no place for you. You have come here and convinced yourself she is dead—driven to it by you and that man yonder, He is beyond the pale of justice—you are not and by Heaven you shall go!' He threw wide the house door, his dark eyes flashing, and pointing out into the darkness. 'Go, Sir Peter, and never set foot across this threshold of mine again. She turned to me in that hour, and she is mine now—mine, Go!—you coward, you robber and insulter of helpless girlhood, and come here no more!'

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

FEES AND DOCTORS.—The fees of doctors is an item that very many persons are interested in just at present. We believe the schedule for visits is $8.00, which would tax a man confined to his bed for a year, and need of daily visits, over $1,000 a year for medical attendance alone! And one single bottle of Hop Bitters taken in time would save the $1,000 and all the year's sickness—Post

GOVERNOR GENERAL'S SPEECH.

OTTAWA, Feb. 9.

The speaker took the chair at 2.40.

On the arrival of his Excellency he assumed the throne, and read the speech as follows:—

SPEECH FROM THE THRONE:

"Honourable Gentlemen of the Senate:
"Gentlemen of the House of Commons:

"The hope I expressed at the close of the last session that on the re-assembling of Parliment we should be able to congratulate ourselves on a season of peace and prosperity has been fully realized. Canada has been favoured with a year of great prosperity. Her farmers have enjoyed a plentiful harvest and remunerative prices. Her manufacturing and other industries have been, and continue to be, developed under favourable auspices. Her trade and commerce have been steadily increasing, and peace and order prevail within her borders. For these various Blessings we cannot be sufficiently thankful to the Giver of all good things.

DEATH OF PRESIDENT GARFIELD.

"The Chief Magistrate of the United States has been cut off by the hand of an assassin, and it is fitting that the sorrow of our people for a loss which was not that of our friends and neighbours alone should be here adverted to as another instance of the sympathy which unites in brotherhood the British Empire and the American Republic.

THE NORTH WEST.

"During the recess I had the pleasure of visiting the Province of Manitoba, and of traversing the extensive prairies of the North-West, and from personal examination can sincerely congratulate Canada on the possesion of so magnificent and fertile a region, to be inhabited, I trust, in the course of years by millions of thriving, and contented subjects of her Majesty. The immigrants have not confined themselves to Manitoba or its vicinity, but are scattered over the country westward to the base of the Rocky Mountains, and from the international boundary to the banks of the Northern Saskatchewan. It is therefore thought that the time has come for the division of the territories into four or more provisional districts, with appropriate nomenclature. This subject will be submitted for your consideration.

CONDITION OF THE INDIANS.

"During my journey I was met by numerous Indian tribes, all expressing confidence in the continuance of the traditional policy of kindness and justice which has hitherto governed the aborigines. I regret, however, to say that the necessity of supplementing the food supply of the Indians still exists, and is likely to continue for some years. Every exertion has been made to settle the Indian bands on reserves, and to induce them to betake themselves to the raising of cattel and cultivating the soil. These efforts have met with a fair measure of success, but we can only expect; by a long continuance of patient firmness, to induce these children of the prairie and the forest to abandon their nomadic habits, become self-supporting, and ultimately add to the industrial wealth of the country. The influx of a white population has greatly increased the danger of collision between the settler and the red man, and in my opinion renders an augmentation of the Mounted Police a matter of urgency.

CIVIL SERVICE REFORM.

"The report of the commission appointed to investigate the existing system of the Civil Service will be laid before you, and a measure on the subject sumitted for your considoration.

READJUSTMENT OF REPRESENTATION.

"The decennial census having been taken last year, the duty of reconsidering and readjusting the representation in the House of Commons is imposed upon you. A measure for the purpose will be laid before you.

PUBLIC MATTERS.

"Several other measures of importance will be submitted to you. Among them will be bills for the winding up of Insolvent Banks, Insurance Companies, and Trading Corporations; for the consolidation and amendment of the laws respecting the Dominion lands; for the amendment of the Acts relating to the Supreme Court of Canada; and bills relating to the tenure of office of the judges of country courts, and to fugitive offenders within the Empire; and your attention will be called to the present anomalous position of the vice-admiralty jurisdiction.

CANADA PACIFIC RAILWAY.

"The work of construction on that portion of the Canada Pacific railway between Prince Arthur's Landing and Winnipeg is being pressed to completion; and it is confidently expected that in July next railway communication will be established between these places. The section between Rat Portage and Winnipeg, one hundred and thirty-five miles in length, has been completed and transferred under the terms of the contract to the Canada Pacific Railway Company, by whom it is now operated. Considerable progress has been made ... and ... vigorous prosecution of the work on that portion of the line during the present year provided for. In British Columbia the work upon the section between Savona's Ferry and Emory's Bar is being carried on with every prospect of its completion within the time specified in the contract; and the line from the latter place to Port Moody, which has been carefully located during the past season is now being placed under contract, with a view to its completion at the same date as the section from Savona's Ferry to Emory's Par. Upon the sections to be constructed by the railway company the work has been most energetically carried forward. During the past summer the road has been graded for the distance of 318 miles, and of this 161 miles are completed and open for traffic. The company have in addition graded eighty-nine miles of branch lines.

INTERCOLONIAL RAILWAY.

"I am pleased to be able to state that the traffic on the Intercolonial railway has largely increased, and that this line was during the last fiscal year, for the first time in its history, worked without expense to the country.

WELLAND CANAL.

"The works on the Welland canal were so far advanced that the waters of Lake Erie were introduced for its supply in June last, and in September the new portion of the canal between Allanburg and port Dalhousie was opened for traffic.

TRADE WITH BRAZIL.

"You will be pleased to know that a monthly line of steamers, which has been subsidized under the authority of Parliament, is now playing between the Dominion and Brazil with good hopes of a mutually profitable trade.

FACTORY LABOUR.

"The report of the Royal Commission issued to enquire into the question of factory labour, and into the best means of promoting the comfort and well being of the workingman and his family, without undue interference with the development of our manufacturing industries, will be laid before you, and I invite your earnest consideration of this report.

"Gentlemen of the House of Commons:

"The accounts of the last year will be laid before you. It will be satisfactory to you to find that the expenditure has been less and the revenue considerably more than the estimates of last year, leaving a surplus of over four millions of dollars A portion of this sum has been used in the reduction of the public debt by the redemption of matured debentures bearing six per cent. interest, and the remainder applied to the payment for public works chargeable to capital account. The necessity of issuing the debenture loan authorized by Parliament for these purposes has therefore been obviated. The estimates of the ensuing year will also be submitted, and will, I trust, be found to have been framed with due regard to economy and the efficiency of the public service.

"Honorable Gentlemen of the Senate:
"Gentlemen of the House of Commons:

I now invite your attention to the general business which will come before you, with full confidence in your ability and patriotic desire to forward the best interests of the country."

After his Excellency had withdrawn the following new Senators were introduced and took their seats:—Hon. D. McInnes, Hamilton; Hon. Mr Ogilvie, Montreal; Hon. Mr. McKay, Colchester; and Hon. Mr. Skead, Ottawa.

It was decided that the address should be moved to-morrow, the House to meet at 3:30.

The House then adjourned.

The address in the Senate will be moved by Hon. D. McInnes, and seconded by Hon. Mr. Ogilvie.

"WHAT EVERY ONE SAYS MUST BE TRUE."

And every one who has tested its merits speaks warmly in praise of Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam as a positive cure for all throat and lung complaints coughs and colds, sore throat, bronchitis, and incipient consumption.

A Jerseyman having a cow with only one eye bought a glass one from an animal stuffer, and put it into the cavity. One day he sold it to a cattle dealer for $40 and a keg of cider. Subsequently he followed the dealer and took the cow away from the stable, where she had been stowed for the night, and put her glass eye into his pocket. The dealer had him arrested for stealing. The accuser asked him if his cow had two eyes. "Certainly," said the dealer. The cow was brought, and, to the dealer's astonishment, proved to have only one eye, The cow was handed over to its former owner, who took her home. He played that trick several times—often enough to get money to pay his election expenses when he ran for sheriff. Subsequently the cow had a calf, and the calf had a glass eye just like its mother's. So the Jerseyman said.

A REAL NECESSITY.

No house should be without a bottle of Hagyard's Yellow Oil, in case of accidents. There is no preparation offered to suffering humanity that has made so many permanent cures, or relieved so much pain and misery. It is called by some the Good Samaritan, by others the Cure-all, and by the afflicted an Angel of Mercey.

An important instalment of women's rights ... of full legal age at twenty-one came into force with the new year. In many cantons the age of majority for men has hitherto been as high as twenty-six; and, as women were altogether denied majority, no matter how old they were, the number of "wards" were very great. The duty of guardianship in most cases devolved on the communes, which now have been relieved of much thankless labor; and for the future Swiss women at home and abroad, whether unmarried, married, or widows, will be civilly emancipated on their twenty-first birthdays. In the town of Saint Gall alone fortunes to the amount of upward of ten millions of francs were transferred to women; formerly in wardship, under the new law, on New Year's day.

REVOLUTIONIZING "TIME."

SANDFORD FLEMING'S ARGUMENT.

The gigantic system of railways and telegraphs which has been established in America, has created social and commercial conditions which never previously existed in the history of the human race. These conditions have affected the relations of time and distance, in a manner which shows that a system of notation which we have inherited is defective; that it leads to confusion, causes loss of time, and disturbs the arrangement of travellers and business men; that it frequently results in loss of life, and leads to difficulties of various kinds; that under the circumstances which have followed the extensive employment of steam and electricity as means of rapid communication, it is generally inappropriate. This question has of late became a matter of great public importance, and attention is seriously directed to the simplest and best means of removing an impediment to commerce and general intercourse. The system which we follow which has been followed for ages, quite unobjectionable half a century ago, when the electric telegraph was unknown and the horse was almost the only locomotive. The system is based on the theory that time is regulated everywhere by the passage of the sun over the meridian of each separate locality; that the period between any two solar passages, at any given place, is divided into halves, known as anti-meridian and past-meridian, each half being divided into twelve hours, and that the two halves together constitutes a day. According to the recognized theory, as already stated, every spot on the surface of the globe differing in longitude has a time peculiar to itself. Except on the same meridian there are no simultaneous days, or hours, or minutes. Everywhere the days and divisions of the day vary, and the variations are infinite. In the case of North America the continent extends across one hundred and five degrees of longitude. Within its extreme eastern and western limits it is possible to draw many thousands and distinct meridians, and following rapidly the prescribed theory we may have as many thousand standards of time, not two of which would be in harmony. The railway authorities have done face to face with the difficulty, and they have from time to time met it as circumstances dictated. In order to operate the long lines of railway with some degree of safety, each separate manager has been obliged to ignore the different local times, and arbitrarily adopt a special time for the movement of trains on the special lines under his charge. The railway guide books publish at least seventy-five regular chosen standards of time, employed for the running of trains in the United States and Canada. Every city and town of importance has its own time, occasionally coinciding, but frequently differing from the nearest railway standard. The public have been obliged to accommodate themselves to this irregular system, but it has become exceedingly inconvenient and irksome, and a scheme which will introduce a time system characterized by uniformity and simplicity cannot fail to be cordially welcomed. For the reason stated an earnest movement has began in America with the view of establishing reform in time-reckoning. The question is engaging the attention of the Canadian Institute of Science, the American Meteorological Society, the American Society of Civil Engineers, the American Association for the Advancement of Science, and other Societies. The community generally and the great railway and telegraphic interests are being awaked to its importance. It is felt that the question is one in which all countries have an interest, and although it has presented itself, perhaps more prominently in America than elsewhere, it is eminently desirable that Americans should take no narrow view of a scientific matter of world-wide interest. It is held by those who have seriously considered the subject, that a solution of the problem which would be good for America would be advantageous to other countries. It is considered that in introducing a reform in time-reckoning in North America the system should be such as would commend itself generally; that it should be one which by its appropriativeness and simplicity would have every prospect of being adopted ultimately throughout the world. A highly important feature of the movement is to employ every means to render the system generally acceptable, so that whenever the necessity may arise in any other community for its introduction, it may be spontaneously adopted; a course calculated to secure ultimate and complete uniformity in all countries. I shall give in brief an outline of a proposition for defining and regulating civil time which is favored in many quarters in Canada and in the United States of America.

1. It is proposed to establish one standard time which will be common to all people throughout the world for communication by land and sea for all ordinary purposes, for synchronous observations and for all scientific purposes. This standard time is to be known as "Cosmopolitan Time."

2. Cosmopolitan time to be based on the diurnal revolutions of the earth as determined by the (mean) sun's passage over one particular meridian to be selected as a time-zero.

3. The time-zero to coincide with the prime meridian to be common to all nations for computing longtitude.

4. The time-zero and prime meridian for the world to be established with the concurrence of civilized nations generally.

5. Twenty-four secondary or standard hour meridians to be established, fifteen degrees or one hour distant from each other, the first being fifteen degrees from the prime meridian.

PROTON COUNCIL.

SPECIAL MEETING.

Municipal Council of Proton met at McCullough's Hotel on Feb. 6th inst., to take into consideration a petition presented to confirm the agreement between the Grand Trunk and T. G. & B. Railways.

It was moved by Mr. Agnew, seconded by Mr. Robinson, that the petition presented be signed and sealed on behalf of the Council by the Reeve.—Car.

Council adjourned to 7th March.

RIVERVIEW, MELANCTHON.

From our Correspondent.

On the evening of Wednesday, the 8th inst., in connection with the Methodist Church, one of the most successful entertainments of the season was held. The church was filled to its utmost capacity. After tea being served, Mr. Brown was appointed chairman, and addresses were delivered by the Rev. Mr. Potter, Dundalk, and Mr. Deans, Shelburne, both addresses were excellent and well delivered, being most suitable for the occasion. Messrs. Carey and Thompson sung some very choice pieces. A reading by Mr. C Graham, Dundalk, was well recieved, also, a recitation by J. J. Crombie, which was well rendered, and the excellent singing of Mr. Daniel Strachan, contributed much toward the success of the evening. We were much pleased to see so many young people from Dundalk, and very thankful to them for services rendered. Proceeds amounted to about $50.

SOLD AGAIN—BUT NOT BY ST. JACOB.

To the Editor.

This time the sell was on the wood question, and thinking others might be in the same fix, with your permission I would like to give shape to a few thoughts on the subject.

Farmers, as a class, have long been proverbial for honesty, the many stories about grain frauds, etc., to the contrary notwithstanding, but whether it arises from the increasing intercourse held between them and the villagers whereby they are becoming contaminated or not, I shall not pretend to say. However, I have come to the conclusion that it is best to watch even a farmer to see that you get what you buy.

Two classes of wood are supposed to be broungt into market, namely, green and dry wood. Now, when green wood sells at 75c to 80c per cord, dry wood, as a rule, brings $1, which gives the seller a return of from 25 to 33 per cent. on the outlay, to say nothing of the difference in drawing, which will add from 5 to 10 more according to distance, this, I think, ought to satisfy even the rapacious business man, yet to make the matter a little better, a third class of wood is introduced, and being somewhat at a loss for a proper name for it, a friend "who knows how it is himself," aptly suggested sunburnt wood. this class is produced according to the spirit of the times by an improved process. In the winter or early spring a quantity of logs are cut, and perhaps skided up and perhaps not. In some cases they are cut up with the machine and thrown in a heap, and thus left in the log until after seeding or perhaps after harvest, thus by the retention of the sap and the absorption of rain becoming water-soaked, and sawed and split up at most convenient times, and delivered next winter as purporting to be dry wood, but which the consumers find to be an article on which the average green wood would be a great improvement. The first requisite in the use of this wood is a sufficiency of other combustibles to raise enough heat to expel the water contained in it, and then burn it up. I will not pretend to say that this article may not have its proper use, like most things in the world, but I will say it is not the article I want on a morning like this (Monday, Jan. 23rd) when the mercury is away down below zero, almost frozen fast.

I was very much amused about a year ago on hearing a gentleman at the dinner table tell of a 50 horse power engine he had run, the steam for which was produced without a boiler, and if this was correct, which of course I will not attempt to deny, it strikes me that this must have been the class of fuel used, as it seems to contain in itself all the elements necessary. However, it is my humble opinion that consumers should shut right down on it. Your humble servant will not be caught again, and "don't you forget it." Perhaps if a few of these parties where to have a quantity of this wood thrown back on their hands, it might have some effect in stopping the practice.

Yours, &c.,
ONE WHO WAS TWICE SOLD.

To the Editor.

DEAR SIR,—I take great interest in your paper, and am well pleased with it. I think it the best local paper that is to be had for the price, $1.00 per annum.

I like the politics, or, at least, the firm stand it has taken in regard to politics, that is neutrality, but there is one thing I do not like, I have watched for a year and have not been able to see the Minutes of our Township appear in its columns, and have come to the conclusion to write you and find out if possible the reason. I see the minutes of all other Township Councils on that side of us. viz: Artemesia, Glenelg, Holland, Proton, and Euphrasia, but no Osprey. Now Sir, as the STANDARD has a large circulation in this Township, why not give us the Minutes as well as other Townships. Our Council, I believe, have the Minutes and Proceedings of the Council printed once a year, in phamplet form in connection with the Auditors' Report, this is good as far as it goes, but of course if there is any missdoing, it is too far gone to remedy when the old year is out, together with perhaps the old Council.

I will expect an answer next week, please give it through the columns of the STANDARD so we will all see it, as there are many others desirous of knowing the cause. Yours Truly,

RATEPAYER.

OSPREY, Feb. 10th '82.

the reason we do not publish the minutes of Osprey Council is, we do not have them forwarded to us as we do from other Townships named, therefore, it is not in our power to have them appear in our paper. We would be very much pleased to have them sent us but do know the reason, they are not, herhaps the Council will let you know through the columns of the STANDARD. It is customary for the Clerks of the different Townships to forward a copy of the Minutes of each meeting to the local papers for insertion for which they receive the paper free, and in some cases they are paid extra for writing the minutes for the local papers. But in Osprey the ratepayers have on regular way of finding out even when the meeting of the Council will take place. We are glad to have suggestions thrown out, or questions put which may enable us to make changes or improvements in our paper and would say, let us hear from you again.

KIMBERLY.

Mr. Editor. Perhaps you don't know that we have had a Baptist revival in Kimberly, but such is the fact. It occurred thus: Three young gents and ladies were enjoying a skate upon the rink on the pond, and to vary the sport the ladies seated themselves upon a sleigh, while their male companions hitched themselves up and drew them along the ice. Suddenly when going a good speed, crack went the ice under the gents' feet, but they had sufficient headway to shoot over the spot. Not so with the sleigh with its freight of beauty. On it came and in it went subjecting the young ladies to a involuntary baptism. The three gallants returned and in trying to pull their partners out they broke through and were themselves baptised, some it is said being subjected to the orthodox ceremony of total immersion. Luckily they all got out and went home, as they should after so solemn a ceremony, sadder, wetter, and wiser for the "dip."—Monitor.

HOW TO ESCAPE DIPHTHERIA.

1. Avoid the atmosphere near the disease. Especially is this important for children, whose throats are more liable to take on the poison than those of adults. No matter how mild the case is, keep children away from it.

2. Do not premit any person not even a dog or a cat to come from the room where there is a case of diphtheria. The person exposed to it should disinfect his clothing, and bathe his body, and wash thoroughly his hair, and gargle his throat, before he comes into contact with a child after his coming from the sick room.

3. Do not permit a child to ride in a carriage in which one sick with diphtheria has ridden, until it has first been disinfected.

4. Avoid all causes which cause the throat to become sore, raw, or tender during an epidemic of this disease. In fact it is well to avoid them at all times. A simple sore throat may become a case of diphtheria very easily, when the poison is in the air.

5. Do not allow my child to wear or handle any clothing worn by a person who has had diphtheria. It is criminal to sell or give away clothing of this sort, without most thoroughly disinfecting it first. An epidemic was recently caused in one of the New England States, and many lives lost, from some clothing from a child which died of this disease being sent to friends from a western city.

6. Never kiss a person with diphtheria, mothers have lost their lives by doing this, nor drink from the same cup, nor blow a whistle he has used, nor use a pencil, or a pen, or a handerchief of his.

7. Never send the clothing of a diphtheria patient to the common wash or laundry, where other clothing may become infected.

8. Disinfect all the excretions from one sick of this disease by a strong solution of copperas water before disposing of them.

9. If a child has been exposed to diphtheria by accident, or by any means, at once isolate it from other children, give a thorough warm bath daily, and clean clothes: put it on a diet of brown bread and milk, with fruit, and wait till all danger is over before removing it from quarantine.

Diphtheria poison, no doubt, goes for miles in the air from one house to another. The wind carries it, and when there is an epidemic the greatest precaution should be taken. With all our care we are not always able to prevent its spread entirely, but much may be done.

10. Allow no children to attend a funeral of one who has died from this disease.

The Sesentific American adds: As every physician knows, it is no uncommon thing for adults to have diptheria so mildly that it is mistaken for an ordinary sore throat resulting from cold, yet such a person can easily infect a child, and the child become a centre of malignant infection. In view of the fatal prevalence of diphtheria, therefore, the kissing of a child upon the mouth by a person with a sore throat is hazardous, if not criminal, and scarcely less so is the practice of allowing children to kiss their ailing playmates. It would be wise to exercise great caution in this matter, if not to discontinue the practice of kissing upon the mouth altogether. The best preventions are to be found in the hints given, and in most thorough cleanliness about the house, the air, and the drains, water supply, and cellars.

FROM "THE TIMES."

Editor of the Times:—The statements recently published in your valuable paper has created much excitement in this city among the class who own and use horses, and after reading your request that all should write you who had been benefited by the letter published from Dr. Bates in regard to the remarkable success he always had with Kendalls Spavin Cure, I decided to write you my experience with it. My first knowledge of this remedy came through a visit to the office of the Massachusetts Society for the prevention of cruelty to animals. This society was the first to use Kendalls Spavin Cure in Boston, and I was informed by Charles A. Currier, a gentleman in whom I had the utmost confidence that they had never used anything that worked so well for spavins or any lameness in horses, and he stated that he gave it to poor ... agree to use it, and in this way he was enabled to get along without prosecuting them as it was sure to cure when persevered with. Some time after this I received a very severe injury to the knee joint and the high recommendation which Mr. Currier gave Kendall's Spavin Cure, gave me so much confidence in it that I used it for my knee with the very best of results, and since that time my faith has been so strong in the merits of this remedy that we will not be without it in the house. I have tried it since then for foot-rot, sore teats or warts on my cows teats also for a general liniment for my horses or in my family and I sincerely believe, with all those who have written before, that there never was as good a liniment for both man and beast ever discovered before. Hoping you will continue to give us more light on this subject I am

Very truly yours,
ROB'T. C. AYER.

FATAL CASE OF POISONING BY EATING SPOILT FOOD—VERY LIKE A MURDER.

DURHAM, Feb. 14.—Several members of the family of the Rev. S. A. Asbury, incumbent of Trinity church in this town, recently partook freely of a quantity of deteriorated food, which resulted to-day in the death of Lilian, their youngest daughter. The other members of the family who partook of the food are progressing favavourably.

UEXPECTED SUCCOR.

PROVIDENTIAL ESCAPE OF SHIPWRECKED VOYAGERS.

At 9 o'clock on the morning of the 30th of last December, the steamer Moravian, of the Allan line, bound for Liverpool via Halifax, while on her way from Portland to the latter place, ran ashore on the southwest point of Mud Island, some fifteen miles from the town of Yarmouth, Nova Scotia. A stiff breeze was blowing at the time and a heavy sea running, and the situation was one of peril. It was found that the forward compartments had filled with water and orders were given to lighten cargo while preparations were made to land the passengers on the Island, with a supply of food and clothing. The landing was safely effected, but the cold was intense and some of the party were severely frostbitten. On the ship's manifest was a consignment of St. Jacobs Oil, which the Toronto House of A. Vogelar & Co., of Baltimore, Md., had just shipped to Francis Newberry & Sons, London, to fill English orders. The part it played in the catastrophe is described in the following article, which we quote from the Yarmouth (Nova Scotia) Tribune of January 18th:

"The passengers and crew of of the wrecked steamer Moravian, during their brief encampment at Mud Island, suffered severely from exposure to the weather, and some of them were severely frostbitten. Fortunately, among the lading of the ship was a package of proprietary medicines; more fortunately still, the bulk of these consisted of St. Jacobs Oil, and by the prompt and liberal use of this invaluable remedy, the parties were speedily relieved and all unpleasant after consequence averted."

A PROMINENT ACTOR'S BELIEF.

Mr. Tony Pastor, of New York City, the great humorist and actor, was signally benefited by the Great German Remedy, and felt constrained to testify to its efficacy for the benefit of others suffering in the same way.

OUR SUPPLEMENT.

WE furnish our readers this week a supplement, giving much valuable information in regard to the treatment of our most valuable domestic animals in sickness and their proper management in health. As our space is limited, of course we cannot give you all we would like to of the large amount of knowledge which has been obtained by men who have made our domestic animals a study for centuries, but we have endeavored to give you the very "essence" in these few columns, treating only the most important subjects, and we think this sheet, if preserved, will be of more benefit to many of our readers than two dollars would be if invested in some books we have seen upon this subject and costing that amount. Our aim in sending you this supplement is two-fold. First, we wish to benefit our readers by giving them information through our columns which will be worth more to them than the money they pay us for our paper; and we are firmly convinced that the many points of practical information that we in this condensed form give to you on this sheet will be such information as you will appreciate, and be of lasting good to many. Secondly, we wish to benefit ourselves by making our paper so valuable to you that you will not only continue to subscribe for it yourself, but get your neighbors to send for it also.

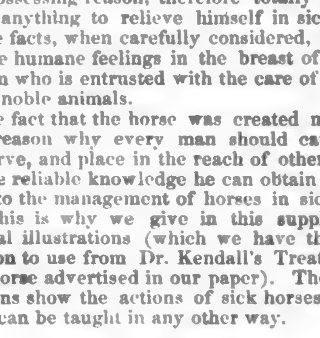
THE HORSE.

THE most valuable and useful of our domestic animals is the horse; and his great value should induce men to treat him well in health, as well as to do all in their power to relieve him when sick; and if we cared nothing for the profit derived by taking good care of the horse with which we may be possessed, we should do it for the grand reason that he was created for our servant, and was made mute, not possessing reason, therefore totally unable to do anything to relieve himself in sickness. These facts, when carefully considered, should arouse humane feelings in the breast of every person who is entrusted with the care of one of these noble animals.

The fact that the horse was created mute is one reason why every man should carefully preserve, and place in the reach of other men, all the reliable knowledge he can obtain in regard to the management of horses in sickness, and this is why we give in this supplement several illustrations (which we have the permission to use from Dr. Kendall's Treatise on the Horse advertised in our paper). The illustrations show the actions of sick horses better than can be taught in any other way.

COLIC IN HORSES.

There are two forms of Colic — spasmodic and flatulent. The former is the most frequent, and the symptoms are familiar to many horse owners. The engravings below show the positions assumed in different stages.



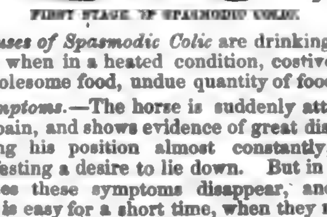
FIRST STAGE OF SPASMODIC COLIC.

Causes of Spasmodic Colic are drinking cold water when in a heated condition, costiveness, unwholesome food, undue quantity of food, etc.

Symptoms.—The horse is suddenly attacked with pain, and shows evidence of great distress, shifting his position almost constantly, and manifesting a desire to lie down. But in a few minutes these symptoms disappear, and the horse is easy for a short time, when they return with increasing severity, until the horse cannot be kept upon his feet.

A cold sweat generally breaks out over the body. The legs and ears remain at about the natural temperature.

He looks around to his flanks, mostly at the right side, as if pointing out the seat of the disease, scrapes the ground with his forward foot, and will almost strike his belly with his hind foot.



SECOND STAGE OF SPASMODIC COLIC.

The horse heaves at the flans; and kicks and rolls, and seems much excited, and sometimes acts as though he wanted to make water, which he cannot do on account of the urethra being spasmodically contracted. This symptom need not be treated (as it frequently is), for, as soon as the horse is relieved of the colic, he will pass water freely. Therefore, follow the treatment we give below and relieve the colic as soon as possible.

THIRD STAGE OF SPASMODIC COLIC.

Treatment.— Relieve the pain by giving one ounce sulphuric ether, two ounces of tincture of opium (laudanum), and a pint of raw linseed oil, and, if not relieved in an hour, repeat the dose. If there is not relief in a reasonable length of time after the second dose is given, some recommend bleeding from six to ten quarts from the neck-vein, but we think it is rarely necessary to do this. Occasionally walk the horse about to excite the bowels to action.

Another excellent remedy, which is always at hand, is one heaping tablespoonful of saleratus mixed with one pint of milk and given at one dose. It would be well to try the saleratus first.

Always begin the treatment as soon as possible.

HEAVES.—BROKEN WIND.

This disease is readily distinguished by nearly every farmer or any person having much to do with horses.

It is most likely to occur among farmers horses, owing to the prevailing habit among this class of feeding large quantities of hay to horses possessing a ravenous appetite.

Clover hay when fed in large quantities for a long time is quite certain to produce this disease.

Heaves are never found in racing stables, where the horses are properly fed; consequently, it is but reasonable to attribute the cause to overfeeding with hay and coarse feed.

Treatment.—Turning out on natural pastures or feeding laxative food will relieve mild cases; but severe cases require much care in feeding and watering.

Hay should only be fed at night, and then only a small quantity which is clean and free from clover and dust.

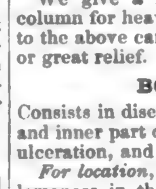
The quantity of grain should be increased, and carrots, beets, potatoes, or turnips, should be given occasionally. Water should be given only before eating, and not after, as is the usual custom. Do not put the horse to work for at least one or two hours after eating.

We give a few good recipes in another column for heaves, which, if given in addition to the above care, will usually result in a cure or great relief.

BONE SPAVIN

Consists in disease of the bones in the lower and inner part of the hock-joint (inflammation, ulceration, and bony deposit).

For location, see cut. In nearly all cases of lameness in the hind leg the seat of disease will be found to be in the hock-joint, although many persons (not having had experience) locate the difficulty in the hip, simply because they cannot detect any swelling of the hock-joint; but in many of the worst cases there is not seen any swelling or enlargement for a long time, and perhaps never.



BONE SPAVIN.

Cause.—The causes of spavins are quite numerous, but usually they are sprains, blows, hard work; and, in fact, any cause exciting inflammation of this part of the joint. Hereditary predisposition in horses is a frequent cause.

Symptoms. — The symptoms vary in different cases. In some horses the lameness comes on very gradually, while in others, it comes on more rapidly.

It is usually five to eight weeks before any enlargement appears.

There is marked lameness when the horse starts out, but he usually gets over it after driving a short distance, and if allowed to stand for a while will start lame again.

The horse will stand on either leg in resting in the stable, but when he is resting the lame leg, he stands on the toe.

If the joint becomes consolidated the horse will be stiff in the leg, but may not have much pain.

Treatment.—If much heat is found in the spavin, we recommend cold applications to reduce the inflammation; after this has been accomplished, the treatment should begin. Spavin has been considered incurable in the past, until the discovery of Kendall's Spavin Cure, which is now considered by the best veterinary surgeons and the most prominent horse men in this country to be the most important discovery in the veterinary science of the nineteenth century, and as the far-famed remedy is advertised in this supplement, we refer all interested in this subject to the advertisement, as the application of this remedy would, undoubtedly, be the best treatment possible after reducing the heat.

PNEUMONIA (Lung Fever).

Acute congestion of the lungs is always the first stage of this disease, which passes on to active inflammation of the substance of the lungs, while in bronchitis the air passages only are inflamed.

Symptoms. — The horse will oftentimes have a discharge from the nostrils, following a sudden exposure to cold, after being kept in a warm stable, and then the disease is ushered in by a chill, followed by fever, which is increased for a short time: cold legs and ear, quick and wiry pulse, quick and difficult breathing, pain in the chest, which is aggravated by coughing, and a quivering of the muscles of the side and breast.

The horse will not eat, and continually stands with his head down, and ears lopped, and will not lie down nor move about; the nostrils are expanded. If the ear is applied to the side of the chest or neck a peculiar creaking noise is heard.

Cause. — Perhaps one of the most frequent causes is a hard or fast drive against a cold wind, after being taken from a warm, tight, and poorly ventilated stable, where several horses have remained through the night; or some different alteration and sudden change of heat, cold, or moisture in an animal not accustomed to work, or in one not in proper condition to work.

Treatment. — The stable should be a comfortable place; not too cold, and yet well ventilated. Give the horse clothing according to the weather, but do not change from a heavy blanket to a light one, nor to one that is damp. Keep the legs warm with bandages.

Give twenty-five drops of the tincture of aconite root in a cupful of cold water, and repeat the dose every few hours, until five or six doses have been given, which will probably cause the horse to perspire freely. Care should be taken not to allow the horse to stand in a draft of air. Do not bleed, as some recommend.

After the horse has taken sufficient tincture of aconite root, as soon as he seems to have an appetite for food, a pint of crushed oats, thoroughly scalded, may be given during the day. Great care should be taken not to allow the horse a large amount of food at one time, which would overload the stomach, and might cause a return of the disease. Little and often must be the rule at first, and then the quantity may be increased, while the frequency is diminished. Do not give any hay for several days.

Raw eggs, and other nourishing and stimulating articles, may be given, if the horse shows signs of great weakness. The nourishment should be in a concentrated form, and hay and grass should be kept from the horse for a few days, and then given in quantities small at first and gradually increased. The horse will not lie down until improvement has taken place.

RING-BONE.

This is a bony growth on the pastern bones, as shown in the cut, and usually begins in inflammation of the membranes covering the bones at the points giving attachment to ligaments.

RING-BONE.
1. The joint between the pastern bones.
2. The joint between the lower pastern (or small pastern) and the coffin bone.

It is the result, generally, of hereditary predisposition, weakness, or of a peculiar formation of the pastern joints, which makes them poorly adapted to hard work.

Symptoms. — The lameness may be very great, if the bone or joint is inflamed to considerable extent, or it may be almost entirely absent. The lameness usually increases with exercise, or if used on hard or stony ground. The enlargement may be only slight on the inner or outer side of one of the pastern bones, or the whole pastern region may be enlarged.

Treatment. — If the horse is very lame, you will probably find much heat and inflammation in the part, which should be reduced by constant applications of cold water for several hours, and as the cold applications are discontinued, we know of no remedy so liable to effect a cure as the Kendall's Spavin Cure, advertised on this supplement.

In old or bad cases which do not yield to the above treatment so as to show signs of improvement in two or three weeks, we would recommend to send to the proprietors of the Cure for the Blister which they prepare especially to be used with the Cure in such cases. The horse should have a few weeks' rest after the cure seems to be complete. This is, without doubt, the best treatment that could be given.

RHEUMATISM.

This painful disease is a peculiar form of inflammation of the joints, tendons, and muscles, and often shifts from place to place. In acute rheumatism there is great excitement and fever, with severe pain in the legs and joints. The pain is so severe that the horse hardly dares to move from the place he occupies, on account of the extreme pain which it causes. He has no unnatural heat in the feet, as in founder.

Cause. — Exposure to a draft of cold air when a horse has been heated, thus suddenly checking perspiration.

Treatment. — Place the horse in a good, comfortable stable, as soon as possible after it is discovered that he is afflicted with acute rheumatism, and commence the following treatment: Give the horse about twenty-five drops of the tincture of aconite root every four hours, until five or six doses have been given.

Cover with a blanket, and give the horse general good care. Give the following powders as soon as the tincture of aconite has been given: Bicarbonate of soda, four ozs.; sulphur, eight ozs.; saltpetre, powdered, four ozs. Mix, and divide into eight powders, and give two or three times a day, according to the severity of the case, and repeat, if necessary.

Apply Kendall's Spavin Cure to the joints, or to any part which swells or is tender.

Chronic Rheumatism. — This is a frequent cause of lameness, and it is oftentimes quite difficult to decide fully as to the cause of the lameness.

Treatment. — For this form of the disease, we recommend the same powders as given above for acute rheumatism, only to be continued a longer time, and to apply the Kendall's Spavin Cure to the afflicted parts. Only a small quantity need be used at a time, but it should be rubbed well down to the skin, and continued for several weeks, if it should be necessary to continue so long. The Kendall's Spavin Cure, used twice a day, is also the best external remedy we know of for this disease in man; but it should be used for some time, as the disease, when of long standing, cannot be cured in a few days. It may be applied a small quantity at a time, and continued for one to three or four weeks, if necessary.

VALUABLE SUGGESTIONS.

Health of Horses. — To care for the comfort and health of horses should be the first thing to be considered when building or repairing a horse stable. Pure air and sufficient light should be given in all stables when possible. To secure a constant supply of pure air horses require more cubic space than is generally allowed them, both in height of stable and number of square feet of floor allowed each horse. Proper ventilation is a very important item in the general make-up of the stable. When practicable put windows into the south side of the stable to allow the horses to get the benefit of sunshine.

How to Feed Horses. — The question how to feed horses seems at first thought like one of no importance, but if well considered our readers will find it to be one of very great importance. Want of space will preclude our giving minute direction. Horses used where fast work or travelling on the road is required should not be fed only a small quantity of hay in the morning and at noon, with a good allowance of grain; but at night a much larger quantity of hay may be given with less grain than at morning or noon. The hay used should be sweet and clean, never giving musty or very dusty hay to a horse. Clover hay is very bad for the horse, being quite liable to cause heaves if fed to any considerable extent. Horses used about slow work can be allowed a larger amount of hay. One good feed of six quarts of potatoes once a week, at night, is very valuable. Oats is the grain which is best adapted to the wants of the horse under all circumstances.

Watering Horses. — All horses are quite liable to drink more after eating than is required to replenish the waste; and, besides this, it has been ascertained that, when water is drank by horses, a large share of it passes directly through the stomach, and on into the large intestines, where no digestion takes place; and that, if a horse is allowed to drink directly after eating, that a portion of the food is carried along with it, which of course can then do no good, but liable to do some injury. Therefore we say, always water horses before feeding, and you will find they will do better, drive better, sweat less, etc., and will drink all that nature demands, as soon as they become accustomed to this habit.

Signs of Intelligence in the Horse. — The head, being the location in which the brain is seated, is the best indicator of the disposition. For signs of temper or intelligence, look at the eye and formation of the head. Breadth and fullness between the ears and eyes is a sign of intelligence, and, with a pleasant eye, indicates a good disposition. A horse with a rounding nose, tapering narrow forehead, and a broad, full place below the eyes, is always treacherous and mischievous.

OSWEGO, ILL., Feb. 1, 1881.

DR. B. J. KENDALL & CO.:—

Gents,—I am much pleased with the Horse Book you sent me. I find that the engravings show the positions assumed in diseases better than can be taught in any other way. I also find a number of valuable receipts in it. I would not give my book for a great deal if I could not get another, and I enclose $1.00, for which please send me five more copies.

Yours truly,
LEONARD BOWER.

This little book during the short time since its original publication has been recognized as one of the most reliable authorities on everything pertaining to the condition or treatment of the horse, while its low price places it within the reach of every one who owns or has the care of these animals. The best evidence of its popularity is the immense sale with which it has met with; over 1,500,000 have been published and sold in all parts of the United States. Hundreds of testimonials to the efficacy of the treatment advised can be shown, and in many cases a reference to this book and prompt following of its advices has saved the lives of valuable animals. It is plain and simple in its terms and can be understood by any body. A distinguished veterinary surgeon, who possesses a library comprising the most costly books on the horse, recently said that he would part with almost any one of them sooner than this inexpensive treatise, which comprises so much.

The above valuable book will be given as a premium to new subscribers who pay in advance, and to all old subscribers paying arrearages and one year in advance, without extra charge.

OUR SUPPLEMENT.

THE SUPERANNUATED HORSE TO HIS MASTER.

The following verses were found in a collection of "Epigrams, etc.," one hundred and fifty years old. The master is said to have been Rev. Mr. Potter, of Scarning, in Norfolk, England.

And must thou fix my doom, sweet master, say?
  And wilt thou kill thy servant, old and poor?
A little longer let me live, I pray;
  A little longer hobble 'round thy door.

For much it glads me to behold this place,
  And house within this hospitable shed;
It glads me more to see my master's face,
  And linger near the spot where I was bred.

For, ah! to think of what we both enjoyed
  In my life's prime, ere I was old and poor,
When from the jocund morn to eve employ'd
  My gracious master on this back I bore.

Thrice told ten years have danc'd on down along,
  Since first these way-worn limbs to thee I gave;
Sweet-smiling years! when both of us were young—
  The kindest master, and the happiest slave.

Nor couldst thou bear to see thy servant bleed,
  Tho' weeping pity has decreed his fate;
Yet, ah! in vain, thy heart for life shall plead,
  If nature has denied a longer date.

Alas! I feel 'tis Nature dooms my death,
  O me! I feel 'tis Pity gives the blow;
Yet ere it falls, ah, Nature! take my breath,
  And my kind master shall no sorrow know.

HINTS FOR HORSE OWNERS.

Sunflower Seed for Horses.—The sunflower seed is very healthy feed for the horse, and should be given in quantities about half a pint a day during the winter and spring, which will cause them to have a sleek coat, and will keep them in good health and spirit. It is considered by many who have tried it to be a preventative of heaves, and several have claimed to have cured heaves with it, as well as coughs and distemper. When used for heaves, mix two bushels of oats and one of the seed, and have it ground, then feed two quarts of the mixture, wet with water, three times a day. Always remember to feed hay and water as we direct in the treatment of heaves in another place.

A Horse's Foot. — A horse with a poor foot is many times almost worthless. One of the most frequent causes of poor feet is in allowing the blacksmith to pare the hoof too much, especially the frog, which never should be pared under any circumstances.

Balky Horses. — The most effectual method of starting a balky horse is to divert his attention so he will forget that he does not wish to draw the load. This may be done in various ways. A stout string twisted around the foreleg, so as to cause some pain, and to stop the circulation for a short time, may have this result. Unhitch the horse from the load, and turn him around rapidly several times until he becomes dizzy. Tie a string around the ear. Give a handful of grass, or a lump of earth or sugar, or, in fact, anything but whipping, which will have the effect to divert the attention so the horse will forget his work.

Bots Destroyed by Feeding Potatoes. — It is claimed by some that bots will not live but a short time if placed in grated potato, and that horses have been relieved from attacks of bots by simply feeding four or six quarts of potatoes. At all events, it is well known that potatoes fed once a week are excellent for horses.

The Quantity of Food Required for a Horse. — For ordinary work, a horse of average size should be fed 12 pounds of oats, or other grain food, and 15 to 18 pounds of good hay; but, if driven on the road, 2 or 3 pounds of hay, morning and noon, and 8 or 10 at night, with the same quantity of grain.

Lice on Cattle, Horses, or Dogs. — To rid an animal of lice, apply a small quantity (the size of an ordinary pill) of mercurial ointment to some part which the animal can not lick.

Charcoal for Fowls. — Place an ear of ripe corn into the fire, and allow it to remain until it has become well charred, and feed this to your fowls. It is much better than ordinary charcoal, and will give health and vigor.

Black-Leg. — This disease attacks young and thriving stock, and usually proves fatal unless seen and treated early. The symptoms are those of plethora, fever, and halting on one limb. Give at once half a pound of epsom salts and a teaspoonful of ginger. It is claimed by some that saltpetre, given occasionally, is a preventative, or, if given in large doses, after the attack, in quantities varying from one to four teaspoonfuls, according to the age, is quite sure to effect a cure.

Hoven, Drum-belly, or Clover Bloat. — This is a bloating of cattle, caused by overfilling the paunch, and in too quick a time, before the stomach has time to act upon it. The symptoms are swelling of the whole left side of the belly.

Treatment should begin as soon as possible by giving, every fifteen minutes, one teaspoonful of pulverized charcoal in a pint of water. If the case should prove to be one which would not yield to the above treatment, then tap the bloated animal by plunging a sharp knife into the left side in a downward and inward direction from a point equally distant from the hip-bone, the last rib and the lateral processes of the backbone. The knife should remain in the opening until a quill can be inserted for the gas to pass through, when it can be withdrawn. Care should be taken not to let go of the quill. A trocar and cannula can usually be obtained from a physician, which is the best instrument that can possibly be obtained for this purpose.

Sulphur for Animals. — When taken internally in quantities of about a teaspoonful once a week with food, sulphur will keep all kinds of animals free from lice, and promotes the general health. One teaspoonful is sufficient for ten or twelve hens, or three or four sheep or pigs. The same quantity of charcoal can be combined with it with good results.

VALUABLE RECEIPTS.

Heaves.

No. 1. — Sunflower seed, 1 bushel; oats, 2 bushels. Mix, and grind together, and feed two quarts of the mixture three times a day. Give hay and water as directed in treating heaves.

No. 2. — Liquorice, elecampane, wild turnip, fenugreek, skunk-cabbage, lobelia, cayenne, and ginger, equal parts of each. Mix, and give a tablespoonful once or twice a day. If the horse refuses to eat it in feed, make it into a ball and give.

No. 3. — Assafoetida, pulverized, 1 ounce; camphor-gum, pulverized, ½ ounce. Mix, and divide into four powders; feed one every other night for a week.

No. 4. — A horseman with whom I am acquainted says he has cured several cases of heaves with oil tar. He gives the ordinary case a teaspoonful every night, or every other night, by pouring it on to the tongue, and then giving some grain, which carries it into the stomach.

He says he has given very bad cases two or three tablespoonfuls at a dose, with grand results.

He reports it to be the best remedy in use, and also good for any cough, or to put a horse in good condition; in fact, it is his "cure all."

Contracted Hoof or Sore Feet.

No. 1. — Take equal parts of soft fat, beeswax, linseed-oil, Venice turpentine, and Norway tar; first melt the wax, then add the others, mixing thoroughly. Apply to the edge of the hair once a day.

No. 2. — Take of castor oil, Barbadoes tar and soft soap, equal parts of each, melt all together and stir while cooling, and apply a little to the hoof 3 or 4 times a week.

For Scratches and Grease Heel.

No. 1. — Take of oxide of zinc, 1 drachm; lard, 1 ounce; powdered gum benzoin, ten grains; camphorated spirits, 1 drachm. Mix thoroughly and rub on twice a week. Do not wash after the first application.

No. 2. — It has been reported to us that Kendall's Spavin Cure, applied twice a day, after washing as above, will always effect a cure when other remedies fail. It is well usually to give condition powers: saltpetre, 4 ounces; sulphur, 8 ounces; copperas, 4 ounces; fenugreek, 12 ounces; gentian, 4 ounces. Mix, and give a tablespoonful twice a day.

Condition Powders.

No. 1. — Gentian, fenugreek, sulphur, salpetre, cream of tartar, of each two ounces; rosin, black antimony, of each 1 ounce; ginger, liquorice, 3 ounces each; cayenne, 1 ounce, pulverized and mixed thoroughly; dose. 1 tablespoonful once or twice a day, mixed with the feed; used with good success for coughs, colds, distemper, hide bound, and nearly all diseases for which condition powders are given.

No. 2. — Fenugreek, 4 ounces; ginger, 6 ounces; anise, pulverized, 4 ounces; gentian, 2 ounces; black antimony, 2 ounces; hard-wood ashes, 4 ounces; mix all together; excellent to give a horse an appetite.

No. 3. — Liquorice, 4 ounces; fenugreek, 4 ounces; elecampane, 4 ounces; blood root, 1 ounce; tartar emetic, ½ ounce; ginger and cayenne, each, 1 ounce. Mix, and give a tablespoonful two or three times a day in the feed. One of the best condition powders for any cough, cold, distemper or epizoötic; also excellent for heaves. For heaves, 1 ounce of lobelia and camphor may be added.

Liniments for Horses.

No. 1. — Olive oil, 2 ounces; aqua ammonia, 1 ounce. Mix; and add 2 ounces oil origanum; 2 ounces spirits of turpentine; ¼ ounce oil of wormwood; strongest alcohol, 1 pint. This liniment is excellent for any lameness; also good for spavins, ringbones, curbs, etc., if used when they make the first appearance.

No. 2. — Oil of spike, 1 ounce; oil of origanum, 4 ounces; aqua ammonia, 2 ounces; tincture of cayenne pepper, 4 ounces; beef's gall, one gill; camphor gum, 1 ounce; alcohol, 1 pint; mix; used for the same purposes as No. 1.

No. 3. — Best vinegar, 1 quart; saltpetre, pulverized, 4 ounces; wormwood, 4 ounces. Mix, and steep in a dish well covered; strain and press the herbs; valuable for bruises, swellings, and sprains.

No. 4. — For all purposes for which an external liniment is used on any beast, or on human flesh, we never have found anything to equal Kendall's Spavin Cure.

Eyewater.

No. 1. — White vitriol and pure saltpetre, of each one scruple; pure soft water, 8 ounces. Mix. This should be applied to the inflamed lids 3 or 4 times a day, and if the inflammation does not lesson in 1 or 2 days it may be injected directly into the eye.

The writer has used this for his own eyes, reduced half with water and dropped directly into the eye, which would cause the eye to smart considerably for about five minutes, when he would bathe the eye with cold water for a few minutes, and, by repeating this 3 or 4 times a day, it has given the very best of satisfaction.

It does nicely many times to just close the eye and bathe the outside freely.

No. 2. — Sugar of lead, 1 drachm; tincture of opium, 2 drachms; soft water, 1 pint. Mix, and wash the eye 2 or 3 times a day.

For Colic.

No. 1. — Take of gum myrrh, 1 ounce; gum camphor, 1 ounce; powdered gum guaiac, 1 ounce; cayenne, 1 ounce; sassafras bark, powdered, 1 ounce; spirits turpentine, 1 ounce; oil origanum, ½ ounce; oil hemlock, ½ ounce; pulverized opium, ½ ounce; strongest alcohol, 2 quarts; mix all together and shake often for eight or ten days and filter or strain through flannel. Dose from 1 to 3 tablespoonfuls, according to the severity of the case; give in a pint of milk.

We never have known the above remedy to fail of giving relief when given for colic, in horses. In many cases where it has been used it has given immediate relief even though various other remedies had failed of giving any relief.

It makes one of the very best of Pain Killers for family use, and we advise all to keep it on hand.

No. 2. — Take of laudanum, 1 ounce; spirits of turpentine, 1½ ounces. Mix, and give at one dose, in three times the amount of warm water.

No. 3. — Sulphuric ether, 1½ ounces; laudanum, 1 ounce; essence peppermint, 2 ounces; water, 16 ounces; mix, and shake well before giving.

Cuts, Wounds, and Sores.

No. 1. — Take of lard, 4 ounces; beeswax, 4 ounces; rosin, 2 ounces; carbolic acid, ½ ounce. Mix the three first and melt, then add the carbolic acid, stirring until cool. This is excellent for man as well as beast.

No. 2. — Tincture opium, 2 ounces; tannin, ½ ounce. Mix.

No. 3. — Carbolic acid, 1 ounce; soft water, 1 quart. Mix.

No. 4. — For cuts, bruises, wounds, or sores, apply Kendall's Spavin Cure, which is one of the best applications for this purpose known either for beast or man.

Poll Evil and Fistula.

No. 1. — Copperas, 1 drachm; blue vitriol, 2 drachms; common salt, 2 drachms; white vitriol, 1 drachm; mix, and powder fine. Fill a goose-quill with the powder, and push it to the bottom of the pipe, having a stick in the top of the quill, so that you can push the powder out of the quill, leaving it at the bottom of the pipe; repeat again in about four days and in two or three days from that time you can take hold of the pipe and remove it without trouble.

No. 2. — Take a small piece of lunar caustic, place in the pipe, after being cleansed with soap-suds, then fill the hole with sweet-oil.

No. 3. — Fill the sore to the bottom with ashes from burnt corn-cobs; repeat two or three times if necessary, or until a cure is effected.

Bots.

Take new milk, 2 quarts; syrup, 1 quart. Mix, and give the whole; and, in fifteen or twenty minutes after, give [illegible] of warm, strong sage tea; half an hour after the tea, give 1 quart of raw linseed-oil, or if the oil cannot be had, give lard instead.

Saddle and Harness Galls, Bruises, Etc.

No. 1. — Tincture of opium, 2 ounces; tannin, 2 drachms. Mix, and apply twice a day.

No. 2. — Apply directly into the sore Kendall's Spavin Cure, as it has been tried repeatedly with the very best of results.

Anodyne Drenches.

No. 1. — Tincture of opium, 1 ounce; starch gruel, 1 quart. Mix.

No. 2. — Sweet spirits of nitre, 1 ounce; tincture of opium, 1 ounce; essence of peppermint, ½ ounce; water, 1 pint. Mix.

No. 3. — Tincture of opium, 1 ounce; spirits of camphor, ½ ounce; anise, ½ oz.; sulphuric-ether, 1 ounce; water, 1 pint. Mix.

Farcy and Glanders.

No. 1. — Iodide of Potassium, 1½ drachms; copperas, ½ drachm; ginger, 1 drachm; gentian, 3 drachms; powdered gum arabic and syrup, to form a ball.

No. 2. — Calomel, ½ drachm; turpentine, ½ ounce; blue vitriol, 1 drachm; gum arabic and syrup, to form a ball.

No. 3. — ½ ounce sulphite of soda; 5 grains Spanish flies, powdered. Mix, and give at night in cut feed for several weeks; give at the same time, every morning and noon, 3 drachms powdered gentian, 2 drachms powdered blue vitriol; give the medicines for a long time; feed well. This is the best treatment that can be given for these diseases.

Fever Balls.

No. 1. — Saltpetre, 2½ drachms; tartar emetic, ½ drachm; flaxseed meal, 1 ounce; camphor, ½ drachm; ginger, 2 drachms. Mix, and form into a ball; repeat three or four times a day, if necessary.

No. 2. — Tincture of aconite, 10 drops; tartar emetic, ½ drachm; saltpetre, ½ drachm; ginger, 2 drachms; linseed meal, 1 ounce. Mix, and form into a ball; repeat three or four times a day if necessary.

Diuretic Balls.

No. 1. — Saltpetre, 3 drachms; rosin, 4 drachms; castile soap, 2 drachms; fenugreek, 3 drachms; flaxseed meal, 1 ounce. Mix, and form into a ball.

No. 2. — Oil of juniper, ½ drachm, rosin and saltpetre, each, 2 drachms; camphor, ½ drachm; castile soap, 1 ounce; flaxseed meal, 1 ounce. Mix, and form into a ball.

Cordial Ball.

No. 1. — Camphor, 1 drachm; anise, 3 drachms; tincture of opium, 1 ounce; powdered extract of liquorice, 3 drachms; flaxseed meal, 1 ounce. Mix.

Astringent and Cordial.

No. 1. — Opium, 12 grains; camphor, ½ drachm; catechu, 1 drachm. Mix.

No. 2. — Opium, 10 grains; camphor, 1 drachm; ginger, 2 drachms; castile soap, 2 drachms; anise, 3 drachms; liquorice, 2 drachms. Mix.

Cough Mixtures.

No. 1. — Oil of tar, given as directed for treatment of heaves, is one of the best remedies for nearly all coughs.

No. 2. — Take of alcohol, ½ pint; balsam of fir, 2 ounces. Mix well, and add all the tar it will cut. Shake well before using. Dose from one to two teaspoonfuls two or three times a day.

Cracked Heels.

Tar, 8 ounces; beeswax, 1 ounce; rosin, 1 ounce; alum, 1 ounce; tallow, 1 ounce; sulphate of iron, 1 ounce; carbolic acid, 1 drachm; mix, and boil over a slow fire. Skim off the filth, and add 2 ounces of the scrapings of sweet elder.

Thrush.

No. 1. — Wash the feet well with castile soap and water, and sprinkle a small quantity of pulverized blue vitriol in the cleft, and then fill up all the cavities with cotton and press it in so as to keep out all dirt, and repeat as often as necessary until the cure is complete.

No. 2. — Blue vitriol and copperas, of each 1 ounce; burnt alum, 2 ounces; white vitriol, ½ ounce. Mix.

Nasal Gleet.

No. 1. — Copperas, 2 ounces; pulverized gentian, 3 ounces; elecampane, 1 ounce; linseed meal, 3 ounces. Mix, and give from ½ to 1 tablespoonful twice a day.

No. 2. — Aloes, 6 ounces; pulverized nux vomica, 8 drachms; flaxseed meal, 4 ounces. Make into eight powders, and give one or two each day.

Water Farcy.

No. 1. — Saltpetre, 2 ounces; copperas, 2 ounces; ginger, 1 ounce; fenugreek, 2 ounces; anise, ½ ounce; gentian, 1 ounce. Mix and divide into eight powders; give two or three each day.

No. 2. — Gentian, 1 ounce; ginger, ½ ounce; anise, 1 ounce; elecampane, 2 ounces; blue vitriol, 1 ounce; flaxseed meal, 2 ounces; saltpetre, 2 ounces. Mix, and divide into eight powders. Moderate daily exercise and rubbing the limbs are useful.

Healing Preparations.

No. 1. — Carbolic acid, 1 ounce; soft water, 2 pints. Mix.

No. 2. — White vitriol, 1 ounce; soft water, 2 pints. Mix.

No. 3. — Tincture of opium, 1 ounce; tannin, 1 drachm. Mix, and shake well before using. Excellent for galls of collar, saddle; or, in fact, for any purpose requiring a healing astringent.

Healing Mixture.

Cosmoline, 8 ounces; carbolic acid, 1 drachm. Mix. This is one of the very best of mixtures for any sore, especially for such cases as are inclined not to heal readily.

To Cure Mange.

Oil Tar, 1 ounce; lac sulphur, 1½ ounces; whale oil, 2 ounces. Mix. Rub a little on the skin wherever the disease appears, and continue daily, for a week, then wash off with castile soap and warm water.

To Grow Hair.

Mix sweet-oil, 1 pint; sulphur, 3 ounces. Shake well, and rub well into the dock twice a week.

For Worms.

Calomel, 1 drachm; tartar emetic, ½ drachm; linseed meal, 1 ounce; fenugreek, 1 ounce. Mix, and give in feed at night, and repeat the dose for two or three times, and follow with 1½ pints of raw linseed-oil, about 5 hours after the last powder has been given.

Grease Heal.

Chloride of zinc, 1½ drachms; water, 10 ounces; glycerine, 8 ounces. Mix. If there is much discharge, apply a poultice for several hours, followed by application of the above, after cleansing well with soft water and castile soap. The following powders should be given at the same time in the feed every night, for a week or two: Bicarbonate of soda, 1 ounce; arsenic, 1 drachm; iodide of iron, ½ ounce; fenugreek, 2 ounces; ginger, 2 ounces; elecampane, 1 ounce. Mix thoroughly and divide into 12 powders.

For Distemper.

Hops, 2 ounces; carbolic acid, 30 drops; boiling water, 2 gallons. Mix the hops and carbolic acid with the boiling water, and compel the animal to inhale the steam for 15 or 20 minutes at a time, and repeat three times a day. Apply a strong mustard paste to the throat, and place a warm poultice over the paste. Feed warm mashes and boiled vegetables; keep the stable comfortably warm and the air pure. Give the following powders once a day: Powdered Peruvian bark, 2 ounces; powdered gentian, 1 ounce; powdered copperas, 1 ounce. Mix, and divided into 8 powders.

Thrush.

Take white vitriol, 2 ounces; soft water, 8 ounces. Mix, and apply to the diseased surface, after the ragged parts have been cut away and thoroughly cleansed. Pack the cavities with cotton batting, so as to keep out all dirt.

For Ringworm.

Apply mercurial ointment 3 or 4 times a week.

The above cut is a good representation of the New Laboratory and Manufactory of B. J. Kendall & Co., Enosburgh Falls, Vt., proprietors of the celebrated Kendall's Spavin Cure.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

The great success which has been achieved with Kendall's Spavin Cure, in all parts of the United States, has never before been equalled, and is now considered by the first veterinary surgeons and most extensive horse owners in the country, to be the grandest discovery in veterinary science of the nineteenth century.

It is giving the very best satisfaction wherever used.

It does not blister or cause any sore, which makes it a desirable liniment for use on man as well as on beast, and it is sure in its effect.

It has no equal, to our knowledge, for spavins, splints, ringbone-curb, callous, sprains, swellings, galls, lameness, from whatever cause, in any part of the body or limbs, and is also good for cuts, scratches, wounds, etc.

As a household liniment it has no equal; its effect on human flesh is marvellous. It is used with the most gratifying results in cases of lameness or any deep-seated pains—as in rheumatism, sprains, strains, burns, bruises, frost-bites, corns, etc.

The increased demand for Kendall's Spavin Cure, within the past three years, has compelled the proprietors to build the large and commodious building, represented above, in which they manufacture and bottle the Spavin Cure. The building is especially adapted to their use, containing offices, and private offices, advertising, printing, manufacturing, bottling, and packing departments, and now even the Company with this spacious building, are finding themselves barely able to meet the great demand made on them for their preparations, and at an early day they expect to have to enlarge their laboratories, as now a large amount of their work has to be done outside.

Much could be said to show the great success already achieved, but we give below copies of a few letters from prominent men who have used the Spavin Cure, which shows plainly, in a few words, what reputation it has, by parties who are perfectly familiar with it.

Office of G. W. Voorhis, Proprietor Hamtramck Driving Park and Park House.

DETROIT, MICH., April 12, 1881.

B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gents: — The "Treatise on the Horse and his Diseases" you sent me is at hand, and think it a first-class book.

Your Kendall's Spavin Cure I have used for the last three years, and think it the best medicine I ever saw for Spavin and Splint, and will freely recommend it to my friends.

Yours Respectfully, G. W. VOORHIS.

FROM COL. L. T. FOSTER.

YOUNGSTOWN, OHIO, May 10, 1880.

Dr. B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gents: — I had a very valuable Hambletonian colt which I prized very highly. He had a large bone-spavin on one joint and a small one on the other, which made him very lame; I had him under the charge of two veterinary surgeons, who failed to cure him. I was one day reading the advertisement of Kendall's Spavin Cure in the "Chicago Express." I determined at once to try it, and got our druggists here to send for it. They ordered three bottles; I took them all and thought I would give it a thorough trial. I used it according to directions, and the fourth day the colt ceased to be lame, and the lumps have disappeared. I used but one bottle, and the colt's limbs are as free from lumps and as smooth as any horse in the State. He is entirely cured. The cure was so remarkable that I let two of my neighbors have the remaining two bottles, who are now using it.

Very Respectfully, L. T. FOSTER.

FROM A PROMINENT PHYSICIAN.

WASHINGTONVILLE, OHIO, June 17, 1880.

Dr. B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gents: — Reading your advertisement in "Turf, Field, and Farm," of Kendall's Spavin Cure, and having a valuable and speedy horse which had been lame from spavin for eighteen months, I sent to you for a bottle by express, which in six weeks removed all lameness and enlargement, and a large splint from another horse, and both horses are to-day as sound as colts. The one bottle was worth to me one hundred dollars.

Respectfully yours, H. A. BERTOLETT, M.D.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

ZIONSVILLE, IND., Nov. 31, 1880.

Dr. B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gents: — I have your valuable Treatise on the Horse and his Diseases, and your Kendall's Spavin Cure. My horses have the epizootic. One of them could not swallow for two days. I applied your Kendall's Spavin Cure twice to her throat and it gave most instant relief. I think I could sell 1,000 of your books. Please give prices to agents.

Yours truly, PETER BOWEN.

HARRISBURG, PA., Nov. 18, 1880.

Dr. B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gents: — I have a very fine mare that has had a bone spavin for a long time. I tried every thing man could devise to cure it, but all in vain, and was about to give it up when a friend of mine in this city came to me and recommended Kendall's Spavin Cure, which I tried with grand results, removing that bone clear and clean; and I sent 25 cents to you for one of your illustrated Horse Books, and I think there is no better book printed on the horse and his diseases. I have taken great interest in it and have since sold 18 copies for you to my neighbors, and will try and do what good I can by getting them for others.

Yours truly, G. W. MILLER.

STATEMENT MADE UNDER OATH.

To whom It May Concern: — In the year 1876, I treated with "Kendall's Spavin Cure," a bone spavin of several months' growth, nearly half as large as a hen's egg, and completely stopped the lameness and removed the enlargement. I have worked the horse ever since very hard, and he never has been lame, nor could I ever see any difference in the size of the hock-joints since I treated him with "Kendall's Spavin Cure." R. A. GAINES.

ENOSBURGH FALLS, VT., Feb. 25, 1879.

Sworn and subscribed to before me this 25th day of Feb., A.D. 1879. JOHN G. JENNE, Justice of the Peace.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

FREMONT, OHIO, Jan. 25, 1881.

Dr. B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gents: — I think it my duty to render you my thanks for benefits and profits which I have derived from your invaluable and far-famed "Kendall's Spavin Cure." My cousin and I had a valuable stallion, worth $4,000, which had a very bad spavin, and was pronounced by four eminent veterinary surgeons beyond any cure, and that the horse was done for ever. As a last resort, I advised my cousin to try a bottle of Kendall's Spavin Cure. It had a magical effect; the third bottle cured it, and the horse is as well as ever. Dr. Dick, of Edinburgh, the eminent veterinary surgeon, was an uncle of mine, and I take great interest in assisting his profession.

Yours truly, JAMES A. WILSON, Civil Engineer.

On Human Flesh.

We feel confident that we speak the truth when we say that no liniment was ever discovered that works so well on human flesh as Kendall's Spavin Cure.

ALBANY, N.Y., Sept. 25, 1880.

B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gents: — Enclosed find 25 cents for your recently published horse book, the revised edition. I have used your Kendall's Spavin Cure, in bad cases, with very fine results, and I would not be without it for four times the amount per bottle. It is equally as well for man as for beast. I fell from a high tree about four years ago, and have complained of my back ever since, until about two months ago I began using your Kendall's Spavin Cure, and have not been able to complain since. My doctor says that he had expected me to be a cripple for life, as he could not do anything for my spine. Please to send the book to

BAKERSFIELD, VT., Dec. 28, 1880.

B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gents: — In the spring of 1862 I slipped on the ice and sprained my right limb at the knee-joint. I was very lame, and at times have suffered the most excruciating pain since. In April, 1878, I began to think I should be a cripple for life. I used one-third of a bottle of Kendall's Spavin Cure, and experienced relief at once. I feel very grateful to you, and would recommend Kendall's Spavin Cure to all who suffer with sprains or rheumatism.

Yours truly, MRS. J. BOUTELL.

SAVANNAH, GA., Dec. 22, 1880.

Dr. B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gents: — Enclosed please find 25 cents for which send me one of your new horse books, and oblige. I have tried your Kendall's Spavin Cure in a case of rheumatic gout, and find it an excellent remedy.

Yours, etc., etc., J. W. HUNT.

WEST ENOSBURGH, VT., Feb. 15, 1881.

Dr. B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gents: — Several months ago I injured my knee-joint which caused an enlargement to grow the size of a large walnut, and caused me very severe pain all the time for four or five weeks, when I began to use Kendall's Spavin Cure, with the most satisfactory results. It has completely removed the enlargement and stopped the lameness and pain. I have long known it to be excellent for horses, but now I know it to be the best liniment for human flesh that I am acquainted with.

Yours truly, T. P. LAWRENCE.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE

Is sure in its effects, mild in its action, as it does not blister, yet it is penetrating and powerful to reach every deep-seated pain or to remove any bony growth or other enlargements, such as spavins, splints, curbs, callous, sprains, swellings and any lameness and all enlargements of the joints or limbs, or for rheumatism in man and for any purpose for which a liniment is used for man or beast. It is now known to be the best liniment for man ever used, acting mild and yet certain in its effects.

Send address for Illustrated Circular, which, we think, gives positive proof of its virtues. No remedy has ever met with such unqualified success to our knowledge, for beast as well as man.

Price $1 per bottle, or six bottles for $5. All druggists have it or can get it for you, or it will be sent to any address on receipt of price by the proprietors, DR. B. J. KENDALL & CO., Enosburgh Falls, Vt.

OUR SUPPLEMENT.

THE SUPERANNUATED HORSE TO HIS MASTER.

The following verses were found in a collection of "Epigrams, etc.," one hundred and fifty years old.
The master is said to have been Rev. Mr. Potter, of Scarning, in Norfolk, England.

And must thou fix my doom, sweet master, say?
And wilt thou kill thy servant, old and poor?
A little longer let me live, I pray;
A little longer hobble 'round thy door.

For much it glads me to behold this place,
And house within this hospitable shed;
It glads me more to see my master's face,
And linger near the spot where I was bred.

For, ah! to think of what we both enjoyed
In my life's prime, ere I was old and poor,
When from the jocund morn to eve employ'd
My gracious master on this back I bore.

Thrice told ten years have danc'd on down along,
Since first these way-worn limbs to thee I gave;
Sweet-smiling years! when both of us were young—
The kindest master, and the happiest slave.

Nor could'st thou bear to see thy servant bleed,
Tho' weeping pity has decreed his fate;
Yet, ah! in vain, thy heart for life shall plead,
If nature has denied a longer date.

Alas! I feel 'tis Nature dooms my death,
O me! I feel 'tis Pity gives the blow;
Yet ere it falls, ah, Nature! take my breath,
And my kind master shall no sorrow know.

HINTS FOR HORSE OWNERS.

Sunflower Seed for Horses.—The sunflower seed is very healthy feed for the horse, and should be given in quantities about half a pint a day during the winter and spring, which will cause them to have a sleek coat, and will keep them in good health and spirit. It is considered by many who have tried it to be a preventative of heaves, and several have claimed to have cured heaves with it, as well as coughs and distemper. When used for heaves, mix two bushels of oats and one of the seed, and have it ground, then feed two quarts of the mixture, wet with water, three times a day. Always remember to feed hay and water as we direct in the treatment of heaves in another place.

A Horse's Foot. — A horse with a poor foot is many times almost worthless. One of the most frequent causes of poor feet is in allowing the blacksmith to pare the hoof too much, especially the frog, which never should be pared under any circumstances.

Balky Horses. — The most effectual method of starting a balky horse is to divert his attention so he will forget that he does not wish to draw the load. This may be done in various ways. A stout string twisted around the foreleg, so as to cause some pain, and to stop the circulation for a short time, may have this result. Unhitch the horse from the load, and turn him around rapidly several times until he becomes dizzy. Tie a string around the ear. Give a handful of grass, or a lump of earth or sugar, or, in fact, anything but whipping, which will have the effect to divert the attention so the horse will forget his work.

Bots Destroyed by Feeding Potatoes. — It is claimed by some that bots will not live but a short time if placed in grated potato, and that horses have been relieved from attacks of bots by simply feeding four or six quarts of potatoes. At all events, it is well known that potatoes fed once a week are excellent for horses.

The Quantity of Food Required for a Horse. — For ordinary work, a horse of average size should be fed 12 pounds of oats, or other grain food, and 15 to 18 pounds of good hay; but, if driven on the road, 2 or 3 pounds of hay, morning and noon, and 8 or 10 at night, with the same quantity of grain.

Lice on Cattle, Horses, or Dogs. — To rid an animal of lice, apply a small quantity (the size of an ordinary pill) of mercurial ointment to some part which the animal can not lick.

Charcoal for Fowls. — Place an ear of ripe corn into the fire, and allow it to remain until it has become well charred, and feed this to your fowls. It is much better than ordinary charcoal, and will give health and vigor.

Black-Leg. — This disease attacks young and thriving stock, and usually proves fatal unless seen and treated early. The symptoms are those of plethora, fever, and halting on one limb. Give at once half a pound of epsom salts and a teaspoonful of ginger. It is claimed by some that saltpetre, given occasionally, is a preventative, or, if given in large doses, after the attack, in quantities varying from one to four teaspoonfuls, according to the age, is quite sure to effect a cure.

Hoven, Drum-belly, or Clover Bloat. — This is a bloating of cattle, caused by overfilling the paunch, and in too quick a time, before the stomach has time to act upon it. The symptoms are swelling of the whole left side of the belly.

Treatment should begin as soon as possible by giving, every fifteen minutes, one teaspoonful of pulverized charcoal in a pint of water. If the case should prove to be one which would not yield to the above treatment, then tap the bloated animal by plunging a sharp knife into the left side in a downward and inward direction from a point equally distant from the hip-bone, the last rib and the lateral processes of the backbone. The knife should remain in the opening until a quill can be inserted for the gas to pass through, when it can be withdrawn. Care should be taken not to let go of the quill. A trocar and cannula can usually be obtained from a physician, which is the best instrument that can possibly be obtained for this purpose.

Sulphur for Animals. — When taken internally in quantities of about a teaspoonful once a week with food, sulphur will keep all kinds of animals free from lice, and promotes the general health. One teaspoonful is sufficient for ten or twelve hens, or three or four sheep or pigs. The same quantity of charcoal can be combined with it with good results.

VALUABLE RECEIPTS.

Heaves.

No. 1. — Sunflower seed, 1 bushel; oats, 2 bushels. Mix, and grind together, and feed two quarts of the mixture three times a day. Give hay and water as directed in treating heaves.

No. 2. — Liquorice, elecampane, wild turnip, fenugreek, skunk-cabbage, lobelia, cayenne, and ginger, equal parts of each. Mix, and give a tablespoonful once or twice a day. If the horse refuses to eat it in food, make it into a ball and give.

No. 3. — Assafoetida, pulverized, 1 ounce; camphor-gum, pulverized, ½ ounce. Mix, and divide into four powders; feed one every other night for a week.

No. 4. — A horseman with whom I am acquainted says he has cured several cases of heaves with oil tar. He gives the ordinary case a teaspoonful every night, or every other night, by pouring it on to the tongue, and then giving some grain, which carries it into the stomach.

He says he has given very bad cases two or three tablespoonfuls at a dose, with grand results.

He reports it to be the best remedy in use, and also good for any cough, or to put a horse in good condition; in fact, it is his "cure all."

Contracted Hoof or Sore Feet.

No. 1. — Take equal parts of soft fat, beeswax, linseed-oil, Venice turpentine, and Norway tar; first melt the wax, then add the others, mixing thoroughly. Apply to the edge of the hair once a day.

No. 2. — Take of castor oil, Barbadoes tar and soft soap, equal parts of each, melt all together and stir while cooling, and apply a little to the hoof 3 or 4 times a week.

For Scratches and Grease Heel.

No. 1. — Take of oxide of zinc, 1 drachm; lard, 1 ounce; powdered gum benzoin, ten grains; camphorated spirits, 1 drachm. Mix thoroughly and rub on twice a week. Do not wash after the first application.

No. 2. — It has been reported to us that Kendall's Spavin Cure, applied twice a day, after washing as above, will always effect a cure when other remedies fail. It is well usually to give condition powers: saltpetre, 4 ounces; sulphur, 8 ounces; copperas, 4 ounces; fenugreek, 12 ounces; gentian, 4 ounces. Mix, and give a tablespoonful twice a day.

Condition Powders.

No. 1. — Gentian, fenugreek, sulphur, salpetre, cream of tartar, of each two ounces; rosin, black antimony, of each 1 ounce; ginger, liquorice, 3 ounces each; cayenne, 1 ounce, pulverized and mixed thoroughly; dose. 1 tablespoonful once or twice a day, mixed with the feed; used with good success for coughs, colds, distemper, hide bound, and nearly all diseases for which condition powders are given.

No. 2. — Fenugreek, 4 ounces; ginger, 6 ounces; anise, pulverized, 4 ounces; gentian, 2 ounces; black antimony, 2 ounces; hard-wood ashes, 4 ounces; mix all together; excellent to give a horse an appetite.

No. 3. — Liquorice, 4 ounces; fenugreek, 4 ounces; elecampane, 4 ounces; blood root, 1 ounce; tartar emetic, ¼ ounce; ginger and cayenne, each, 1 ounce. Mix, and give a tablespoonful two or three times a day in the feed. One of the best condition powders for any cough, cold, distemper or epizoötic; also excellent for heaves. For heaves, 1 ounce of lobelia and camphor may be added.

Liniments for Horses.

No. 1. — Olive oil, 2 ounces; aqua ammonia, 1 ounce. Mix; and add 2 ounces oil origanum; 2 ounces spirits of turpentine; ¼ ounce oil of wormwood; strongest alcohol, 1 pint. This liniment is excellent for any lameness; also good for spavins, ringbones, curbs, etc., if used when they make the first appearance.

No. 2. — Oil of spike, 1 ounce; oil of origanum, 4 ounces; aqua ammonia, 2 ounces; tincture of cayenne pepper, 4 ounces; beef's gall, one gill; camphor gum, 1 ounce; alcohol, 1 pint; mix; used for the same purposes as No. 1.

No. 3. — Best vinegar, 1 quart; saltpetre, pulverized, 4 ounces; wormwood, 4 ounces. Mix, and steep in a dish well covered; strain and press the herbs; valuable for bruises, swellings, and sprains.

No. 4. — For all purposes for which an external liniment is used on any beast, or on human flesh, we never have found anything to equal Kendall's Spavin Cure.

Eyewater.

No. 1. — White vitriol and pure saltpetre, of each one scruple; pure soft water, 8 ounces. Mix. This should be applied to the inflamed lids 3 or 4 times a day, and if the inflammation does not lessen in 1 or 2 days it may be injected directly into the eye.

The writer has used this for his own eyes, reduced half with water and dropped directly into the eye, which would cause the eye to smart considerably for about five minutes, when he would bathe the eye with cold water for a few minutes, and, by repeating this 3 or 4 times a day, it has given the very best of satisfaction.

It does nicely many times to just close the eye and bathe the outside freely.

No. 2. — Sugar of lead, 1 drachm; tincture of opium, 2 drachms; soft water, 1 pint. Mix, and wash the eye 2 or 3 times a day.

For Colic.

No. 1. — Take of gum myrrh, 1 ounce; gum camphor, 1 ounce; powdered gum guaiac, 1 ounce; cayenne, 1 ounce; sassafras bark, powdered, 1 ounce; spirits turpentine, 1 ounce; oil origanum, ½ ounce; oil hemlock, ½ ounce; pulverized opium, ½ ounce; strongest alcohol, 2 quarts; mix all together and shake often for eight or ten days and filter or strain through flannel. Dose from 1 to 3 tablespoonfuls, according to the severity of the case; give in a pint of milk.

We never have known the above remedy to fail of giving relief when given for colic, in horses. In many cases where it has been used it has given immediate relief even though various other remedies had failed of giving any relief.

It makes one of the very best of Pain Killers for family use, and we advise all to keep it on hand.

No. 2. — Take of laudanum, 1 ounce; spirits of turpentine, 1½ ounces. Mix, and give at one dose, in three times the amount of warm water.

No. 3. — Sulphuric ether, 1½ ounces; laudanum, 1 ounce; essence peppermint, 2 ounces; water, 16 ounces; mix, and shake well before giving.

Cuts, Wounds, and Sores.

No. 1. — Take of lard, 4 ounces; beeswax, 4 ounces; rosin, 2 ounces; carbolic acid, ½ ounce. Mix the three first and melt, then add the carbolic acid, stirring until cool. This is excellent for man as well as beast.

No. 2. — Tincture opium, 2 ounces; tannin, ½ ounce. Mix.

No. 3. — Carbolic acid, 1 ounce; soft water, 1 quart. Mix.

No. 4. — For cuts, bruises, wounds, or sores, apply Kendall's Spavin Cure, which is one of the best applications for this purpose known either for beast or man.

Poll Evil and Fistula.

No. 1. — Copperas, 1 drachm; blue vitriol, 2 drachms; common salt, 2 drachms; white vitriol, 1 drachm; mix, and powder fine. Fill a goose-quill with the powder, and push it to the bottom of the pipe, having a stick in the top of the quill, so that you can push the powder out of the quill, leaving it at the bottom of the pipe; repeat again in about four days, and in two or three days from that time you can take hold of the pipe and remove it, without trouble.

No. 2. — Take a small piece of lunar caustic, place in the pipe, after being cleansed with soap-suds, then fill the hole with sweet-oil.

No. 3. — Fill the sore to the bottom with ashes from burnt corn-cobs; repeat two or three times if necessary, or until a cure is effected.

Bots.

Take new milk, 2 quarts; syrup, 1 quart. Mix, and give the whole; and, in fifteen or twenty minutes after, give 2 quarts of warm, strong sage tea; half an hour after the tea, give 1 quart of raw linseed-oil, or if the oil cannot be had, give lard instead.

Saddle and Harness Galls, Bruises, Etc.

No. 1. — Tincture of opium, 2 ounces; tannin, 2 drachms. Mix, and apply twice a day.

No. 2. — Apply directly into the sore Kendall's Spavin Cure, as it has been tried repeatedly with the very best of results.

Anodyne Drenches.

No. 1. — Tincture of opium, 1 ounce; starch gruel, 1 quart. Mix.

No. 2. — Sweet spirits of nitre, 1 ounce; tincture of opium, 1 ounce; essence of peppermint, ½ ounce; water, 1 pint. Mix.

No. 3. — Tincture of opium, 1 ounce; spirits of camphor, ½ ounce; anise, ½ oz.; sulphuric ether, 1 ounce; water, 1 pint. Mix.

Farcy and Glanders.

No. 1. — Iodide of potassium, 1½ drachms; copperas, ½ drachm; ginger, 1 drachm; gentian, 2 drachms; powdered gum arabic and syrup, to form a ball.

No. 2. — Calomel, ½ drachm; turpentine, ½ ounce; blue vitriol, 1 drachm; gum arabic and syrup, to form a ball.

No. 3. — ½ ounce sulphite of soda; 8 grains Spanish flies, powdered. Mix, and give at night in cut feed for several weeks; give at the same time, every morning and noon, 3 drachms powdered gentian, 2 drachms powdered blue vitriol; give the medicines for a long time; feed well. This is the best treatment that can be given for these diseases.

Fever Balls.

No. 1. — Saltpetre, 2½ drachms; tartar emetic, ½ drachm; flaxseed meal, 1 ounce; camphor, ½ drachm; ginger, 2 drachms. Mix, and form into a ball; repeat three or four times a day, if necessary.

No. 2. — Tincture of aconite, 10 drops; tartar emetic, ½ drachm; saltpetre, 1 drachm; ginger, 2 drachms; linseed meal, 1 ounce. Mix, and form into a ball; repeat three or four times a day if necessary.

Diuretic Balls.

No. 1. — Saltpetre, 3 drachms; rosin, 4 drachms; castile soap, 2 drachms; fenugreek, 3 drachms; flaxseed meal, 1 ounce. Mix, and form into a ball.

No. 2. — Oil of juniper, ½ drachm, rosin and saltpetre, each, 2 drachms; camphor, ½ drachm; castile soap, 1 ounce; flaxseed meal, 1 ounce. Mix, and form into a ball.

Cordial Ball.

No. 1. — Camphor, 1 drachm; anise, 3 drachms; tincture of opium, 1 ounce; powdered extract of liquorice, 3 drachms; flaxseed meal, 1 ounce. Mix.

Astringent and Cordial.

No. 1. — Opium, 12 grains; camphor, ½ drachm; catechu, 1 drachm. Mix.

No. 2. — Opium, 10 grains; camphor, 1 drachm; ginger, 2 drachms; castile soap, 2 drachms; anise, 3 drachms; liquorice, 2 drachms. Mix.

Cough Mixtures.

No. 1. — Oil of tar, given as directed for treatment of heaves, is one of the best remedies for nearly all coughs.

No. 2. — Take of alcohol, ½ pint; balsam of fir, 2 ounces. Mix well, and add all the tar it will cut. Shake well before using. Dose from one to two teaspoonfuls two or three times a day.

Cracked Heels.

Tar, 8 ounces; beeswax, 1 ounce; rosin, 1 ounce; alum, 1 ounce; tallow, 1 ounce; sulphate of iron, 1 ounce; carbolic acid, 1 drachm; mix, and boil over a slow fire. Skim off the filth, and add 2 ounces of the scrapings of sweet elder.

Thrush.

No. 1. — Wash the feet well with castile soap and water, and sprinkle a small quantity of pulverized blue vitriol in the cleft, and then fill up all the cavities with cotton and press it in so as to keep out all dirt, and repeat as often as necessary until the cure is complete.

No. 2. — Blue vitriol and copperas, of each 1 ounce; burnt alum, 2 ounces; white vitriol, ½ ounce. Mix.

Nasal Gleet.

No. 1. — Copperas, 2 ounces; pulverized gentian, 3 ounces; elecampane, 1 ounce; linseed meal, 3 ounces. Mix, and give from ½ to 1 tablespoonful twice a day.

No. 2. — Aloes, 6 ounces; pulverized nux vomica, 3 drachms; flaxseed meal, 4 ounces. Make into eight powders, and give one or two each day.

Water Farcy.

No. 1. — Saltpetre, 2 ounces; copperas, 2 ounces; ginger, 1 ounce; fenugreek, 2 ounces; anise, ½ ounce; gentian, 1 ounce. Mix and divide into eight powders; give two or three each day.

No. 2. — Gentian, 1 ounce; ginger, ½ ounce; anise, 1 ounce; elecampane, 2 ounces; blue vitriol, 1 ounce; flaxseed meal, 2 ounces; saltpetre, 2 ounces. Mix, and divide into eight powders. Moderate daily exercise and rubbing the limbs are useful.

Healing Preparations.

No. 1. — Carbolic acid, 1 ounce; soft water, 2 pints. Mix.

No. 2. — White vitriol, 1 ounce; soft water, 2 pints. Mix.

No. 3. — Tincture of opium, 1 ounce; tannin, 1 drachm. Mix, and shake well before using. Excellent for galls of collar, saddle; or, in fact, for any purpose requiring a healing astringent.

Healing Mixture.

Cosmoline, 8 ounces; carbolic acid, 1 drachm. Mix. This is one of the very best of mixtures for any sore, especially for such cases as are inclined not to heal readily.

To Cure Mange.

Oil Tar, 1 ounce; lac sulphur, 1½ ounces; whale oil, 2 ounces. Mix. Rub a little on the skin wherever the disease appears, and continue daily, for a week, then wash off with castile soap and warm water.

To Grow Hair.

Mix sweet-oil, 1 pint; sulphur, 3 ounces. Shake well, and rub well into the dock twice a week.

For Worms.

Calomel, 1 drachm; tartar emetic, ½ drachm; linseed meal, 1 ounce; fenugreek, 1 ounce. Mix, and give in feed at night, and repeat the dose for two or three times, and follow with 1½ pints of raw linseed-oil, about 6 hours after the last powder has been given.

Grease Heal.

Chloride of zinc, 1½ drachms; water, 10 ounces; glycerine, 8 ounces. Mix. If there is much discharge, apply a poultice for several hours, followed by application of the above, after cleansing well with soft water and castile soap. The following powders should be given at the same time in the feed, every night, for a week or two: Bicarbonate of soda, 1 ounce; arsenic, 1 drachm; iodide of iron, ½ ounce; fenugreek, 2 ounces; ginger, 2 ounces; elecampane, 1 ounce. Mix thoroughly and divide into 12 powders.

For Distemper.

Hops, 2 ounces; carbolic acid, 30 drops; boiling water, 2 gallons. Mix the hops and carbolic acid with the boiling water, and compel the animal to inhale the steam for 15 or 20 minutes at a time, and repeat three times a day. Apply a strong mustard paste to the throat, and place a warm poultice over the paste. Feed warm mashes and boiled vegetables; keep the stable comfortably warm and the air pure. Give the following powders once a day: Powdered Peruvian bark, 2 ounces; powdered gentian, 1 ounce; powdered copperas, 1 ounce. Mix, and divided into 8 powders.

Thrush.

Take white vitriol, 2 ounces; soft water, 8 ounces. Mix, and apply to the diseased surface, after the ragged parts have been cut away and thoroughly cleansed. Pack the cavities with cotton batting, so as to keep out all dirt.

For Ringworm.

Apply mercurial ointment 3 or 4 times a week.

The above cut is a good representation of the New Laboratory and Manufactory of B. J. Kendall & Co., Enosburgh Falls, Vt., proprietors of the celebrated Kendall's Spavin Cure.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

The great success which has been achieved with Kendall's Spavin Cure, in all parts of the United States, has never before been equalled, and is now considered by the first veterinary surgeons and most extensive horse owners in the country, to be the grandest discovery in veterinary science of the nineteenth century.

It is giving the very best satisfaction wherever used.

It does not blister or cause any sore, which makes it a desirable liniment for use on man as well as on beast, and it is sure in its effect.

It has no equal, to our knowledge, for spavins, splints, ringbone-curb, callous, sprains, swellings, galls, lameness, from whatever cause, in any part of the body or limbs, and is also good for cuts, scratches, wounds, etc.

As a household liniment it has no equal; its effect on human flesh is marvellous. It is used with the most gratifying results in cases of lameness or any deep-seated pains — as in rheumatism, sprains, strains, burns, bruises, frost-bites, corns, etc.

The increased demand for Kendall's Spavin Cure, within the past three years, has compelled the proprietors to build the large and commodious building, represented above, in which they manufacture and bottle the Spavin Cure. The building is especially adapted to their use, containing offices, and private offices, advertising, printing, manufacturing, bottling, and packing departments, and now even the Company with this spacious building, are finding themselves barely able to meet the great demand made on them for their preparations, and at an early day they expect to have to enlarge their laboratories, as now a large amount of their work has to be done outside.

Much could be said to show the great success already achieved, but we give below copies of a few letters from prominent men who have used the Spavin Cure, which shows plainly, in a few words, what reputation it has, by parties who are perfectly familiar with it.

Office of G. W. Voorhis, Proprietor Hamtramck Driving Park and Park House,

DETROIT, MICH., April 12, 1881.

B. J. KENDALL & CO., Gents: — The "Treatise on the Horse and his Diseases" you sent me is at hand, and think it a first-class book.

Your Kendall's Spavin Cure I have used for the last three years, and think it the best medicine I ever saw for Spavin and Splint, and will freely recommend it to my friends.

Yours Respectfully, G. W. VOORHIS.

FROM COL. L. T. FOSTER.

YOUNGSTOWN, OHIO, May 10, 1880.

Dr. B. J. KENDALL & CO., Gents: — I had a very valuable Hambletonian colt which I prized very highly. He had a large bone-spavin on one joint and a small one on the other, which made him very lame; I had him under the charge of two veterinary surgeons, who failed to cure him. I was one day reading the advertisement of Kendall's Spavin Cure in the "Chicago Express." I determined at once to try it, and got our druggists here to send for it. They ordered three bottles; I took them all and thought I would give it a thorough trial. I used it according to directions, and the fourth day the colt ceased to be lame, and the lumps have disappeared. I used but one bottle, and the colt's limbs are as free from lumps and as smooth as any horse in the State. He is entirely cured. The cure was so remarkable that I let two of my neighbors have the remaining two bottles, who are now using it.

Very Respectfully, L. T. FOSTER.

FROM A PROMINENT PHYSICIAN.

WASHINGTONVILLE, OHIO, June 17, 1880.

Dr. B. J. KENDALL & CO., Gents: — Reading your advertisement in "Turf, Field, and Farm," of Kendall's Spavin Cure, and having a valuable and speedy horse which had been lame from spavin for eighteen months, I sent to you for a bottle by express, which in six weeks removed all lameness and enlargement, and a large splint from another horse, and both horses are to-day as sound as colts. The one bottle was worth to me one hundred dollars.

Respectfully yours, H. A. BERTOLETT, M.D.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

ZIONSVILLE, IND., Nov. 31, 1880.

Dr. B. J. KENDALL & CO., Gents: — I have your valuable Treatise on the Horse and his Diseases, and your Kendall's Spavin Cure. My horses have the epizootic. One of them could not swallow for two days. I applied your Kendall's Spavin Cure twice to her throat and it gave most instant relief. I think I could sell 1,000 of your books. Please give prices to agents.

Yours truly, PETER BOWEN.

HARRISBURG, PA., Nov. 18, 1880.

Dr. B. J. KENDALL & CO., Gents: — I have a very fine mare that has had a bone spavin for a long time. I tried every thing man could devise to cure it, but all in vain, and was about to give it up when a friend of mine in this city came to me and recommended Kendall's Spavin Cure, which I tried with grand results, removing that bone clear and clean; and I sent 25 cents to you for one of your illustrated Horse Books, and I think there is no better book printed on the horse and his diseases. I have taken great interest in it and have since sold 18 copies for you to my neighbors, and will try and do what good I can by getting them for others.

Yours truly, G. W. MILLER.

STATEMENT MADE UNDER OATH.

To whom It May Concern: — In the year 1875, I treated with "Kendall's Spavin Cure," a bone spavin of several months' growth, nearly half as large as a hen's egg, and completely stopped the lameness and removed the enlargement. I have worked the horse ever since very hard, and he never has been lame, nor could I ever see any difference in the size of the hock-joints since I treated him with "Kendall's Spavin Cure." R. A. GAINES.

ENOSBURGH FALLS, VT., Feb. 25, 1879.

Sworn and subscribed to before me this 25th day of Feb., A.D. 1879. JOHN G. JENNE, Justice of the Peace.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

FREMONT, OHIO, Jan. 25, 1881.

Dr. B. J. KENDALL & CO., Gents: — I think it my duty to render you my thanks for benefits and profits which I have derived from your invaluable and far-famed "Kendall's Spavin Cure." My cousin and I had a valuable stallion, worth $4,000, which had a very bad spavin, and was pronounced by four eminent veterinary surgeons beyond any cure, and that the horse was done for ever. As a last resort, I advised my cousin to try a bottle of Kendall's Spavin Cure. It had a magical effect; the third bottle cured it, and the horse is as well as ever. Dr. Dick, of Edinburgh, the eminent veterinary surgeon, was an uncle of mine, and I take great interest in assisting his profession.

Yours truly, JAMES A. WILSON, Civil Engineer.

On Human Flesh.

We feel confident that we speak the truth when we say that no liniment was ever discovered that works so well on human flesh as Kendall's Spavin Cure.

ALBANY, N.Y., Sept. 25, 1880.

B. J. KENDALL & CO., Gents: — Enclosed find 25 cents for your recently published horse book, the revised edition. I have used your Kendall's Spavin Cure, in bad cases, with very fine results, and I would not be without it for four times the amount per bottle. It is equally as well for man as for beast. I fell from a high tree about four years ago, and have complained of my back ever since, until about two months ago I began using your Kendall's Spavin Cure, and have not been able to complain since. My doctor says that he had expected me to be a cripple for life, as he could not do anything for my spine. Please to send the book to

BAKERSFIELD, VT., Dec. 23, 1880.

B. J. KENDALL & CO., Gents: — In the spring of 1862 I slipped on the ice and sprained my right limb at the knee-joint. I was very lame, and at times have suffered the most excruciating pain since. In April, 1878, I began to think I should be a cripple for life. I used one-third of a bottle of Kendall's Spavin Cure, and experienced relief at once. I feel very grateful to you, and would recommend Kendall's Spavin Cure to all who suffer with sprains or rheumatism.

Yours truly, MRS. J. BOUTELL.

SAVANNAH, GA., Dec. 28, 1880.

Dr. B. J. KENDALL & CO., Gents: — Enclosed please find 25 cents for which send me one of your new horse books, and oblige. I have tried your Kendall's Spavin Cure in a case of rheumatic gout, and find it an excellent remedy.

Yours, etc., etc., J. W. HUNT.

WEST ENOSBURGH, VT., Feb. 15, 1881.

Dr. B. J. KENDALL & CO., Gents: — Several months ago I injured my knee-joint which caused an enlargement to grow the size of a large walnut, and caused me very severe pain all the time for four or five weeks, when I began to use Kendall's Spavin Cure, with the most satisfactory results. It has completely removed the enlargement and stopped the lameness and pain. I have long known it to be excellent for horses, but now I know it to be the best liniment for human flesh that I am acquainted with.

Yours truly, T. P. LAWRENCE.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE

Is sure in its effects, mild in its action, as it does not blister, yet it is penetrating and powerful to reach every deep-seated pain or to remove any bony growth or other enlargements, such as spavins, splints, curbs, callous, sprains, swellings and any lameness and all enlargements of the joints or limbs, or for rheumatism in man and for any purpose for which a liniment is used for man or beast. It is now known to be the best liniment for man ever used, acting mild and yet certain in its effects.

Send address for Illustrated Circular, which, we think, gives positive proof of its virtues. No remedy has ever met with such unqualified success to our knowledge, for beast as well as man.

Price $1 per bottle, or six bottles for $5. All druggists have it or can get it for you, or it will be sent to any address on receipt of price by the proprietors, DR. B. J. KENDALL & CO., Enosburgh Falls, Vt.

The revival in the Methodist Church here still continues with unabated interest and power. About fifty persons, we believe, have presented themselves at the altar for prayer, many of whom profess to have experienced a change of heart. The meetings are being held every afternoon and evening. It is expected that the Rev. Mr. Fish who preached with so much acceptance on Sabbath and Monday last will preach again this Friday evening at 7:30.

DUNDALK.

(From the Herald.)

Owing to the mild weather, the roads are bad, consequently business in all its branches are dull.

Moses Oates, the weather prophet, predicts that we may only have a few days sleighing throughout the Province.

A good collection was taken up in the C. M. Church on last Sunday evening, in aid of the Muskoka sufferers.

G. R. Middleton was to the city last week, making extensive purchases for his new store. The first part of his new stock of goods arrived at his store on Tuesday, in a few days Mr. G. R. M., will issue his proclamation as to how he intends to conduct his new business.

Those who are so patiently waiting for the new post-office, will be well repaid for so doing, as the new post office arrangements are going to be conducted with new plans, on an improved principle. Good for Dundalk.

We know of farmers who have received two dollars and fifty cents per cord for wood under contract. We are pleased to know that farmers are well paid for their work.

Drs. McWilliams and Griffin had to preform an operation upon the right foot and left hand of John McDowell, by an amputation of the farts which were frozen. So far he is doing remarkable well.

Messrs. Nelson and Hanbury, have written to friends, giving an excellent account of Manitoba, no doubt but they will purchase,

Mr. Jas. Dean has purchased the house and lot owened by Mrs. Stinson, this purchase has given Mr. D. control of the best property in Dundalk.

Winnipeg, Emerson, and Brandon are having their booms, but this spring the people of Dundalk expect to have their boom to—why not? They have the best situation on the line of the T. G. & B. R'y.

James C. Shook of Corbeton has purchased the Corbeton saw mill from Mr. John Drummer. Mr. Shook intends doing a large business in lumber both Shingles and staves.

At the last Melancthon Council meeting, a petition was presented by John Rundle, Thos. Doyle and fifty others, praying to have a switch and station erected by the T. G. & B. R. Co. at Corbeton. The same having passed the council, the Clerk was authorized to have a by-law prepared for submission to the Ratepayers. We have no doubt but the by law will be carried.

Dundalk Station.—We are enabled this week ... our esteemed station agent, to give a report of the freight business for Jan. at the above station. There was shipped 5,057,287,lbs., or in other words 252, 864 tons, the freight charges on the above amounted to $4,408, to gether with a passenger fare of $400. The above will give an idea of the business done at our station. We are still of an opinion that the ratepayers should have voted an interest in the financial affairs of the railway.

Six thousand bushels of Potatoes were shipped from here in the same month.

EUPHRASIA COUNCIL.

The members elect of the Township Council of the Township of Euphrasia for the year 1882, being Robert Myles, Esq., Reeve, Thomas Gilray, Esq., Deputy Reeve, Wm. Fawcett, D. R. Ellis, and J. Erskine, Esquires, Councillors.

Said members elect having assembled at the Township Hall, on 16th day of January, made and subscribed their declarations of qualification and of office in due form, deposited the same with the Clerk, and took their seats at the Council Board.

Minutes of last session of Council read and confirmed.

W. H. Dodson, on nomination of the Reeve, and J. Johnston, on nomination of the Council, were appointed Auditors, and a by-law passed accordingly.

J. Clugston was appointed Assessor at a salary of $ 0, and a by law passed accordingly.

L. O. L. No. 394 was permitted the free use of the township hall for the purpose of holding a soiree on the 17th of January.

The Reeve's orders were issued on the Treasurer in favor of T. Allison for $21, being amount charged for statute labor for the years 1876-77-78, against lot 9, con. 8, as it is now made to appear that Robert Mercer did perform the statute labor for said years.

The Clerk was ordered to request the Co. Treasurer to strike from his books the amount of $7, being for statute labor charged against lot 9, con. 8, for the year 1879, as it is now made to appear that the statute labor was performed for said year.

James Falls was appointed caretaker of the Township hall at a salary of ten dollars.

The Reeve and Clerk were appointed a committee to ascertain how arrears of taxes accrued against E. ½ lot 6, con. 2, and E. ½ lot 13, con. 4.

The Reeve and Deputy-Reeve were appointed to take further legal advice in reference to removal of fence from highway.

The Reeve and Deputy-Reeve were appointed a committee to enquire into the validity of the Treasurer's securities, as the law requires.

The time for the Collectors to return their rolls was extended for one month.

The Treasurer was ordered to remit to the Registrar, Owen Sound, $14.05, fees for registering road by-law.

A resolution was passed approving of R. Snelgrove's action in removing fences from highway, and indemnifying him, as pathmaster, against any pecuniary loss or damage in the discharge of his duty.

The Treasurer was ordered to remit to the following named gentlemen the amounts placed opposite to their names for their own services, as Deputy Returning Officers, and that of their Poll Clerks, and in one case a constable at last municipal election, viz: James Struthers, $7.50; N. Hewson, $7.10; N. Curry, $6.70; D. Silverthorn, $6.70; J. Yelland, $7; Henry Ball, $7.50; and also to pay for the use of school houses as polling stations. To Trustees S. S. No. 4, $2; No. 14, $2; No. 15, $2; No. 9, $2; and to pay for use of Orange hall, in Kimberly, $2.

R. Dunlop, Clerk, allowed $20 for services at last election, and the Reeve's order issued accordingly.

The Reeve's orders were issued on the Treasurer to pay as follows:

To Jacob Neeley, $10, for services as caretaker of hall for last year; James Anderson, $2, said sum having been paid by him in excess of the amount placed on the Collector's roll for 1880, when Mr. Anderson was Collector.

Moved by Gilray and Erskine, that this Council adjourn until the first Friday in February next, and that in future this Council meet for the dispatch of business on the first Friday in each month throughout the current year, and that the Clerk give notice to that effect in the Meaford Monitor, Thornbury Standard and Markdale STANDARD. Carried.

ROBT. DUNLOP, Clerk.

A meeting of the Township Council of the Township of Euphrasia was held pursuant to adjournment on the 3rd day of February, 1882.

Members all present. Minutes of last session of Council read and confirmed.

The report of the special committee appointed to examine the validity of the Treasurer's securities laid before Council and adopted.

A petition, signed by William Douglass and 45 others, asking for the opening of sideroad 3 and 4, in 9th and 10th concessions laid before Council, and the Reeve, Messrs. Erskine and Ellis appointed to examine the matter and do what they may deem prudent in the premises.

Moved by Mr. Gilray and Erskine, that as several parties owning parcels of this Township have allowed such land to be placed on the non-resident roll, and employed parties to perform statute labor for said land, thereby causing unnecessary trouble both to the Township council and County Treasurer claiming to be refunded for statute labor, be it therefore

"Resolved that in future no claim of this kind will be entertained by this Council, and that all taxes falling due against non-resident land, including payment for statute labor, must be paid to the County Treasurer—carried."

The Clerk was ordered by resolution to give proper notice of the passing of a by-law to establish a new road to pass through lots 1, 2 and 3, in the 5th con.

The Reeve's orders were issued on the Treasurer to pay as follows:

To R. Dunlop, $11.50, for registering births, marriages and deaths, as per certificate of Inspector; James Ferguson, $58.56, for crossway on 6 and 7 sideroad, concession 5.

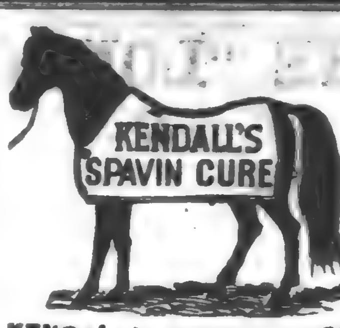
John Griffith, $6.30, for work on town line, the Treasurer to hold the order until he receive the Reeve's certificate that the work is completed.

On motion being made and seconded the Council adjourned until the first Friday in March next.

R. DUNLOP, Clerk.

WHEN DOCTORS DISAGREE WHO SHALL DECIDE?

Nothing is more variable than the different phases of medical men; but when they fail to agree, or to perform a cure in a chronic disease, the patients often decide for themselves, and take Burdock Blood Bitters, and speedily recover. It is the grand key to health that unlocks all the secretions, and liberates the slave from the captivity of disease.



KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

The most successful Remedy ever discovered, as it is certain in its effects and does not blister. READ PROOF BELOW.

FROM THE ONEONTA PRESS, N.Y.

Oneonta, New York, Jan. 6th, 1881.

Early last summer Messrs. J. B. Kendall & Co., of Enosburgh Falls, Vt., made a contract with the publishers of the Press for a half column advertisement for one year setting forth the merits of Kendall's Spavin Cure. At the same time we secured from the firm a quantity of books, entitled Dr. Kendall's Treatise on the Horse and his Diseases, which we are giving to advance paying subscribers of the Press as a premium.

About the time the advertisement first appeared in this paper Mr. P. G. Schermerhorn, who resides near Colliers, had a spavined horse. He read the advertisement and concluded to test the efficacy of the remedy, although his friends laughed at his credulity. He bought a bottle of Kendall's Spavin Cure and commenced using it on the horse in accordance with the directions, and he informed us this week that it effected such a complete cure that an expert horseman, who examined the animal recently could find no trace of the spavin or the place where it had been located. Mr. Schermerhorn has since secured a copy of Kendall's Treatise of the Horse and his Diseases, which he prizes very highly and would be loth to part with at any price, provided he could not obtain another copy. So much for advertising reliable articles.

Kendall's Spavin Cure.

New Hamburg, Ont., Dec. 28th, 1881.

Mr. F. H. McCallum, Dear Sir:—The bottle of Dr. Kendall's Spavin Cure bought of you last summer gave me the utmost satisfaction and performed a wonderful cure upon a mare nineteen years old belonging to me, which was badly spavined for ten years. She was so lame that I could hardly get her to move. The lameness is entirely gone after using half a bottle of the cure, and she is like a young horse again.

Yours truly,

J. F. ROTH.

FROM A

PROMINENT PHYSICIAN.

Washingtonville, Ohio, June 17th, 1880.

Dr. J. B. Kendall & Co., Gents:—Reading your advertisement in Turf, Field and Farm, of Kendall's Spavin Cure, and having a valuable and speedy horse which had been lame from spavin for eighteen months, I sent to you for a bottle by express, which in six weeks removed all lameness and enlargement and a large splint from another horse and both horses are to day as sound as colts. The one bottle was worth to me one hundred dollars.

Respectfully yours,

H. A. BERTOLETT, M. D.

Kendall's Spavin Cure.

ON HUMAN FLESH.

Thousands of trials on human flesh has proved beyond a doubt that "KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE" has sufficient strength to penetrate and virtue to cure the worst cases of rheumatism, corns, bunyons, frost-bites, or any bruise, cut or lameness which are not affected in the least by ordinary liniments. It does not blister but on the contrary removes all soreness.

St. Johns, P.Q., Oct. 27th, 1881.

Dr. B. J. Kendall & Co., Gents:—I have used your Spavin Cure with great success on spavins, curbs and splints. I know it to be a good remedy for ringbones, bone spavins, curbs, galls and all kinds of lameness and many other difficulties about the horse. One of my men sprained his ankle badly. I applied Kendall's Spavin Cure and I never saw anything work like it, he was well in a few days. I know it to be good for man as well as beast. I procured one of your Treatise on the Horse, [illegible] for 25c. I think it was [illegible] on one horse that I [illegible] according to the directions [illegible] stifle.

Yours truly,

[illegible] J. PEARSON.

[illegible], P.Q., March [illegible], 1879.

Dr. B. J. Kendall & Co., Gents:—About a year ago I fell on the ice and was badly hurt in the hip joint, which caused me much suffering. I tried various remedies but none gave relief until I tried Kendall's Spavin Cure. I applied it full strength twice a day for two weeks during last October and it effected a perfect cure. I have since then been well and free from lameness. It is very valuable for man as well as beast.

Yours truly,

CHESTER K. GREEN.

Kendall's Spavin Cure.

Is sure in its effects, mild in actions as it does not blister, yet it is penetrating and powerful to reach every deep seated pain or to remove any bony growth or other enlargements, such as spavins, splints, curbs, ringbones, calous, swellings and any lameness and all enlargements of the joints or limbs, or for rheumatism in man or for any purpose for which a liniment is used for man or beast. It is now known to be the best liniment for man ever used, acting mild and yet certain in its effects.

Send address for illustrated circular which we think gives positive proof of its virtues. No remedy has ever met with such unqualified success to our knowledge, for beast as well as man.

Price $1 per bottle, or six bottles for $5. All Druggists have it or can get it for you, or it will be sent to any address on receipt of price by the proprietors, DR. B. J. KENDALL & CO., Enosburgh Falls, Vt.

ESTABLISHMENT

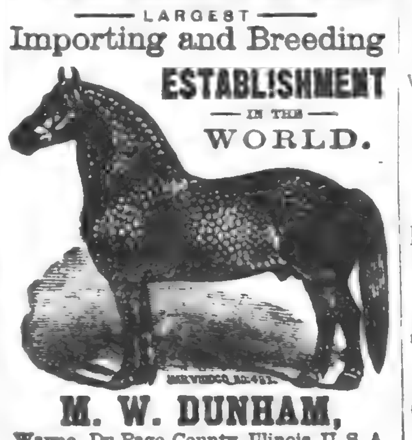
WORLD.



M. W. DUNHAM,

During the past 17 months 360 STALLIONS AND MARES have been imported from France to this establishment, being MORE than the combined importations of all other importers of Draft Horses from all parts of Europe for any one year.

One-fifth of the entire number of Imported French Horses in America can be seen on his farm. His Importations have included the Prize Winners of the Universal Exposition, Paris, 1878, and nearly all the Prize Horses of the Great Shows of France since his importations began. They also carried off the honors at the Centennial, 1876; and, at the Great Chicago [illegible] of PERCHERONS, (in competition with the largest and finest collection of Clydesdales ever shown, consisting of the prize winners at the Great Shows of Scotland and England,) was awarded the Grand Sweepstakes Prize of $1,000 and Grand Gold Medal.

Mechanical Orguinette.

An Automatic Reed Organ.

"The Orguinette may now be called a celebrated instrument. In tone it is akin to the Cabinet Organ, but the organ must be manipulated by an artist in order to produce music; the ORGUINETTE is on the other hand entirely mechanical in its action, and at a trifling expense it can be made to furnish an unlimited supply of all kinds of music. —Toronto Globe."

"The Orguinette is indeed a musical wonder. It is a miniature reed organ, with as strong and melodious a tone as the Cabinet Size. It surpasses the Cabinet Organ for the reason that the ignoramus in music can play it as well as the most accomplished professor. THE ORGUINETTE is strong and accurate in its mechanism, and consequently not liable to get out of order."—Montreal Gazette.

"The Orguinette is the most perfect automatic musical instrument yet invented; its repertoire is unlimited, the tone is remarkably good."—Montreal Star.

A LECTURE TO YOUNG MEN
ON THE LOSS OF
MANHOOD
WE have recently published a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical and nervous Debility, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage etc., resulting from exce-ses.
☞ Price, in a sealed envelope, only 6 cts., or two postage stamps.
The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicines or the use of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.
☞ This Lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

A WONDERFUL WOMAN.

CHAPTER XVII. Continued.

The fiery words scourged him, averted faces met him on every side. And calm and white Katherine lay before him, with closed eyes and folded hands, most of all. Without a word he slunk away like a whipped hound, the door closed upon him, and he stood under the black winter night.

Alone! Would he ever be alone again? Sleeping and walking, would not that terrible, white, fixed face pursue him? 'Dead,' I will come back from the grave, if the dead can.

Would the words she had spoken, the dreadful words he had laughed at once, ever cease to ring in his ears now? Would they not haunt him until they drove him mad?

Sir Peter Dangerfield rode home.

Home! What was Scarswood better than a haunted house now? He shut himself up in his library, lighted the room to more than the brilliance of day, locked the door, seized the brandy bottle and deliberately drank himself into a state of beastly stupor. When morning dawned, Sir Peter, lying on the hearth rug, was far beyond the fear of ghosts or goblins in heavy, bestial sleep.

And Katherine Dangerfield was dead. The papers recorded it, the town rang with it—the whole neighbourhood was utterly shocked. The little cottage on the outskirts of Castleford awoke and found itself famous. Crowds flocked hither all day on foot and in carriages, poor and rich, to look on that placid, dead face. And so the tragedy at Scarsdood had ended thus. Sir John Dangerfield lay in his tomb, Gaston Dantree, the brilliant adventurer, lay in his darkened room hovering between life and death and Katherine so bright, so dashing, so full of life and hope, and love and happiness only a few brief weeks ago, lay here—like this. 'In the midst of life we are in death,' Every body shook their heads and quoted that; the funeral sermon was preached from it. All who had ever known her bowed down now in reverence before the solemn wonder of the winding sheet.

People came forward—two or three of the country families, the Talbots at head—and offers to take the body and have the obsequies of appropiate grandeur. But Henry Otis set those resolute lips of his, and doggedly refused:

'It was to me she came in her trouble,' he answered, 'not to you. No man alive has a better right or a stronger claim now than I. And I'll never give her up. She refused all your aid alive, she shall not seek it dead. From my house she goes to yonder churchyard, I will give her up to none of you.

Edith Talbott never left the house. She sat by her dead friend, weeping incessantly. Feeling against the new baronet ran very high and bitterly. No one knew but old Hannah of the terrible insult of that other night, but everybody suspected foul play. He made no appearance among them but shut himself up in his gloomy mansion and drowned thought in drink.

The funeral took place two days after, and one by one they dropped away to their homes, Edith Talbot among the last, still crying behind her veil, and led away by her brother.

And then Henry Otis stood alone over the grave of the woman he loved and had lost. He stood with folded arms while the short, dark gloaming ran on, his hat lying beside him, the keen wind lifted his hair unheeded. He had loved her as he never would love another woman, and this was the end.

'KATHERINE,
ÆTAT 17.
RESURGAM.'

That was all, no second name. Who knew what that name might be, or if she really had any claim to any name whatever? And so while he stood there, the twilight fell, and it was his mother's voice, calling plaintively, that aroused him at last.

'Henry, Henry! come home, dear! You will get your death standingthere bareheaded in the cold!'

An hour later, when the slender crescent moon lifted her sicle over the blue sea line, another pilgrim came to that new made grave, fearfully, and by stealth.

Peter Dangerfield had not dared to come to the funeral, but he came now to the grave. He was still horribly afraid but all the same, he could not stay away. Katherine dead! that bright dashing young Amazon, whose laugh had rang so clear, whose eyes had flashed, so bright. Katherine dead! And they called him her murderer.

He made his way along the narrow pathway, worn by humble feet, to the spot where they had laid her. The faint new moon flickered on the granite cross. He knelt on one knee, and read the inscription:

KATHERINE,
ÆTAT 17.
RESURGAM.

What a brief record it was! And Resurgam—what did that word mean he wondered, stupidly. Then it dawned upon him. Resurgam meant, 'I shall rise again.' 'I shall rise again!'

From her very grave the dead girl spoke and threatened him.

How long he lingered there he never knew. He felt half stupifiedly, partly with the liquor he had been drinking partly with abject fear, partly with cold. He was all cramped and stiff when at last he rose to go. His horse stood outside the little gate. He mounted him, let the reins fall up on his neck, while his head sank upon his breast. How the animal made his way home, how he got into the house how he got into his own room, into bed, he could never have told. All that shone out vividly from that night in his after life was the dream that followed.

He was wandering through the dark and unknown country—bleak and forsaken. He could see the stars in the sky, the new moon, a solitary fir-tree, and grave stones everywhere. It was one perpetual graveyard, and a spectral figure, with long, floating brown hair, and waving white arms, beckoned him on and on. He could not see the face, but he knew it was Katherine. He was tired, and sick, and cold, and footsore. Their dismal road ended at last in a gastly precipice where, looking down, sheer thousand feet below, he saw a seething hell of water. Then his shadowy guide turned, and he saw Katherine Dangerfield's dead face. The stiff lips parted, and the sweet, strong voice spoke as of old:

'Living, I will pursue you to the ends of the earth, Dead, I will come back from the grave, if the dead can!'

The words she had spoken in her passionate outburst she spoke again. Then her arms encircled around him then he was lifted up, then with a shriek of terror he was hurled over that dizzy cliff—and awoke sitting up in bed, trembling in every limb.

Only a dream! And was this night only a beggining of the end?

PART II.

CPAPTER I.

LA REINE BLANCHE.

The place was her Majesty's Theatre—the opera, Filgia Reggimento'—the week of the London season—and the scene was brilliant beyonddescription. 'All the world' was there, and the prima donna was that sweetest of singers, the loveliest of women, that most charming of actresses, Mademoiselle Nillson.

Her Majesty's was full—one dazzling blaze of light from dome to parquet, tier upon tier of magnificently dressed women, a blaze of diamonds, a glow of rainbow bouquets, a flutter of fans, a sparkle of bright eyes, a vision of fair faces, and light and warmth, and Donizetti's matchlessmusic sweeping and surging over all.

The house had just settled back into its seats, for a few moments the whole audience had risen, en masse, at the entrance of royalty. In the royal box now sat the Prince and Princess of Wales, Prince Arthur and the Princess Louise.

The bell had tinkled for the rising of the curtain upon the second act of the opera when a fashionable late party of three entered one of the proscenium boxes, and a thousand eyes and as many 'double barrels' turned instantly in that direction. You saw at once that these late arrivals were people of note, and looking with them you would merely glance at two of the party, and then your eyes would have fixed, as countless eyes then did, upon the third face—a wonderfully fair face. The party were the Earl of Ruysland, his only daughter, the Lady Cecil Clive, and his niece Ginevra, Lady Dangerfield. And the Earl of Ruysland's only daughter had been the most brilliant belle of this London season, as he had been of the two proceedings, and not in all that dazzling house, not in the royal box itself, looked forth a fairer, sweeter face than that which looked with perfect self possession over the audience now.

She had advanced to the front at once with high bred composure, drawn back the curtain with one slim, gloved hand, and leaned ever so slightly forward, with a half smile upon her face. In that musical interlude, before the rising of the curtain for the second time, countless bows and smiles greeted her, whichever way she turned. All the lorgnetters in the house seemed for an instant aimed at the fair face and queenly head, up held with a stage like grace, but to my Lady Cecil that was a very old story, and with all her womanish love of adoration, something of a weary one. She lay back in her chair, after that first sweep of the house, threw back her operacloak, all silk, swan's down, and snow cashmere, as seemingly indifferent to all those eyes as though she sat in the theatre alone.

A belle of Belgravia, yes, lady Cecil was that. It was a marvellously brilliant face on which the lamplight shone, with its complexion of pearl, with its soft, large, luxurous brown, gazelle eyes, its trailing hazel hair, bound back with pearl and roses, the haughty carriage of the dainty head, the pure Greek type of feature, the swaying grace of the tall, white form. A rarely perfect face, and as sweet as perfect, with its dreamy, tender eyes, its gravely gentle smile. You would hardly have dreamed, looking at its delusive innocence, how much mischief my Lady Cecil had done in her day, how much, the gods willing, she meant to do. Those brown serene eyes had slain their thousand and ten of thousands, that delusively gentle smile had driven men blind and mad, insanity called love. A pear-faced, hazel eyed Circe who led her victims down a flower strewn path with words and smiles of honey, only to leave them stranded high and dry on the desolate quicksands of disappointment where the bones of her victims bleached. A flirt by nature—a coquette ripe for mischief, a beauty without mercy and without heart—that was her character, as half the men in London would have told you.

And yet—and yet—how lovely she looked to-night! how radiant! how spotless! Dressed for some after ball, the loose falling opera cloak showed you a robe of loose silk, decollete, of course, soft touches of soft point lace, a cluster of rich moss roses of rich corsage, and lace draperies falling open from the pearley arm. Looking at her as she sat there, you were half inclined, knowing all the enormities, to forgive the deeds of darkness wrought by so peerless a siren. Fair and fatal, and when in repose, even with a touch of sadness, there was something in it that made you paraphrase the words of the sculptor, speaking of Charles Stuart, 'something evil will befall her, she carries misfortune on her face.'

Her companion was a very excellent foil to the fair, pale, pensive beauty of the earl's daughter. Lady Dangerfield was a brunette of the most pronounced type, petite, four-and-thirty years old, and by lamplight, in diamonds and silks, still young and still pretty. Her black hair built up in braids, and puffs, and curls, unapproachable of Parisian hair dressers was a marvel of art in itself. There was a flush on either sallow cheek—art or nature? who shall say?—and if the purple tinting under the eyelids make those black orbs any longer, bigger, brighter, than when they came first from the land of a beneficent province whose business was it but the lady's own?

From the Earl of Ruysland—tall, thin, refined, patrician, and fastidious—he was fifty odd, with a venerable bald head, shining like a biliard ball, and two tired, gray eyes. He had been a handsome man in his day—a spedthrift, a gambler, a dandy, a member of the famous Beefstake Club in his youth. He had run through two fortunes, and now stood confessed the poorest man in Britain.

Two young men [in] the stalls had been among the first to take aim at the new comers, at Lady Cecil, rather, and the longest to stare.

'La Reine Blanche is looking her best to-night. Few reining beauties stand the wear and tear of three seasons as the White Queen does.'

'La Reine Blanche! his companion repeated. 'I always meant to ask you, Delamer, why they called her that. A pretty idea, too. Why?'

'From some real or fancied resemblance to that other La Reine Blanche, Marie Stuart—dazzling and doomed.'

Starer No. 2 put up his lorgnette and took another survey.

'Not fancied, Delamer—there is a resemblance—quite striking. The same oval face, the same Greek type, the same expression, half-tender, half-melancholy, half-disdainful. If Mary the Queen had a tithe of that beauty, I can understand how even the hard-headed Scottish commoners were roused to enthusiasm as she rode through their midst, and cried out as one man, "God bless that sweet face!"

'That will do, Wyatt. Don't you get roused to enthusiasm; and don't look too long at Ruysland's peerless daughter; she is like those—what's their names—sirens, you know, who lured poor devils to death and doom. She's a thorough-paced flirt; her coquetries have been as numberless as the stars, and not half so eternal. She's the highest-priced Circassian in Mayfair, and you might as well love some bright particular star, etc.; and besides, it is au courant at the clubs that she was bidden in and bought ages ago by some tremendously wealthy Cornish baronet, wandering at present in foreign parts. He's a sensible fellow, gives Queenie—they call her Queenie—no end of margin for flirting, until it suits his sultanship to return, pay the price, and claim his property. Look at Nillsson instead. She's married, and a marchioness; but it's not half so dangerous, believe me, as gazing at La Reine Blanche.'

'I'm not looking at your La Reine Blanche,' Wyatt answered; 'I'm looking at that man yonder—you see him?—very tall, very tanned, very military. If Redmond O'Donnell be in the land of the living, that is he.'

Delamer whirled around, as nearly excited as the principles of his life would allow a dandy of the Foreign office to be.

'What! Redmond O'Donnell! the man we met two years ago in Algiers—Le Beau Chasseur, as they used to call him, and the best of good fellows. By George! you'r right, Wyatt; it is O'Donnell! Let us join him at once.'

A few moments later, and the two embryo diplomats from the F. O. had made their way to the side of the tall, soldierly, sunburnt man who sat quite alone three tiers behind.

'What! you, O'Donnell! I give you my word I'd as soon have expected to see Pio Nono sitting out the opera as Le Beau Chasseur. Glad to see you in England, dear old boy, all the same. When did you come?'

The man addressed looked up—his dark, grave face lighting into brightness and warmth as he smiled. It was a handsome face, a thoroughly Celtic face, despite the golden tan of an African sun, with blue eyes, to which long, black lashes lent softness and depth, profuse dark brown hair, and most desirable curling mustache. It was a gallant figure, straight, tall, and strong as a Norway pine, and with a true trooper swing.

'Delamer—Wyatt—this is a surprise!' He shook hands cordially with the two men, with a smile and a glance pleasant to see. 'When did I come? Only reached London at noon to-day, after a smooth run from New Orleans of twenty-two days.'

'New Orleans! And what the deuce took Captain O'Donnell, of the Third Chasseurs d'Afrique, to New Orleans?'

'A family matter—I'll tell you later. As we only remain a day or two in London, I thought I would drop into Her Majesty's and hear Nillsson for the first time.

'We! O'Donnell; don't tell me there's a lady in the case—that the madness of matrimony has seized you—that you have taken to yourself a wife of the daughters of the land. You Irishmen are all alike, fighting and love-making—love-making and fighting. Ah!' Mr. Delamer shook his head and sighed faintly; 'she isn't an Arab, I hope—is she?'

O'Donnell laughed.

'There's a lady in the case, but not a wife. Don't you know I have a sister, Delamer? Have no fears for me—my weaknesses are many and great—for fighting, if you like, but not for love-making. A brilliant scene, this, and faces fair enough to tempt even so austere an anchorite as Gordon Delamer.'

'Fair faces, surely,' Wyatt said. 'What do you, fresh from the desert, think of La Reine Blanche—that brown haired goddess, whose earthly name is Cecil Clive?'

'Who?'

Suddenly and sharply the captain of Chasseurs asked the question.

'Lady Cecil Clive. What, O'Donnell! has the spell of the enchantress stretched all the way to Africa, and netted you, too, in her rose chains? Is it possible you know La Reine Blanche?

'No,' the chasseur answered, with a touch of impatience. 'I don't know your La Reine Blanche. I know—that is, I once knew, very long ago—Lady Cecil Clive.'

FAITHLESS.

Events have recently transpired in a town in South Simcoe have created a sensation in all ranks of society. In order to place the circumstances in a proper light before the public it is necessary to go back to events which occurred two years ago. At that time the daughter of one of the wealthiest residents of the town married a young law student. The girl was fresh from boarding school, was pretty and facinating, a charming singer and good pianist, and was in every sense of the word just the sort of girl to impress the susceptible heart of the young student of Blackstone. Her parents were opposed to the match, owing to her intended husband's poverty; but their scruples being overcome, they consented to the match. After marriage the young husband found his position peculiarly trying. If his new relatives did not directly charge him with his poverty and living at the expense of others, they at least hinted it so often that the young benedict found his position so uncomfortable that he determined upon leaving his bride of a month and going to push his fortune in California.

A LOVER APPEARS.

Six months after the husband had left his bride a handsome traveller for a Montreal house appeared in the town. He was introduced to the young wife's father, and by him to his family. The wife of the absent student and minor was residing with her parents at the time, and the Montrealer became at once impressed with her charms. Apparently the attachment was reciprocal. Sleigh drives, balls, and social parties found this gay young commercial traveller and the pretty bride inseperable companions. At last rumor united their names in a manner not at all flattering to the young lady, but apparently they were indifferent about public opinion and heedless of consequences. A month after they had become acquainted society was startled by the rumoured elopement of the "commercial" and the bride of eight months.

The lady who signalized herself in such a notorious manner was partially restored to public favor on the often reiterated allegations of her parents that her husband had been killed in the mines of Nevada.

HUSBAND NO. 1 ON THE STAGE.

The "commercial" and his much-wedded wife engaged in business and were prospering. To all appearance she was happy, and if a thought of her first husband flitted through her mind, it was not reflected in her countenance. About two weeks ago the first husband appeared upon the scene. He was aware of what had happened, and had the melancholly satisfaction of gazing through the window, like a modern Enoch Arden, at the beautiful woman, once his own but now another's. He did not, like Enoch, sigh for his lost love, and leave her to her new found happiness. He was of a more practical turn of mind, and as he did not desire to repossess himself of his false wife, like a true student of law, negotiated with husband No. 2, the result being that husband No. 1 received a solation to the extent of $1,000. Strange to add, this wife of two husbands was almost indifferent to the result of the consultation having such particular reference to herself. If they could agree about her ownership she would be satisfied with the decision. So the matter stands at present, and it is not likely that an appeal to the law will be made.

A workman was examining a hole which he had bored in a factory floor at New Britain, Conn., when his eye was destroyed by a red hot iron thrust through from the other side.

Prof. Huxley says that those who have taken an active part in science should be killed at sixty, as not being flexible enough to yield to the advance of new ideas. He is himself nearly fifty-seven.

During the past year 2,039 vessels were wrecked and property estimated at $1,400,000,000 destroyed. Add to the property lost in fires and see what an appalling amount of capital is utterly lost.

FEES AND DOCTORS.—The fees of doctors is an item that very many persons are interested in just at present. We believe the schedule for visits is $3.00, which would tax a man confined to his bed for a year, and need of daily visits, over $1,000 a year for medical attendance alone! And one single bottle of Hop Bitters taken in time would save the $1,000 and all the year's sickness.—Post

HORRIBLE SUICIDE.

A HAMILTON MAN CUTS HIS THROAT FROM EAR TO EAR.

HAMILTON, Feb. 18.—Shortly before twelve noon to day a most determined suicide took place at 80 Cherry-street, in the southern part of the city. The man who committed the act is named Wm. Smith, aged about sixty, who came to Canada about 11 years ago, and has been a respected resident in Hamilton for four years. He is an Englishman having served in the Royal Artilery. When he was honourable discharged he was farrier-sergeant in the artillery. He has for some time been suffering from asthma and has been confined to the house for some days. He followed the occupation of a gardener. He apparantly was very despondent, and showed symptons of insanity. About 11 o'clock to day he

ASKED FOR A RAZOR

to clean his nails. This was usual. Mrs. Smith handed him the article, she being seated at his side. The only thing being unusual to her in his appearance was that he looked all around the room, staring when she asked him what was the matter. Not fearing anything, she was composed, when all at once she observed he was struggling on the lounge on which he was seated in the front room, and to her terror he had the razor to his throat, and was cutting away with all his strength. She seized his hand, and the suicide and his wife had

A FEARFUL STRUGGLE.

Nor did he relax his determined effort till he had cut his head half off and fell forward on the floor, dying in a few minutes. On the floor where he had fell are great pools of blood, and a pillow which he had on his knees was saturated. The sight was fearful to look at. His clothing was dyed to his feet. Mrs. Smith had called her next door neighbour, Mrs. Reid, who ran in at once, in time only to see him make a dying quiver. Mr. Smith was a member of the Babtist Church, and is spoken of by his wife and neighbours as a good living man. He leaves a wife with no children.

Coroner Wolverton was called and upon viewing the body decided at once that an inquest was unnecessary, as it was a clear case of suicide.

RAILWAY ACCIDENT AT COLLINGWOOD.

COLLINGWOOD, Feb. 4.—A rather serious accident happened here to-night on the main line of the Northern and North-Western railway. As No. 3 mixed train from Toronto, due at 6.50 p. m., was approaching the yard one of the switch cranks broke. The engine and one box car kept on the main line, but the rest of the train took the siding. Some six freight cars are more or less damaged, some of them being smashed into kindling wood. None of the passenger cars left the track, but those on board had a narrow escape and a terrible shaking up. As the engine and one of the freight cars parted from the rest of the train, Brakesman Frank Lewis was in the act of stepping from one car to the other, but unfortunately he was not in time and was thrown to the ground from the top of the cars, and had his left arm badly mangled by a wheel passing over it. He also received other injuries about the head, but these are not of a serious nature. It was subsequently found necessary to amputate the left arm at the elbow. At last accounts the injured man was progressing favourably. As soon as the accident happened an auxiliary car was despatched from Allandale, and the wreckage was cleared away, causing but a few hours' delay to traffic on the line.—Monitor.

CLIPPINGS FROM OUR EXCHANGES.

GRANGE ANNIVERSARY.—The fifth anniversary of the Glenelg Grange was held in their Hall, Edge Hill, on Wednesday evening, the first inst. The hall was filled to its utmost capacity, and ample provisions of the richest kind provided by the ladies were liberally served out to all present. James Edge, Esq., Master, occupied the chair and a very pleasant time was spent in listening to addresses, readings, recitations and songs given on this occasion. The Grange is in a very flourishing condition as it has been since its commencement.—Review.

SUDDEN DEATH.—At the Soiree at Middle Station on Thursday evening a sad calamity occurred. A child of Mr. David McCrie, Normanby, and grandsone of Mr. Walter Tucker, of Durham, which was at the Soiree and when just about Departing for home, was found to be dead. Much sympathy is felt for the parents in their sudden affliction.—Review.

A sneak thief stopped seven horse cars in Memphis, but not after the manner of a highwayman. He entered a boarding-house where seven drivers were asleep, and stole their watches and wallets. A rule of the company requires each driver to have a watch and $10 at the outset of every trip; and as the manager would not make an exception on this occasion, the cars of the robbed men did not start.

Two lives were not lost, but saved, by a railroad accident at Newcomerstown, Ohio. A freight car was smashed by a collision, and in it were found two men insensible from cold. They had sneaked in for a free ride, the door had been locked, and, as they lay near the roof on some cotton bales, without room to move their limbs, a night at zero would have killed them if they had not by chance been discovered.

A WONDERFUL WOMAN.

CHAPTER XVII. Continued.

The fiery words scourged him, averted faces met him on every side. And calm and white Katherine lay before him, with closed eyes and folded hands, most of all. Without a word he slunk away like a whipped hound, the door closed upon him, and he stood under the black winter night.

Alone! Would he ever be alone again? Sleeping and walking, would not that terrible, white, fixed face pursue him? 'Dead,' I will come back from the grave, if the dead can.

Would the words she had spoken, the dreadful words he had laughed at once, ever cease to ring in his ears now? Would they not haunt him until they drove him mad?

Sir Peter Dangerfield rode home.

Home! What was Scarswood better than a haunted house now? He shut himself up in his library, lighted the room to more than the brilliance of day, locked the door, seized the brandy bottle and deliberately drank himself into a state of beastly stupor. When morning dawned, Sir Peter, lying on the hearth rug, was far beyond the fear of ghosts or goblins in heavy, bestial sleep.

And Katherine Dangerfield was dead. The papers recorded it, the town rang with it—the whole neighbourhood was utterly shocked. The little cottage on the outskifts of Castleford awoke and found itself famous. Crowds flocked hither all day on foot and in carriages, poor and rich, to look on that placid, dead face. And so the tragedy at Scarsdood had ended thus. Sir John Dangerfield lay in his tomb, Gaston Dantree, the brilliant adventurer, lay in his darkened room hovering between life and death and Katherine so bright, so dashing, so full of life and hope, and love and happiness only a few brief weeks ago, lay here—like this. 'In the midst of life we are in death,' Every body shook their heads and quoted that; the funeral sermon was preached from it. All who had ever known her bowed down now in reverence before the solemn wonder of the winding sheet.

People came forward—two or three of the country families, the Talbots at head—and offers to take the body and have the obsequies of appropriate grandeur. But Henry Otis set those resolute lips of his, and doggedly refused.

'It was to me she came in her trouble,' he answered, 'not to you. No man alive has a better right or a stronger claim now than I. And I'll never give her up. She refused all your aid alive, she shall not seek it dead. From my house she goes to yonder churchyard, I will give her up to none of you.

Edith Talbott never left the house. She sat by her dead friend, weeping incessantly. Feeling against the new baronet ran very high and bitterly. No one knew but old Hannah of the terrible insult of that other night, but everybody suspected foul play. He made no appearance among them but shut himself up in his gloomy mansion and drowned thought in drink.

The funeral took place two days after, and one by one they dropped away to their homes, Edith Talbot among the last, still crying behind her veil, and led away by her brother.

And then Henry Otis stood alone over the grave of the woman he loved and had lost. He stood with folded arms while the short, dark gloaming ran on, his hat lying beside him, the keen wind lifted his hair unheeded. He had loved her as he never would love another woman, and this was the end.

'KATHERINE,
ÆTAT 17.
RESURGAM.'

That was all, no second name. Who knew what that name might be, or if she really had any claim to any name whatever? And so while he stood there, the twilight fell, and it was his mother's voice, calling plaintively, that aroused him at last.

'Henry, Henry! come home, dear! You will get your death standing there bareheaded in the cold!'

An hour later, when the slender crescent moon lifted her sickle over the blue sea line, another pilgrim came to that new made grave, fearfully, and by stealth.

Peter Dangerfield had not dared to come to the funeral, but he came now to the grave. He was still horribly afraid but all the same, he could not stay away. Katherine dead! that bright dashing young Amazon, whose laugh had rang so clear, whose eyes had flashed, so bright. Katherine dead! And they called him her murderer.

He made his way along the narrow pathway, worn by humble feet, to the spot where they had laid her. The faint new moon flickered on the granite cross. He knelt on one knee and read the inscription:

KATHERINE,
ÆTAT 17.
RESURGAM.

What a brief record it was! And Resurgam—what did that word mean he wondered, stupidly. Then it dawned upon him Resurgam meant, 'I shall rise again.' 'I shall rise again!'

From her very grave the dead girl spoke and threatened him.

How long he lingered there he never knew. He felt half stupifiedly, partly with the liquor he had been drinking partly with abject fear, partly with cold. He was all cramped and stiff when at last he rose to go. His horse stood outside the little gate. He mounted him, let the reins fall up on his neck, while his head sank upon his breast. How the animal made his way home, how he got into the house how he got into his own room, into bed, he could never have told. All that shone out vividly from that night in his after life was the dream that followed.

He was wandering through the dark and unknown country—bleak and forsaken. He could see the stars in the sky, the new moon, a solitary fir-tree, and grave stones everywhere. It was one perpetual graveyard, and a spectral figure, with long, floating brown hair, and waving white arms, beckoned him on and on. He could not see the face, but he knew it was Katherine. He was tired, and sick, and cold, and footsore. Their dismal road ended at last in a gastly precipice where, looking down, sheer thousands of feet below, he saw a seething hell of water. Then his shadowy guide turned, and he saw Katherine Dangerfield's dead face. The stiff lips parted, and the sweet, strong voice spoke as of old:

'Living, I will pursue you to the ends of the earth, Dead, I will come back from the grave, if the dead can!'

The words she had spoken in her passionate outburst she spoke again. Then her arms encircled around him then he was lifted up, then with a shriek of terror he was hurled over that dizzy cliff—and awoke sitting up in bed, trembling in every limb.

Only a dream! And was this night only a beggining of the end?

PART II.

CPAPTER I.

LA REINE BLANCHE.

The place was her Majesty's Theatre—the opera, Filgia Reggimento'—the week of the London season—and the scene was brilliant beyond description. 'All the world' was there, and the prima donna was that sweetest of singers, the loveliest of women, that most charming of actresses, Mademoiselle Nillson.

Her Majesty's was full—one dazzling blaze of light from dome to parquet, tier upon tier of magnificiently dressed women, a blaze of diamonds, a glow of rainbow bouquets, a flutter of fans, a sparkle of bright eyes, a vision of fair faces, and light and warmth, and Donizetti's matchless music sweeping and surging over all.

The house had just settled back into its seats, for a few moments the whole audience had risen, en masse, at the entrance of royalty. In the royal box now sat the Prince and Princess of Wales, Prince Arthur and the Princess Louise.

The bell had tinkled for the rising of the curtain upon the second act of the opera when a fashionable late party of three entered one of the proscenium boxes, and a thousand eyes and as many 'double barrels' turned instantly in that direction. You saw at once that these late arrivals were people of note, and looking with them you would merely glance at two of the party, and then your eyes would have fixed, as countless eyes then did, upon the third face—a wonderfully fair face. The party were the Earl of Ruysland, his only daughter, the Lady Cecil Clive, and his niece Ginevra, Lady Dangerfield. And the Earl of Ruysland's only daughter had been the most brilliant belle of this London season, as he had been of the two proceedings, and not in all that dazzling house, not in the royal box itself, looked forth a fairer, sweeter face than that which looked with perfect self possession over the audience now.

She had advanced to the front at once with high bred composure, drawn back the curtain with one slim, gloved hand, and leaned ever so slightly forward, with a half smile upon her face. In that musical interlude, before the rising of the curtain for the second time, countless bows and smiles greeted her, whichever way she turned. All the lorgnetters in the house seemed for an instant aimed at the fair face and queenly head, up held with a stage like grace, but to my Lady Cecil that was a very old story, and with all her womanish love of adoration, something of a weary one. She lay back in her chair, after that first sweep of the house, threw back her operacloak, all silk, swan's down, and snow cashmere, as seemingly indifferent to all those eyes as though she sat in the theatre alone.

A belle of Belgravia, yes, lady Cecil was that. It was a marvellously brilliant face on which the lamplight shone, with its complexion of pearl, with its soft, large, luxurous brown, gazelle eyes, its trailing hazel hair, bound back with pearl and roses, the haughty carriage of the dainty head, the pure Greek type of feature, the swaying grace of the tall, white form. A rarely perfect face, and as sweet as perfect, with its dreamy, tender eyes, its gravely gentle smile. You would hardly have dreamed, looking at its delusive innocence, how much mischief my Lady Cecil had done in her day, how much, the gods willing, she meant to do. Those brown serene eyes had slain their thousand and ten of thousands, that delusively gentle smile had driven men blind and mad, insanity called love. A pear-faced, hazel eyed Circe who led her victims down a flower strewn path with words and smiles of honey, only to leave them stranded high and dry on the desolate quicksands of disappointment where the bones of her victims bleached. A flirt by nature—a coquette ripe for mischief, a beauty without mercy and without heart—that was her character, as half the men in London would have told you.

And yet—and yet—how lovely she looked to-night! how radient! how spotless! Dressed for some after ball, the loose falling opera cloak showed you a robe of loose silk, decollete, of course, soft touches of soft point lace, a cluster of rich moss roses of rich corsage, and lace draperies falling open from the pearley arm. Looking at her as she sat there, you were half inclined, knowing all the enormities, to forgive the deeds of darkness wrought by so peerless a siren. Fair and fatal, and when in repose, even with a touch of sadness, there was something in it that made you paraphrase the words of the sculptor, speaking of Charles Stuart, 'something evil will befall her, she carries misfortune on her face.'

Her companion was a very excellent foil to the fair, pale, pensive beauty of the earl's daughter. Lady Dangerfield was a brunette of the most pronounced type, petite, four-and-thirty years old, and by lamplight, in diamonds and silks, still young and still pretty. Her black hair built up in braids, and puffs, and curls, unapproachable of Parisian hair dressers was a marvel of art in itself. There was a flush on either sallow cheek—art or nature? who shall say?—and if the purple tinting under the eyelids make those black orbs any longer, bigger, brighter, than when they came first from the land of a beneficent province whose business was it but the lady's own?

From the Earl of Ruysland—tall, thin, refined, patrician, and fastidious—he was fifty odd, with a venerable bald head, shining like a biliard ball, and two tired, gray eyes. He had been a handsome man in his day—a spedthrift, a gambler, a dandy, a member of the famous Beefstake Club in his youth. He had run through two fortunes, and now stood confessed the poorest man in Britain.

Two young men in the stalls had been among the first to take aim at the new comers, at Lady Cecil, rather, and the longest to stare.

'La Reine Blanche is looking her best to-night. Few reining beauties stand the wear and tear of three seasons as the White Queen does.'

'La Reine Blanche!' his companion repeated. 'I always meant to ask you, Delamer, why they called her that. A pretty idea, too. Why?'

'From some real or fancied resemblance to that other La Reine Blanche, Marie Stuart—dazzling and doomed.'

Starer No. 2 put up his lorgnette and took another survey.

'Not fancied, Delamer—there is a resemblance—quite striking. The same oval face, the same Greek type, the same expression, half-tender, half-melancholy, half-disdainful. If Mary the Queen had a tithe of that beauty, I can understand how even the hard-headed Scottish commoners were roused to enthusiasm as she rode through their midst, and cried out as one man, "God bless that sweet face!"

'That will do, Wyatt. Don't you get roused to enthusiasm; and don't look too long at Ruysland's peerless daughter; she is like those—what's their names—sirens, you know, who lured poor devils to death and doom. She's a thorough-paced flirt; her coquetries have been as numberless as the stars, and not half so eternal. She's the highest-priced Circassian in Mayfair, and you might as well love some bright particular star, etc.; and besides, it is au courant at the clubs that she was bidden in and bought ages ago by some tremendously wealthy Cornish baronet, wandering at present in foreign parts. He's a sensible fellow, gives Queenie—they call her Queenie—no end of margin for flirting, until it suits his sultanship to return, pay the price, and claim his property. Look at Nillsson instead. She's married, and a marchioness; but it's not half so dangerous, believe me, as gazing at La Reine Blanche.'

'I'm not looking at your La Reine Blanche,' Wyatt answered; 'I'm looking at that man yonder—you see him?—very tall, very tanned, very military. If Redmond O'Donnell be in the land of the living, that is he.'

Delamer whirled around, as nearly excited as the principles of his life would allow a dandy of the Foreign office to be.

'What! Redmond O'Donnell! the man we met two years ago in Algiers—Le Beau Chasseur, as they used to call him, and the best of good fellows. By George! you'r right, Wyatt; it is O'Donnell! Let us join him at once.'

A few moments later, and the two embryo diplomats from the F. O. had made their way to the side of the tall, soldierly, sunburnt man who sat quite alone three tiers behind.

'What! you, O'Donnell! I give you my word I'd as soon have expected to see Pio Nono sitting out the opera as Le Beau Chasseur. Glad to see you in England, dear old boy, all the same. When did you come?'

The man addressed looked up—his dark, grave face lighting into brightness and warmth as he smiled. It was a handsome face, a thoroughly Celtic face, despite the golden tan of an African sun, with blue eyes, to which long, black lashes lent softness and depth, profuse dark brown hair, and most desirable curling mustache. It was a gallant figure, straight, tall, and strong as a Norway pine, and with a true trooper swing.

'Delamer—Wyatt—this is a surprise!' He shook hands cordially with the two men, with a smile and a glance pleasant to see. 'When did I come? Only reached London at noon to-day, after a smooth run from New Orleans of twenty-two days.'

'New Orleans! And what the deuce took Captain O'Donnell, of the Third Chasseurs d'Afrique, to New Orleans?'

'A family matter—I'll tell you later. As we only remain a day or two in London, I thought I would drop into Her Majesty's and hear Nillsson for the first time.

'We! O'Donnell, don't tell me there's a lady in the case—that the madness of matrimony has seized you—that you have taken to yourself a wife of the daughters of the land. You Irishmen are all alike, fighting and love-making—love-making and fighting. Ah!' Mr. Delamer shook his head and sighed faintly; 'she isn't an Arab, I hope—is she?'

O'Donnell laughed.

'There's a lady in the case, but not a wife. Don't you know I have a sister, Delamer? Have no fears for me—my weaknesses are many and great—for fighting, if you like, but not for love-making. A brilliant scene, this, and faces fair enough to tempt even so austere an anchorite as Gordon Delamer.'

'Fair faces, surely,' Wyatt said. 'What do you, fresh from the desert, think of La Reine Blanche—that brown haired goddess, whose earthly name is Cecil Clive?'

'Who!'

Suddenly and sharply the captain of Chasseurs asked the question.

'Lady Cecil Clive. What, O'Donnell! has the spell of the enchantress stretched all the way to Africa, and netted you, too, in her rose chains? Is it possible you know La Reine Blanche?

'No,' the chasseur answered, with a touch of impatience. 'I don't know your La Reine Blanche. I know—that is, I once knew, very long ago—Lady Cecil Clive.'

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

FAITHLESS.

Events have recently transpired in a town in South Simcoe have created a sensation in all ranks of society. In order to place the circumstances in a proper light before the public it is necessary to go back to events which occurred two years ago. At that time the daughter of one of the wealthiest residents of the town married a young law student. The girl was fresh from boarding school, was pretty and facinating, a charming singer and good pianist, and was in every sense of the word just the sort of girl to impress the susceptible heart of the young student of Blackstone. Her parents were opposed to the match, owing to her intended husband's poverty; but their scruples being overcome, they consented to the match. After marriage the young husband found his position peculiarly trying. If his new relatives did not directly charge him with his poverty and living at the expense of others, they at least hinted it so often that the young benedict found his position so uncomfortable that he determined upon leaving his bride of a month and going to push his fortune in California.

A LOVER APPEARS.

Six months after the husband had left his bride a handsome traveller for a Montreal house appeared in the town. He was introduced to the young wife's father, and by him to his family. The wife of the absent student and minor was residing with her parents at the time, and the Montrealer became at once impressed with her charms. Apparently the attachment was reciprocal. Sleigh drives, balls, and social parties found this gay young commercial traveller and the pretty bride inseperable companions. At last rumor united their names in a manner not at all flattering to the young lady, but apparently they were indifferent about public opinion and heedless of consequences. A month after they had become acquainted society was startled by the rumoured elopement of the "commercial" and the bride of eight months.

The lady who signalized herself in such a notorious manner was partially restored to public favor on the often reiterated allegations of her parents that her husband had been killed in the mines of Nevada.

HUSBAND NO. 1 ON THE STAGE.

The "commercial" and his much-wedded wife engaged in business and were prospering. To all appearance she was happy, and if a thought of her first husband flitted through her mind, it was not reflected in her countenance. About two weeks ago the first husband appeared upon the scene. He was aware of what had happened, and had the melancholly satisfaction of gazing through the window, like a modern Enoch Arden, at the beautiful woman, once his own but now another's. He did not, like Enoch, sigh for his lost love, and leave her to her new found happiness. He was of a more practical turn of mind, and as he did not desire to repossess himself of his false wife, like a true student of law, negotiated with husband No. 2, the result being that husband No. 1 received a solation to the extent of $1,000. Strange to add, this wife of two husbands was almost indifferent to the result of the consultation having such particular reference to herself. If they could agree about her ownership she would be satisfied with the decision. So the matter stands at present, and it is not likely that an appeal to the law will be made.

A workman was examining a hole which he had bored in a factory floor at New Britain, Conn, when his eye was destroyed by a red hot iron thrust through from the other side.

Prof. Huxley says that those who have taken an active part in science should be killed at sixty, as not being flexible enough to yield to the advance of new ideas. He is himself nearly fifty-seven.

During the past year 2,089 vessels were wrecked and property estimated at $1,400,000,000 destroyed. Add to the property lost in fires and see what an appalling amount of capital is utterly lost.

FEES AND DOCTORS.—The fees of doctors is an item that very many persons are interested in just at present. We believe the schedule for visits is $3.00, which would tax a man confined to his bed for a year, and need of daily visits, over $1,000 a year for medical attendance alone! And one single bottle of Hop Bitters taken in time would save the $1,000 and all the year's sickness.—Post.

HORRIBLE SUICIDE.

A HAMILTON MAN CUTS HIS THROAT FROM EAR TO EAR.

HAMILTON, Feb. 18.—Shortly before twelve noon to day a most determined suicide took place at 30 Cherry-street, in the southern part of the city. The man who committed the act is named Wm. Smith, aged about sixty, who came to Canada about 11 years ago, and has been a respected resident in Hamilton for four years, He is an Englishman having served in the Royal Artilery. When he was honourable discharged he was farrier-sergeant in the artillery. He has for some time been suffering from asthma and has been confined to the house for some days. He followed the occupation of a gardener. He apparantly was very despondent, and showed symptons of insanity. About 11 o'clock to day he

ASKED FOR A RAZOR

to clean his nails. This was usual, Mrs. Smith handed him the article, she being seated at his side. The only thing being unusual to her in his appearance was that he looked all around the room, staring when she asked him what was the matter. Not fearing anything, she was composed, when all at once she observed he was struggling on the lounge on which he was seated in the front room, and to her terror he had the razor to his throat, and was cutting away with all his strength. She seized his hand, and the suicide and his wife had

A FEARFUL STRUGGLE.

Nor did he relax his determined effort till he had cut his head half off and fell forward on the floor, dying in a few minutes. On the floor where he had fell are great pools of blood, and a pillow which he had on his knees was saturated. The sight was fearful to look at. His clothing was dyed to his feet. Mrs. Smith had called her next door neighbour, Mrs. Reid, who ran in at once, in time only to see him make a dying quiver. Mr. Smith was a member of the Babtist Church, and is spoken of by his wife and neighbours as a good living man. He leaves a wife with no children.

Coroner Wolverton was called and upon viewing the body decided at once that an inquest was unnecessary, as it was a clear case of suicide.

RAILWAY ACCIDENT AT COLLINGWOOD.

COLLINGWOOD, Feb. 4.—A rather serious accident happened here to-night on the main line of the Northern and North-Western railway. As No. 3 mixed train from Toronto, due at 6.50 p. m., was approaching the yard one of the switch cranks broke. The engine and one box car kept on the main line, but the rest of the train took the siding. Some six freight cars are more or less damaged, some of them being smashed into kindling wood. None of the passenger cars left the track, but those on board had a narrow escape and a terrible shaking up. As the engine and one of the freight cars parted from the rest of the train, Brakesman Frank Lewis was in the act of stepping from one car to the other, but unfortunately he was not in time and was thrown to the ground from the top of the cars, and had his left arm badly mangled by a wheel passing over it. He also received other injuries about the head, but these are not of a serious nature. It was subsequently found necessary to amputate the left arm at the elbow. At last accounts the injured man was progressing favourably. As soon as the accident happened an auxiliary car was despatched from Allandale, and the wreckage was cleared away, causing but a few hours' delay to traffic on the line.—Monitor.

CLIPPINGS FROM OUR EXCHANGES.

GRANGE ANNIVERSARY.—The fifth anniversary of the Glenelg Grange was held in their Hall, Edge Hill, on Wednesday evening, the first inst. The hall was filled to its utmost capacity, and ample provisions of the richest kind provided by the ladies were liberally served out to all present. James Edge, Esq., Master, occupied the chair and a very pleasant time was spent in listening to addresses, readings, recitations and songs given on this occasion. The Grange is in a very flourishing condition as it has been since its commencement.—Review.

SUDDEN DEATH.—At the Soiree at Middle Station on Thursday evening a sad calamity occurred. A child of Mr. David McCrie, Normanby, and grandsone of Mr. Walter Tucker, of Durham, which was at the Soiree and when just about Departing for home, was found to be dead. Much sympathy is felt for the parents in their sudden affliction.—Review.

A sneak thief stopped seven horse cars in Memphis, but not after the manner of a highwayman. He entered a boarding-house where seven drivers were asleep, and stole their watches and wallets. A rule of the company requires each driver to have a watch and $10 at the outset of every trip; and as the manager would not make an exception on this occasion, the cars of the robbed men did not start.

Two lives were not lost, but saved, by a railroad accident at Newcomerstown, Ohio. A freight car was smashed by a collision, and in it were found two men insensible from cold. They had sneaked in for a free ride, the door had been locked, and, as they lay near the roof on some cotton bales, without room to move their limbs, a night at zero would have killed them if they had not by chance been discovered.

NEWS NOTES.

We learn that Mr. John Hanbury, who went to Manitoba a few weeks since, has struck a "Bonaza."

Rev. Dr. Ryerson, the founder of our present excellent school seystem, and one of the pioneer Methodist preachers of Canada, died in Toronto last week.

There has been great damage done in the Mississippi and Ohio valleys, by floods. It is stated 20,000 men have been thrown out of employment.

The land boom still continues in Manitoba. We hear of wonderful lucky hits by pur- chasers of land, and small fortunes are being made in a single day.

The Grand Lodges of the Orange Order and of the Ancient Order of United workmen are in session—the former at Strathroy and the latter at Hamilton.

Our numerous readers will learn with regret that the Bill introduced into the Local legislature to enforce the fulfilment of the agreement entered into between the late Directors of the T. G. and B. Railway and the Grand Trunk company has been thrown out by the Railway Committee by a vote of 26 to 15

WORTHY OF SUPPORT.

We are informed that a subscription list is being circulated among the farmers in the Valley in the neighborhood of Kimberly, with the object of raising money to be expended in cutting down the rock on 6 and 7 side road, on condition that the Township Council grant an equivalent sum.—The movement is being well supported by the farmers interest, who are desirous of giving their custom and support to Markdale, provided they had a good road. As it is now, it is next to impossible to bring a load sufficiently large to make it remunerative on account of the steepness of the hill. A few succeeded in reaching Markdale this winter with their grain, by doubling up or resuming the foot of the hill, and others by unloading and taking half their load up at a time.

Now, we think the business men of Markdale are as deeply interested in this matter as the farmers, and trust that they will subscribe liberally towards this contemplated improvement when asked to do so, as we are informed they shortly will be, thereby securing to themselves thirty or forty customers who are compelled under existing circumstances to go elsewhere.

FLESHERTON.

From our Correspondent.

The social held on Friday evening, the 17th, inst., under the auspices of the Ladies' aid of the C. M. Church, Flesherton was a grand success. At 7.30, sharp, the meeting was called to order by Mr. B. Davis. After a few appropriate remarks, he called on Bertie Hooper, who favored the assembly with a song and was followed by Alfred Sarjeant with a recitation, Misses Ada Sproule and Effie Philp, song; Mr. Fawcett, reading; music by the Quintette Club; Miss Aggie Lietch, song. There was then an intermission for refreshments, after which the programme was resumed by Mrs. Trimble with a song; Mr. McMaster, reading; Miss Aggie Philps, song; music, Quintette Club; Mrs. W. Trimble, song; Dunwoody Bros., dialogue; Miss Pierce, song; Mrs. Will Trimble, reading; also a song entitled "Obey," which was well rendered, after making some reference to Adam, the chorus was, "The very last Man would the very last Woman Obey."

BREVITIES.

The Presbyterians will have a social on the 24th inst. A good time expected.

Scarlet fever in the Village.

Our thoroughfare almost blocked with potatoe teams.

Good sleighing again.

A number of Villagers have Manitoba fever: I will send a list next week.

OSPREY.

From our Correspondent.

Here we are in the mud again. The thaw yesterday, and the rain this morning took the snow all away; but with a little frost we will soon have good wheeling.

Mr. McAlear has left Feversham, having purchased the Railroad House at Flesherton station, where he intends keeping a first-class Hotel.

On the 7th inst. a social was held in the house of Mr. John Clinton.—The weather being disagreeable prevented many from attending. After doing ample justice to the good things furnished to comfort the inner man, Mr. John Osborne was elected chairman. The programme consisted of vocal and instrumental music, some readings, and an eloquent address from the Rev. Mr. Snowden, and all retired feeling well pleased with the evening's entertainment.

GLENELG COUNCIL.

Council met at the Town Hall on 13th inst. All the members present.

The committee on the Treasure's sureties presented their report.

Moved by Glencross and Mullarky, that the report of the committee on the Treasurer's sureties be adopted and engrossed on the Minutes.—Car.

Moved by Dunsmoor and Glencross, that Alex. Bell be paid $2.00 for work on Durham Road.—Car.

Moved by Glencross and Dunsmoor, that the Reeve be authorized to examine a bridge on the Rocky Saugeen, Garafraxa road in behalf of this Township and to repair or rebuild the same if necessary—Carried.

Moved by Neil and Glencross, that the Reeve be instructed to employ a surveyor to survey the road deviation on lot 15, con. 4, N.D.R., according to the patent for said deviation as soon as possible.—Car.

Moved by Mullarky and Dunsmoor, that C. W. Rutledge's account for printing, $3 75, and Rowsell & Hutcheson's account for Township blanks, $15.11 be paid.—Car.

By-law No. 209, appointing poundkeepers, Fence-viewers and Pathmasters, introduced and read a first and second time.

Moved by Glencross and Neil, that the account of Mr. Forgerty for getting the Town Hall and benches clean ed, amounting to $5, be paid.—Carried.

Moved by Dunsmoor and Glencross, that the Clerk instruct the county treasurer to erase the taxes on lot 7 con. 3 E. G. R., Mr. McRae being responsible for the taxes against said lot —Car.

Moved by Mullarky and Glencross, that by-law No. 209, appointing certain township officers, be now read a third time, signed sealed and engrossed on the minutes.—Car.

Moved by Neil and Glencross, that the collector for Ward No. 1 be authorized to accept $8.49 for arrears of taxes against lots 6 & 7 con. 2 N.D.R. for the year 1880, and that Charles McArthur be allowed fifty cents for Statute Labor returned against him. —Car.

Moved by Mullarky and Neil, that N. G. Dunsmoor, P. Neil, and the mover be a committee to inspect the bridge known as the Glencrossbridge, and that said committee be authorised to get the specification from Mr. Glencross and give an order on the Treasurer for the amount due the contractor, as soon as the work is completed to the satisfaction of the committee.—Car.

Moved by Neil and Glencross, that the Auditors' Report be now finally passed and adopted and that the clerk get two hundred copies printed in pamphlet form.—Car.

The Council adjourned to meet at the same place on Monday, the fifth day of June next.

TORONTO, GREY, AND BRUCE.

DEPUTATION TO THE GOVERNMENT ON BEHALF OF THE G. T. RAILWAY AMALGAMATION.

A large and influential deputation waited upon the Attorney-General and the Commissioner of Crown Lands last night in reference to the bill before the Legislature for the confirmation of the agreement between the Toronto, Grey, and Bruce and the Grand Trunk railways. The deputation, which was introduced by Messrs. Creighton, M. P. P., and Hay, M. P. P., consisted of the following gentlemen :—

County Grey.—C. R. Sing, warden.

Owen Sound.—Dr. C. E. Barnhart, mayor; John Chisholm, reeve; A. B. Lang, deputy reeve; S. J. Parker and W. B. Stephens, president and secretary of the Board of Trade; Capt. Dunn, Thomas Scott, B. Allen, G. Corbett, and D. A. Creasor.

Howick.—John Kaine, reeve; David Weir, deputy reeve; B. Stark, Thos Watson, and Thos. Wilson.

Woodstock.—W. Totten, mayor.

West Luther.—Robert Murdock, reeve; W. Sexsmith, deputy reeve.

Mono.—Robt. Wilson, reeve.

Osprey.—A. McGirr, reeve; A. McIntyre deputy reeve.

Melancthon.—J. Huxtable, reeve.

Sarawak.—R. McNaught and R. J. Doyle, reeves.

Keppel.—W. Graham, reeve.

Derby.—R. Stark, reeve.

Amaranth.—G. Bennett, deputy reeve.

Sullivan.—R. Wightman, deputy reeve.

Arthur.—Alex. Fraser, reeve.

Culsoss.—W. Scott, reeve; Alex. McIntyre, deputy reeve.

Teeswater.—F. Fairbairn, reeve.

Sydenham.—Robt, McCutcheon, reeye.

Holland.—W. Howey, reeve.

Minto.—John Prain, reeve.

Mr. Sing, warden of Grey, was the first speaker on behalf of the deputation. He said that since the Northern railway had amalgamated with the Hamilton and North-Western railway they had raised their rates, and a similar result would follow if the Northern should combine with the Toronto, Grey and Bruce. The county he represented was wholly in favour of the amalgamation with the Grand Trunk, and hoped the Government would ratify the agreement.

Dr. Barnhart, Mayor of Owen Sound, said the Grand Trunk connection was the only one which would benefit his municipality, which had contributed $56,000 to the T. G. and B. railway in bonuses. The people were strongly opposed to the Northern railway connection.

Mr. J. F. Parker, president of Board of Trade, Owen Sound, advocated the same views.

Messrs. Doyle, Owen Sound; Howey, reeve of Holland; Allen, of Owen Sound, Barker, of Orangeville, Fairbairn, reeve of Teeswater; Scott, reeve of Ross; D. Weir, Howick; Prain, reeve of Minto, and Fraser, of Arthur were all heard in advocacy of the same views.

Mr. Mowat said he felt deeply interested in the country represented by the deputation, as it had given so much and struggled so hard to secure proper railway facilities. Last year the Government passed a bill giving the T. G. and B. railway a right to amalgamate with the Grand Trunk, and they had no intention of repealing it. The Legislature also gave the protection that no other amalgamation could go into effect without the consent of the Governor in Council, and that protection would remain. (Applause.) With regard to compelling the Grand Trunk amlgamation, he could not promise that, and it might be going too far to ratify the agreement with that company.

Mr. Pardee said that the Government, while wishing to comply with the wishes of the people, had to be influenced by considerations of justice and right. It would not be consistent with justice and right. It would not be consistent with justice to force two companies to an amalgamation whether they were willing or not. It would also be unjust to ratify an agreement which was before the law courts to decide. Whether it had ever been entered into or not. Whatever became of this agreement, however, the deputation might be assured that the Government would authorize no other amalgamation against the wishes of the people.

The deputation withdrew

CLIPPINGS FROM EXCHANGES.

The boy, John Frazer, who purchased the spade and hammer, at Hannah & Ferguson's store, Shelburne, and who was supposed to be in company with the boy John Smith, who is awaiting his trial for the murder of his uncle, was brought down here on Monday, and confronted with the prisoner in the gaol for the purpose of identification. He says that he does not think he is the boy who was in the store the same day he made his purchase, and further states that he never saw the boy who was in the store with him but on that occasion. They must now hunt up the boy who bought that revolver.—Orangeville Gazette.

SAD DEATH.—A little girl, about six years old, youngest daughter of Rev. Mr. Ashbury, of this town, was taken suddenly ill while in church on Sunday last, but managed, unattended, to make her way home with great difficulty, on reaching which she showed symptoms of having been poisoned. Medical aid was at once summoned, but to no purpose, she continued in great agony, vomiting and crying out for water until next morning, when death came to her rescue. She had partaken with the rest of the family of some highly seasoned cake, which is supposed to have been the cause of the accident, being rather delicate, it took more effect on her than any of the others. In addition to this sad affliction, every member of Mr. Ashbury's family, with the exception of himself, are now ill with either scarlet fever or diphtheria. The reverend gentleman and his family have the deepest sympathy of the community in their misfortunes.—Durham Chronicle.

RAILWAY ACCIDENT.—The mail train which leaves here every afternoon ran off the track at New Lowell last Friday evening. The section men had very carelessly left the switch open below the station and as there is a heavy grade there, a good rate of speed was attained before the switch was reached. The engineer did not notice that the switch was open until within a few feet of it and had barely time to reverse his engine before it was pitched off into the ditch followed by the baggage car. The smoking and passenger cars were merely jerked off the track which was quite sufficient however to give the passengers a good scare. Engineer Dallery bravely stuck to his post and went down with his engine, and how he and his fireman escaped unhurt is most wonderful. About twenty-five yards ahead of where the accident occurred is a very deep gully and had we gone off there the chances are this item would never have been penned and messrs. J. S Wilson and A. H. Watson, no more numbered amongst the residents of Meaford. "Better to be born lucky than rich."—Monitor.

FIRE IN NEUSTEADT.—On Monday at midnight, a fire broke out in a brick building used as the printing office of the "Canada National Zeitung," Neusteadt, which soon spread to the adjoining residence occupied by the publisher, Mr. John Klein. Despite the greatest efforts made, nothing could be saved out of the printing office. The greater part of the household furniture was saved, but badly damaged. Mr. Klein mourns the loss of an excellent private library, containing rare works, which will be difficult to replace. The buildings were owned by the Ontario Bank, and fully insured.

SUCIDE.—Mr. John Gillespie, of Holland, committed suicide this Thursday morning. He has been in poor health for the last four weeks and in a very despondent state. His family have watched him closely for the last two weeks, as he showed symptoms of insanity, but this morning he escaped their vigilance and hung himself in his barn. The deceased was a highly respected citizen, and has been a resident of the township for the last 26 years, and has been a member of the Council on several occasions. He was aged 56 years. His family has the sincere sympathy of the whole community.

NARROW ESCAPE.—A little girl, aged seven years, daughter of Mr. Moffat, of the Markdale Foundry, while returning from school on Wednesday afternoon, and when opposite the driveway leading from the stables of the Mansion House, was struck by a team coming out from the driving shed, and knocked down. The horses being somewhat startled sprang completely over the prostrate child without doing her any injury; but one of the runners of the sleigh struck her on the side of the head and inflicted an ugly but not serious wound. It is a miracle the child was not instantly killed.

PIMPLES.

I will mail (Free) the recipe for a simple VEGETABLE BALM that will remove TAN, FRECKLES, PIMPLES and BLOTCHES, leaving the skin soft, clear and beautiful; also instructions for producing a luxuriant growth of hair on a bald head or smooth face. Address, enclosing a 3c. stamp, Ben. Vandelf & Co., 5 Beekman st., N.Y. 20-1y

Is a compound of the virtues of sarsaparilla, stillingia, mandrake, yellow dock, with the iodide of potash and iron, all powerful blood-making, blood-cleansing, and life-sustaining elements. It is the purest, safest, and most effectual alterative medicine known or available to the public. The sciences of medicine and chemistry have never produced so valuable a remedy, nor one so potent to cure all diseases resulting from impure blood. It cures Scrofula and all scrofulous diseases, Erysipelas, Rose, or St. Anthony's Fire, Pimples and Face-grubs, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Tumors, Tetter, Humors, Salt Rheum, Scald-head, Ring-worm, Ulcers, Sores, Rheumatism, Mercurial Disease, Neuralgia, Female Weaknesses and Irregularities, Jaundice, Affections of the Liver, Dyspepsia, Emaciation, and General Debility.

By its searching and cleansing qualities it purges out the foul corruptions which contaminate the blood and cause derangement and decay. It stimulates and enlivens the vital functions, promotes energy and strength, restores and preserves health, and infuses new life and vigor throughout the whole system. No sufferer from any disease which arises from impurity of the blood need despair who will give AYER'S SARSAPARILLA a fair trial.

It is folly to experiment with the numerous low-priced mixtures, of cheap materials, and without medicinal virtues, offered as blood-purifiers, while disease becomes more firmly seated. AYER'S SARSAPARILLA is a medicine of such concentrated curative power, that it is by far the best, cheapest, and most reliable blood-purifier known. Physicians know its composition, and prescribe it. It has been widely used for forty years, and has won the unqualified confidence of millions whom it has benefited.

REST AND COMFORT TO THE SUFFERING

Brown's Household Panacea has no equal for relieving pain, both internal and external. It cures pain in the Side, Back or Bowels, Sore Throat, Rheumatism, Toothache, Lumbago and any kind of a Pain or Ache. "It will most surely quicken the Blood and heal, as its acting power is wonderful." "Brown's Household Panacea," being acknowledged as the great Pain Reliever, and of double the strength of any other Elixer or Liniment in the world, should be in every family handy for use when wanted "as it really is the best remedy in the world for Cramps in the Stomach, and Pains and Aches of all kinds," and is for sale by all Druggists at 25 cents a bottle. 20-1y

Mothers! Mothers!! Mothers!!! Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with the excruciating pain of cutting teeth? If so, go at once and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately—depend upon it; there is no mistake about it. There is not a mother upon earth who has ever used it, who will not tell you at once that it will regulate the bowels, and give rest to the mother, and relief and health to the child, operating like magic. It is perfectly safe to use in all cases, and pleasant to the state, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States. Sold every where at 25 cents a bottle. 20-1y

Gold Great chance to make money. Those who always take advantage of the good chances for making money that are offered, generally become wealthy, while those who do not improve such chances remain in poverty. We want many men, women, boys and girls to work for us right in their own localities. Any one can do the work properly from the first start. The business will pay more than ten times ordinary wages. Expensive outfit furnished free. No one who engages fails to make money rapidly. You can devote your whole time to the work, or only your spare moments. Full information and all that is needed sent free. Address Stinson & Co., Portland Maine.

"What kind of tea do most editors like?—Brevity." The people prefer McFarland's tea. It tastes well, drinks well and makes you feel well. Try it.

We notice the Baillif in Town and shall expect him often if all delinquents is not up to time with Butter & Rae.

Mr. John Ford of Mount Royal farm, Township of Artemesia, advertises that he has a quantity of White Russia wheat, Black Tartar Oats, and two yoke of oxen for sale Mr. F. has gained a reputation for raising first-class articles, and as he is willing to guarantee what he sells to be just as he represents them, we we would recommend parties who require such to give him a call.

The Boundary award is not settled yet; but it is an undisputed fact that the Cheapest and Best goods can be had at Butter & Rae's.

BURGLARY.—The shop of Mr. Geo. Wilson, Butcher, Markdale, was broken into on the night of the 20th and a large quantity of meat taken therefrom, Mr. Wilson has a pretty good idea who the party was, and should he be able to preve his suspicion he intends pushing the matter as far as the law will allow. Mr. A., had better give the above shop a wide berth in future or else he might find himself in the toils of our worthy constable.

A PUBLIC MEETING should be called of the citizens of every city, town and village in the Dominion, to consider what should be done to prevent the hair from turning Gray —and falling out. If this important question received their earnest consideration they would unanimously decide that science had at last discovered something that would answer this purpose—and furthermore would recommend Cingalese Hair Renewer as being this something for restoring the hair to its natural color, and prevent its falling out. 50 cents per bottle. For sale by all Druggists.

We must apologize to our readers for the short amount of local and other matter in our paper the past two weeks; but we feel sure that our readers will bear with us when we state that Mr. Rutledge, the proprietor, has been confined to his bed with a severe attack of pleurisy and inflamation of the lungs. At the present time of writing he is in a very low state and grave fears are entertained of his recovery.

What proved to be one of the bes socials ever given in this part of the county, was held at the house of Jas. Stinson, Esq., 11th line Euphrasia, on Wednesday evening, 8th inst., under the L.A.A., Markdale Presbyterian Church, in aid of building fund, the house, which is tolerably large, was filled to completion. A sumptous repast was provided, confirming the fact that the 11th liners can't be beaten for cookery. The games were entered in to with a zest, and all seemed to have enjoyed, and felt themselves perfectly at home, under the kind hospitalities offorded. An election cake, worthy of praise, was cut by Misses. Stinson & Rourke, representing Euphrasia and Markdale respectively. Proceeds $33.

DUNDALK.

(From the Herald.)

No snow and bad roads makes business very dull.

The Dundalk Post Office is now permanently established in G. R. Middleton's new store, directly opposite to the office of A. G. Hunter.

On last Saturday Drs. McWilliams and Griffin amputated the left foot and left a hand of J. McDowell. This second operation has left Mr. McDowell without either feet or hands. We sincerely sympathize with him and his family in their great affliction.

R. F. Taylor has purchased the house and premises, on Victoria St., owned by E. B. Grey.

A. G. Hunter, Estate and Loan Agent, has a number of cheap farms for sale, and a large amount of money to loan on easy terms.

The following is the Honor Roll for School Section No. 6, Melancthon, for the month of January:—Marks obtainable, 200. Senior Third Class—Emma Taylor, 120. Junior Third Class.—Annie Taylor, 186; J. Barmby, 130. Senior Second Class—Jas. Corbett, 158; Willie Thompson, 142. Junior Second Class—Lizzie Barmby, 166; Maggie Corbett, 153. Senior First Class—Russell Taylor, 175.—LUCINDA GRAHAM, Teacher.

We are pleased to hear that John McDowell is doing as well as can be expected under the circumstances, of his misfortune.

There is a general ice harvest going on, in preparation for the warm days of summer.

Dr. McWilliams has taken to himself a wife, who will help him on through the journey of life.

All our trains are noted for splendid time. We believe that the conductors on the T. G. & B. Railway, are the most courteous and obliging conductors of any Railway in the Province.

A few cooking, box and parlor stoves, cheap for cash, at J. Gardiner's, Dundalk. Also a cheap lot of lamps, large glass lamps, burners, and glass, for 40c.

There will be an auction sale of valuable property at Dundalk, on March 7th. Fair Day, at the Anglo-American Hotel. Parties wishing to invest in real estate, should not ail to attend, as the property is one of the best in the village, and is now let for an yearly rental of $250.00.

STARTLING DISCOVERY!
LOST MANHOOD RESTORED.
A victim of youthful imprudence causing Premature Decay, Nervous Debility, Lost Manhood, etc., having tried in vain every known remedy, has discovered a simple self cure, which he will send FREE to his fellow-sufferers, address J. H. REEVES, 43 Chatham St., N. Y.

A FIGHT FOR A GIRL.

A despatch from Portland, Mich., says:—On the 14th inst. S. W. McGerry, of Gaill, came here on information that his daughter, not yet fourteen years old, was to be married to a rather dissolute young man. The bans were published some time ago in the Catholic Church, and the wedding was to have taken place on the 15th. The father found his daughter at the dressmaker's, took her by force and drove with her to Muir. The disappointed groom and friends telegraphed to certain parties in Muir to stop McGerry, and followed after in hot pursuit. McGerry was met by a mob, who were too many for him; so he telegraphed here for 24 men, and 15 or 20 have gone to his relief, armed for a fight. At last report McGerry had his daughter in a hotel at Muir and was guarding the door with a revolver. The priest was here this morning to perform the ceremony.—He did not know that the marriages of girls under sixteen years were forbidden, and on being so informed declared he would not perform the ceremoney for any consideration. A number of prominent men are taking part in the trouble.

The monument to Edward I. on Burgh Marsh, in England, the scene of his death, has just been carefully restored at the expense of Lord Lonsdale.

A REAL NECESSITY.

No house should be without a bottle of Hagyard's Yellow Oil, in case of accident. There is no preparation offered to suffering humanity that has made so many permanent cures, or releived so much pain and misery. It is called by some the Good Samaritan, by others the Cure-all, and by the afflicted an Angel of Mercey.

The boats of the British cruiser London, lately commanded by Captain Brownrigg, who lost his life while overhauling a slave dhow, have captured another dhow, having on board 157 slaves.

The surfmen in the United States life Saving Service on the coast of Maine and Massachussetts complain that Senator Conger's bill does not do them justice, because they can see no provisions in it for an increase of their present pay.

A PROMINENT ACTOR'S BELIEF.

Mr. Tony Pastor, of New York City, the great humorist and actor, was signally benefited by the Great German Remedy, and felt constrained to testify to its efficacy for the benefit of others suffering in the same way.

Cincinnati burglar, a mere boy, was shot while breaking into a house. In his pocket was found a watch which only half an hour before, he had taken by force from a man in the street. He said he had intended to "put in a full night's work."

WEAK LUNGS AND HOW TO MAKE THEM STRONG

Breathe with the mouth closed, have access at all times to pure air exercise moderately, eat nourishing but simple food, and take that best of all cough remedies, Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam, it speedily cures all throat or lung troubles of adults or children. Price 25cents per bottle.

According to Figaro, beef stewed in beer, and strongly odoriferous of the latter, is the Prince Imperial of Germany's favorite food, while his mother revels in eels and carp, with beer sauce, the venerable Emperor lapping up with evident gusto his beer soup.

"WHAT EVERY ONE SAYS MUST BE TRUE."

And every one who has tested its merits speaks warmly in praise of Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam as a positive cure for all throat and lung complaints coughs and colds, sore throat, bronchitis, and incipient consumption.

M. Millet, a brother of the late distinguished artist, is the originator of the idea for using the panels of original woods for the covers of books—veneers, such as has long been used for furniture and wall decorations. These veneers are cut so thin that over one hundred are needed to make a pile an inch high.

DYSPEPSIA,

that all prevalent disease of civilized life, is always attended with a disordered sympathetic system and bad secretions, and no remedy is better adapted to its cure than Burdock Blood Bitters taken according to special directions found on every bottle.

The first mail between New York and Washington was detained a few days ago by a novel cause. While running at full speed the bell rope was energetically pulled, and the train stopped. Postal regulations require an explanation of any delay of the fast mails, and it appears from the official correspondence on the subject that one of two elephants in a car had amused himself by pulling at the rope.

WHEN DOCTORS DISAGREE WHO SHALL DECIDE?

Nothing is more variable than the different opinions of medical men; but when they fail to agree, or to perform a cure in a chronic disease, the patients often decide for themselves, and take Burdock Blood Bitters, and speedily recover. It is the grand key to health that unlocks all the secretions, and liberates the slave from the captivity of disease.

The Rev. O. Barnes, is conducting in Louisville, a religious revival which in most respects is not uncommon; but he introduces a novelty by carrying a bottle of oil, as he goes among the penitents and annointing them on the foreheads. He claims scriptural authority for this ceremony. Although harshly criticised for his oddities, he is said to be sincere in his work—so sincere that he will take no pay except food an lodging—and his converts are numerous. He is a seceeder from the Presbyterians.

A Cross Baby.—Nothing is so conducive to a man's remaining a bachelor as stopping for one night at the house of a married friend and being kept awake for five or six hours by the crying of a cross baby. All cross and crying babies need only Hop Bitters to make them well and smiling. Young man, remember this.—Traveller.

A POPULAR REMEDY.

Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam is one of the most deservedly popular remedies for the cure of coughs, colds, sore throat, asthma, whooping cough, croup, bronchitis, and all pulmonary complaints. For sale by all dealers.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

The most successful Remedy ever discovered, as it is certain in its effects and does not blister. READ PROOF BELOW.

FROM THE ONEONTA PRESS, N.Y.

Oneonta, New York, Jan. 6th, 1881.

Early last summer Messrs J. B. Kendall & Co., of Enosburgh Falls, Vt., made a contract with the publishers of the Press for a half column advertisement for one year setting forth the merits of Kendall's Spavin Cure. At the same time we secured from the firm a quantity of books, entitled Dr. Kendall's Treatise on the Horse and his Diseases, which we are giving to advance paying subscribers of the Press as a premium.

About the time the advertisement first appeared in this paper Mr. P. G. Schermerhorn, who resides near Colliers, had a spavined horse. He read the advertisement and concluded to test the efficacy of the remedy, although his friends laughed at his credulity. He bought a bottle of Kendall's Spavin Cure and commenced using it on the horse in accordance with the directions, and he informed us this week that it effected such a complete cure that an expert horseman, who examined the animal recently could find no trace of the spavin or the place where it had been located. Mr. Schermerhorn has since secured a copy of Kendall's Treatise of the Horse and his Diseases, which he prizes very highly and would be loth to part with at any price, provided he could not obtain another copy. So much for advertising reliable articles.

Kendall's Spavin Cure.

New Hamburg, Ont., Dec. 28th, 1881.

Mr. F. H. McCallum, Dear Sir:—The bottle of Dr. Kendall's Spavin Cure bought of you last summer gave me the utmost satisfaction and performed a wonderful cure upon a mare nineteen years old belonging to me, which was badly spavined for ten years. She was so lame that I could hardly get her to move. The lameness is entirely gone after using half a bottle of the cure, and she is like a young horse again.

Yours truly,
J. F. ROTH.

FROM A PROMINENT PHYSICIAN.

Washingtonville, Ohio, June 17th, 1880

Dr. J. B. Kendall & Co., Gents:—Reading your advertisement in Turf, Field and Farm, of Kendall's Spavin Cure, and having a valuable and speedy horse which had been lame from spavin for eighteen months, I sent to you for a bottle by express, which in six weeks removed all lameness and enlargement and a large splint from another horse and both horses are to day as sound as colts. The one bottle was worth to me one hundred dollars.

Respectfully yours,
H. A. BERTOLETT M. D.

Kendall's Spavin Cure.
ON HUMAN FLESH.

Thousands of trials on human flesh has proved beyond a doubt that "KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE" has sufficient strength to penetrate and virtue to cure the worst cases of rheumatism, corns, bunyons, frost-bites, or any bruise, cut or lameness which are not affected in the least by ordinary liniments. It does not blister but on the contrary removes all soreness.

St. Johns, P.Q., Oct. 27th, 1881.

Dr. B Kendall & Co., Gents:—I have used your Spavin Cure with great success on spavins, curbs and splints. I know it to be a good remedy for ringbones, bone spavins, cuts, galls and all kinds of lameness and many other difficulties about the horse. One of my men sprained his ankle badly. I applied Kendall's Spavin Cure and I never saw anything work like it, he was well in a few days. I know it to be good for man as well as beast. I procured one of your Treatise on the Horse, by mail for 25c., and I think it was the means of saving me $100 on one horse that I treated according to the directions given in your book for displaced stifle.

Yours truly,
WM. J. PEARSON.

Dunham, P.Q., March 10th, 1879.

Dr. B. J. Kendall & Co., Gents:—About a year ago I fell in the road onto some ice and was badly hurt in the hip joint, which caused me much suffering. I tried various remedies but none gave relief, until I tried Kendall's Spavin Cure. I applied it full strength twice a day for two weeks during last October and it effected a perfect cure. I have since then been well and free from lameness. It is very valuable for man as well as beast.

Yours truly,
CHESTER K. GREEN.

Kendall's Spavin Cure.

Is sure in its effects, mild in actions as it does not blister, yet it is penetrating and powerful to reach every deep seated pain or to remove any bony growth or other enlargements, such as spavins, splints, curbs, ringbones, callous, swellings and any lameness and all enlargements of the joints or limbs, or for rheumatism in man or for any purpose for which a liniment is used for man or beast. It is now known to be the best liniment for man ever used, acting mild and yet certain in it's effects.

Send address for illustrated circular which we think gives positive proof of its virtues. No remedy has ever met with such unqualified success, to our knowledge, for beast as well as man.

Price $1 per bottle, or six bottles for $5. All Druggists have it or can get it for you, or it will be sent to any address on receipt of price by the proprietors, DR. B. J. KENDALL & CO., Enosburgh Falls, Vt.

Mechanical Orguinette.

An Automatic Reed Organ.

"The Orguinette may now be called a celebrated instrument. In tone it is akin to the Cabinet Organ, but the organ must be manipulated by an artist in order to produce music; the ORGUINETTE is on the other hand entirely mechanical in its action, and at a trifling expense it can be made to furnish an unlimited supply of all kinds of music.—Toronto Globe."

"The Orguinette is indeed a musical wonder. It is a miniature reed organ with as strong and melodious a tone as the Cabinet Size. It surpasses the Cabinet Organ for the reason that the ignoramus in music can play it as well as the most accomplished professor. THE ORGUINETTE is strong and accurate in its mechanism, and consequently not liable to get out of order."—Montreal Gazette.

"The Orguinette is the most perfect automatic musical instrument yet invented its repertorie is unlimited, the tone is remarkably good."—Montreal Star.

A LECTURE TO YOUNG MEN
ON THE LOSS OF
MANHOOD
WE have recently published a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical and nervous Debility, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage etc., resulting from excesses.
☞ Price, in a sealed envelope, only 6 cts., or two postage stamps.
The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicines or the use of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.
☞ This Lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

A WONDERFUL WOMAN.

—:o:—

CHAPTER I. Continued.

'My good fellow,' Wyatt murmured plaintively, 'don't call her mine—she isn't. The cakes and cream of life are not for me. And it's all the same —Lady Cecil, and White Queen, Delilah, Circe, any name by which fair and fatal sirens have ever known There she sits. 'Queen rose of the rose bud garden of girls.' The laureate must have had her in his eyes when he wrote 'Maud.'

The African officer raised his glass and looked long and earnestly at that brilliant vision, rose crowned and diamond decked. Then his glass dropped, and he turned away. Delamer looked at him curiously.

'The tail of the serpent is over all still! And you know my Lady Cecil. How was it—where was it?'

'It was in Ireland many years ago.'

'In Ireland, and many years ago. One would think the lovely Queenie was a centenarian. How many years ago? Don't be too sphinx-like. Before you went to Algiers?'

'Before I went to Algiers—over six years ago.'

'I hope she had nothing to do with your doing—it is a way of hers, sending doomed men to exile! Anywhere, anywhere out of the world her slaughtered victims rush. She must have been young six years ago, but then some of these sorceresses are fatal from the hour they cut their first teeth. Say, mon brave, are you, too, in her list of killed and wounded?"

'Is she so fatal then?' O'Donnell asked, shirking the question.

'Fatal! fatal's no word for it! Ask Wyatt, ask Lord Longlands, ask Sir Godfrey Vane—ask—ask any man in London. The most merciless flirt that ever demoralized mankind.'

'And still—at two-and-twenty—Lady Cecil Clive is Lady Cecil Clive.

'How pat he has her age? Yes, at two-and-twenty the conqueress still walks "in maiden meditation, fancy free." But the talk of club and drawing-room is that early next season we are to have a brilliant wedding. Sir Arthur Tregenna, to whom she has been pledged since childhood, comes to claim her. One might say woo and win, only there was no wooing in the case. It's a family affair—he has the purse of Fortunatus, she is the beauty of the Princess Perfect; what need of wooing in such a case? And yet,' with a second curious look, you know what she told me one night not very long ago?'

'Not being a wizard—no.'

'We were at Convent Garden; there was an Irish play—a new thing—and I was behind her chair. We spoke casually of Ireland, and she told me she had been there, and—'mark it, Horatio'—that the happiest days of her life were those days in Ireland. Oh! no need to look like that! I don't insinuate by any means that you had anything to do with it. Apropos of nothing, where's that prince of followers, that paragon of henchmen, that matchless servitor of the last of the O'Donnell's, your man Lanty.'

'Ah, yes, Lanty,' Wyatt said; havn't laughed once, I assure you, since I saw Lanty. Don't say you have left him behind you in Africa?'

'Lanty is with me,' O'Donnell laughed; 'he's like Sinbad's Old Man of the Sea. I couldn't shake him off if I would. I'll tell him you asked.'

'And you only remain a day or two in London?' said Delamer. 'Where do you go—to London?'

'Not at present. We go, my sister and I, to Sussex for a week or two; after that to France, then back to Algiers.'

'Then dine to-morrow with me at Brooks.'

There's a morning party at Kew, the last of the season, and La Reine Blanche graces it, of course. No doubt she will be glad to see an old friend; you will come?'

'No.' He said it briefly and coldly. 'Certainly not, my acquaintance with Lord Ruysland's daughter was of the slightest. I should never dream of renewing it. Call upon me tomorrow at my quarters. Here is my card. It is pleasant to see a familiar face in this, to me, dearest of London.'

'Cecil,' Lord Ruysland said, 'a word with you,'

The opera and ball was over—they had arrived home, at the big, aristocratically gloomy mansion in Lowndes Square—the laden casket which held this priceless kohinoor. It was the town house of Sir Peter Dangerfield, Baronet of Sussex—or his lady rather—for Sir Peter rarely came to London in the season, and Lady Dangerfield's uncle, the earl, being together too poor to have a residence of his own, took up his abode with his niece.

Lady Cecil stood with one slippered foot on the carpet stair, pausing at the command and its gravely authoritative tone. It was half-past four in the morning, and she had waltzed a great deal, but the pearly complexion was as pure, the brown eyes as softly lustrous as eight hours before. With her silks flowing, her roses and jewels, her fair patrician face she looked a charming vision.

'You want me, papa?' she said in surprise. 'Certainly. What is it?'

'Come this way.'

He led the way to the drawing-room —yet lit, but deserted—closed the door, placed a chair for her. Still more surprised, she sat down. An interview at five in the morning! What did it mean?

'Cecil,' he began, with perfect abruptness, do you know Tregenna is on his way here? Will be with us in less than a week?'

'Papa!'

It was a sort of cry of dismay. Then she sat silent, looking at him aghast.

'Well my dear, there is no occasion to wear that face of consternation is there? One would thing I had announced the coming of an ogre, instead of a gallant gentleman whose wife you are to be. I had a letter from him last night. He is in Paris —he will be here as I say in a week. Will you read it? There is a message, of course, for you.

He held it out to her. As she stretched forth her hand and took it she did not look at him. A faint flush, all unusual, had arisen to either cheek. She took it, but did not read it—she twisted it through her fingers, her eyes still averted.

Her father stood and looked at her curiously. I have described Raoul, Earl of Ruysland, have I not?—tall, thin, high-bred, two keen grey eyes, a thin, cynical mouth, and long, slim hands and feet. 'The ingredients of human happiness,' says M. Diderot, pithily, 'are a good digestion, a bad heart, and no conscience.' The noble Earl of Ruysland possessed the ingredients of happiness in their fullest. He had never loved anybody in his life except, perhaps, for a few months, a women he had lost. He never hated anyone, he would never put himself an inch out of the way to serve God or man, he was perfectly civil to everybody he came across, he had never lost his temper since the age of twenty. His manners were perfect, he paused for the most aimable of men, and he had never done a good turn in his life. He had squandered two noble fortunes—his own and his wife's—and he stood now, as Delamer had said, the poorest peer in Britian. He had been every where and knew every body, and might have sung with Captain Morris:

> In life I have run all changes through,
> Run every pleasure down.

At 56 every rood of land he owned was morgtaged, his daughter was portionless, and he was a dependant—nothing better—on the bounty of his niece's rich husband, the Sussex baronet, Sir Peter Dangerfield.

They were a very old family, the Ruysland, of course. The first had come over with Noah and the ark; the second, history mentions, with William and the Conquest. And the one aim and object of Lord Ruysland's life was to see his only daughter the bride of Sir Arthur Tregenna.

'I have a word of warning to give you, Queenie,' Lord Ruysland said, after that long pause, 'it is this; Stop flirting.'

'Papa!'

'You have made that remark already, my dear,' the earl went on pacidly; 'and there is no need for you to grow indignant. I suppose you don't pretend to say you don't flirt, I'm not a tyrannical father, I think. I haven't hitherto interfered with your pastimes in any way. You were born a conquette, poor child, and took to it as naturally as a duckling takes to water. Let me see,' very carerlessly this, but with a keen, side long glance—'you tried your small weapon first on the Celtic hero of that fine young Irish lad, O'Donnell, some six years ago, and have been at it hard and fast ever since.'

'Papa!'

She half rose, the colour vivid now on the clear, pale cheeks.

'And again papa! I speak the truth do I not, my dear? You are a coquette born, as I have said and knowing you are possessed of pride enough and common sense enough to let no man one inch nearer than it was your will he should come, I have up to the present in no way interfered with your favorite sport. But the time has come to change all that. Sir Arthur Tregenna is coming, and I warn you your customery won't do here. You have had your day—you may safely with draw from the fray where you have been conqueress so long, and rest on your laurels.'

She rose up, and stood stately, and beautiful, and haughty before him.

'Papa, you speak as if Sir Arthur Tregenna had power, and authority over me. He has none—none. He has no claim—no shadow of a claim upon me.'

'You mistake, Lady Cecil,'—the cool, keen, steel grey eyes of the earl met the indignant brown ones full—'or you forget Sir Arthur Tregenna is your affianced husband.'

'My affianced husband! A man who has never spoken one word in his life beyond the most ordianary civilities of common acquaintance!'

'And whose fault is that, Queenie? Not his, poor fellow, certainly. Carry your mind back three years—to your first season—your first presentation. He spent that season in London, only waiting for one word, one look of encouragement from you to speak. That word never came. You flirted desperately with young Lennox, of the Scotch Greys, and when he proposed, threw him over. He exchanged into an Indian regiment, and was shot through the heart by a Sepoy bullet, just one week after he became Lord Glenallan. Not a pleasant recollection for you. I should thing, Lady Cecil; but, as I said before, I don't wish to reproach you. You are to marry Sir Arthur, that is as fixed as fate.'

And looking in his face, she knew it. She sank back into her seat, and hid her face in her hands with a sob, more like a child than the bright, invincible La Reine Blanche.

'Papa, you are unkind; you are cruel. I don't care for Sir Arthur; he doesn't care for me.'

'Who is to tell that? He will differ from most of his kind if he find the lesson a hard one to learn. And you don't care for him? My Lady Cecil do you ever—have you ever realized what you are—an earl's daughter and a—beggar?'

She did not lift her face. He looked at her grimly, and went on:

'A beggar—literally that—without a farthing of allowance; without a roof you can call your own; without a penny of portion. Do you know, Lady Cecil, that I lost two thousand on this year's Derby—my all! Learn it now, at least. We sit here this June morning, Queenie, paupers; with title and name, and the best blood of the realm—paupers! Sir Peter Dangerfield, the most pitiful little miser on earth, pays for the bread you eat, for the roof that shelters you, for the carriage you drive in, the opera box you sit in, the servants who wait upon you. He pays for them because the Salic law has exploded in England, and he is under petticoat government. He is afraid of his wife, and his wife is your cousin. That pink silk and point-lace trimming is excessively becoming, my dear, imported from Worth, was it not? Take care of it, Queenie; there isn't a farthing in the Ruysland exchequer to buy another when that is worn. And I am—unkind, cruel. My dear, I shall never force you to call me that again. Don't marry Sir Arthur Tregenna. You play very nicely, sing very nicely, draw very nicely, and waltz exquisitely—what is to hinder you turning these accomplishments to account? Earls' daughter's have been governesses before now, and may again.' I advise you, though, to write out your advertisement and send it to the 'Times' at once, while I have still have half a guinea left for its insertion.' He drew out his watch—a hunting watch, the case sparling with diamonds; 'I will not keep you up longer—it is nearly five o'clock.'

She rose to her feet and confronted him. The flush had all faded out. She was whiter than the roses in her hair.

'This is all true you have been telling me, papa? We are so poor, so dependent as this—hopelessly and irretrievably ruined?'

'Hopelessly and irretrievably ruined!'

He spoke with perfect calmness. Ruined beyond all hope—ruin wrought by his own hand—he faced her without falter or blanch.

She stood a moment silent, her eyes fixed upon the letter—pale, proud, and cold. Then she spoke:

'What is it you wish me to do?'

'Sir Arthur Tregenna is worth thirty thousand a year. I wish you to marry Sir Arthur.'

'What am I to do?' she repeated, still proudly, still coldly. 'He has never spoken one word to me, never written one word that even a vainer woman than I am could construe into love-making; and I am a pauper, and he thirty thousand a year, it is not to be supposed that he marries me from interested motives. 'Does he say here,' touching the letter, 'that he wishes me to become his wife.'

'He does not. But he is a man of honor, and your name has long been linked with his. To have her name linked with that of any man compromises any woman, unless it end in marriage. He knows this. He is the soul of honor; he is coming here with no other intention than that of asking you to be his wife.'

A flush of pain—of shame—of humiliation, passed over the exquisite face of the earl's daughter.

'It is rather hard on Sir Arthur that he should be obliged to marry me whether or no, and a little hard also on me. And this marriage will save you from ruin—will it, papa?'

'It will save me from ruin—from disgrace—from exile for life. It will give me a house wherein to end my days; it will make those days happy. I desire it more strongly than I ever desired anything in my life. I do not deny, Cecil, that I have been reckless and prodigal; but all that is past and done with. I don't want to see the daughter of whom I have been so proud—the toast of the clubs, the belle of the ball-rooms, the beauty of London—eating the bitter bread of dependence. Cecil, it is of no use struggling against destiny, and your destiny has written you down Lady Cecil Tregenna. When Sir Arthur speaks, your answer will be Yes.'

'It—it will be Yes.'

She said it with a sort of gasp. No young queen upon her throne had ever been prouder or purer for all her flirting than La Reine Blanche; and what it cost her to make this concession, her own humbled soul alone knew.

'Thank you, Queenie;' her father drew her to him, and touched his lips to her cheek. 'You never disappointed in your life. I knew you would not now. It is the dearest desire of my heart, child. You will be the wealthiest and most brilliant woman in all England. You have made me happy. Once more, thanks very much, and good-morning.'

He threw open the door, bowed her out with most Chesterfieldian politeness, and watched the tall, graceful figure in its rose silk, its rich laces, its perfumed flowers, its gleaming jewels, from sight. Then he smiled to himself:

> "It's a very fine thing to be father-in-law
> To a very magnificent three-tailed bashaw."

'She has promised, and all is safe. I know her well—I know him well. The thumbscrews of the holy office could not make either break a pledge once given. Ah, my lady! I wonder if you would have promised, even with penury staring you in the face, if you had seen, as I did, Redmond O'Donnel looking at you at the opera?'

Lady Cecil went slowly up to her rooms trailing her ball draperies after her, a violet and gold boudoir, a sleeping-room adjoining, all white and blue. And seated in the boudoir, still wearing her amber silk, her Spanish laces, and opals, sat the mistress of the mansion, Sir Peter Dangerfield's wife.

'What an endless age you have been, Queenie,' Lady Dangerfield said peevishly. 'What on earth could Uncle Raoul have to say to you at this blessed hour of the morning?'

Lady Cecil stood beside her, a touch of weariness in her pale face.

'He told me Sir Arthur Tregenna was coming—would be here next week.'

'Ah!' my lady said, looking at her quickly, 'at last! To marry you, Queenie?'

She stood silent—pained—shamed —humbled beyond expression.

'You don't speak, and you look vexed, Queenie,' with energy. 'You don't mean to say—you will never be so silly—so stupidly silly—as to refuse him if he asks?'

'If he asks!' Lady Cecil repeated, with inexpressible bitterness. 'Oh, Ginerva! don't let us talk about it. I am to be sold, it seems, if this rich Cornishman chooses to buy me. What choice have I in the manner—what choice had you? We are like the lilies of the field, who toil not, neither do they spin—as far, perhaps, and useless. When our masters come for us we go—until then we run the round of Vanity Fair and wait. Ginerva, I wonder what it is like to be poor?'

'It is like misery—it is like torture —it is like death!' Lady Dangerfield burst out passionately. 'I was poor once, wretchedly, miserably poor, and I tell you I would rather die a thousand times than undergo penury again. You may know how horrible poverty is, when it is more horrible than marrying Peter Dangerfield. I abhor both, but I abhor poverty most. No need to look at me like that, Queenie; I mean what I say. You never supposed I cared for that odious little monster, did you?'

'Ginerva,' Lady Cecil said, falling back wearily into an easy chair, 'I begin to think they are right in those heathen conutries—India, China, Japan—where is it?—where they destroy female children as soon as they are born? It is miserable, it is degrading, it is horrible—the lives we lead, the marriages we make. I hate myself, scorn myself to-night.

Lady Dangerfield shrugged her shoulders.

'Strong language, my dear, and strong language is bad 'form' always. Has La Reine Blanche found her Darnley at last?'

'If Mary, Queen of Scots, lived in these days, she would never have lost her great, brave heart to so poor a creature as Henry Darnley. No, Ginerva; no Darnley exists for me. Men are all alike in eighteen hundred and sixty—all talk with the same drawl, all stare out of the same club windows, all part their hair down the middle, and do nothing. Are you going?'

'Time to go at five o'clock, is it not? I only stepped in here to tell you we go down to Scarswood in three days. Send for Desiree, Queenie, and go to bed. Even your complexion will not stand for ever such horribly late hours.'

And then, yawning very much, Lady Dangerfield went away to bed, and Lady Cecil was left alone.

It was late, certainly, but the Earl of Ruysland's daughter did not take her cousin's advice and go to bed. On the contrary, she sat where she had left her for over an hour, never once moving—lost in thought. Then she slowly arose, crossed over to where a writing case, all gold and ebony, stood upon an inlaid table, took a tiny golden key from her chatelain and unlocked it. It contained many drawers. One of these, opening with a spring, she drew out, removed its contents, and stood with a smile half sad, half mocking on her lips, gazing upon them Relics evidently. A branch of clematis dry and colourless, but sweet still, a short curl of dark, crisp hair, a pencil sketch of a frank, manly, boyish face, and a note that was all—that was all. The note was yellow with time, the ink faded and this what it contained, in a big, bold hand:

> 'DEAR LADY CECIL:—I rode to Ballynahaghart yesterday, and got the book and the music you wanted. I shall fetch them over when I come at the usual hour to-day.
>
> 'Respectfully 'R.'

She read it over, still with a half smile on her lips.

THERE'S VIRTUE IN WHISTLING.

An old farmer once said he would not have a hired man on his farm who would not habitually whistle. He always hired whistlers. Said he never knew a whistling laborer to find fault with his food, his bed, or complain of any little extra work he was asked to perform. Such men were generally kind to children and to animals in their care. He would whistle a chilled lamb into warmth of life, and would bring in his hat full of eggs from the barn without breaking one of them. He found such men more careful about closing gates, putting up bars, and seeing that the nuts on his plow were all properly tightened before he took it into the field. He never knew a whistling hired man to beat or kick a cow, or to drive her on a run into the stable. He had noticed that the sheep he fed in the yard or she gathered around him as he whistled, without fear. He never had employed a whistler who was not thoughtful and economical.

FRISKLY OLD MEN.

ONE CUTTING A NEW SET OF TEETH AND ANOTHER TURNING HANDSPRINGS.

Elias De Puy is 95 years of age and still able to walk eight miles a day over rough hills. He lives near Lackawack, in Ulster county, N. Y., in a country sparsely settled, on rough farming lands. He is in excellent health, yet not a follower of temperance principles, for he believed in the old Dutch custom of taking gin "straight," and has chewed all his life the rankest and strongest tobacco. He has had five wives and eight children. His eldest son is 70 and gray-haired, while his youngest son was born after he was 85 years old. He was sixty years of age when he married his last wife, while she was 19. A remarkable thing about Mr. De Puy is that he is cutting a new set of teeth. Nine new teeth have already made their appearance. His eyesight is excellent, and he reads almost continually. He is the most remarkably preserved man in the state.

A 74 year-old resident of Westfield, Mass., is proud of his ability to turn a hand spring, strike his feet together twice at one jump from the floor, and perform other feats which but few other "boys" of his age are able to accomplish.

WHAT TO STUDY.

Pope, the poetical philosopher said, "The proper study of mankind is man," and yet, how little is the real science of man studied. If people understood and heeded the laws of health, and if when out of sorts would resort to a common sense like Burdock Blood Bitters, many of the "ills that flesh is heir to" might be effectually remedied. It invigorates and regulates all the secretions to a healthy action.

NOTES FOR THE FARMER.

TRANSPLANTING EVERGREENS.

The best season for transplanting evergreens is from April to June. Spruces are very easy to transplant, and if the roots are kept from drying and are protected from the air, and well spread and surrounded with the fresh soil, they can be moved without any loss whatever.

A BROKEN HORN.

It is not at all infrequent that a young cow, especially of the Jersey breed, may break off the shell of the horn, leaving the inner core bare. If this is wrapped in an oiled cloth, or even in a bandage wetted with water, to protect the horn from the air, a new horny covering will grow over the core, and although it will not ever again be wholly repaired, yet the horn will become hard and solid again.

PREMATURE MILKING.

The appearance of milk in a mare or a heifer before dropping the foal or the calf is no indication that anything is wrong, unless there is some other additional cause for suspicion. Heifers have been known to give milk some months before they calved, and occasionally before they have been in calf. It is a freak of nature, that is all. In the case of a mare to foal in April, it would be well to dry up the milk as quickly as possible, taking a little away twice a day to relieve the udder; the milk will return when the foal is dropped.

A GRAPE-VINE PEST.

A small insect known as thrips attacks grape-vines, appearing first on the under sides of the leaves in June, when they puncture the leaves and suck the sap. As they grow they change their skins accumulate as a white, downy substance. In course of time the insects become winged and fly about. They weaken the vines very much, and prevent the growth and ripening of the wood. The remedy is to spray the under sides of the leaves with lime-water, in which a tablespoonful of carbolic acid to the pailful of lime is dissolved. A large syringe with a rose sprinkler is suitable for this work. As these insects hide on the ground under the fallen leaves during the gwinter, it would be a measure of precaution to gather these leaves and burn them, and then drench the ground with the lime preparation.

HOW TO USE LIME.

It is difficult to go wrong in applying lime. It is useful anywhere and on any soils. It may be spread on grass land, stubble, on fall grain, on clay land, and on sand, and will be equally valuable on each. Oats and potatoes are the only crops not benefited by lime; potatoes grown on limed land do not boil mealy, but are very hard; oats yield less on limed land, but corn, rye, wheat, and especially grass and clover, are benefited, the lime may be spread now, as it dissolves more readily in cold than in warm weather, and it will be far easier spread from a sled than from a waggon. Load forty bushels on a sled and drive across a field, scattering the lime with a long-handled shovel on each side for a rod (sixteen and a half feet), which a man can easily do. If this load is spread over a strip eighty rods long there will be forty bushels per acre, which is a very fair dressing.

CULLIVATION OF ONIONS.

Onions require very clean ground, and, at the best, a good deal of labour is needed to keep them free from weeds. As they are grown in narrow rows and very close in the row, much hand weeding is necessary, and if the manure used or the soil is weedy the crop cannot be kept clean without a great expenditure for weeding, and in many cases the help required to weed is not to be procured. The crop is then very poor and unprofitable, and sometimes may be a total loss. On this account the soil should be previously well cultivated with other crops; potatoes, roots, corn, peas, or beans may be grown, and these kept well hoed. Fall ploughing is also advisable, and harrowing as the weeds start to grow. As onions improve when grown upon the same ground year after year, probably on account of the cleanness of the soil after so many weedings, it is well to make thorough preparation first, and then to use only artificial fertilizers which, are free from weeds, occasionally using a rich compost of bone-dust or superphosphate of lime with clean rotted swamp muck. A special manure is prepared for onions.

MAINE NEWS.—Hop Bitters, which are advertised in our columns, are a sure cure for ague, biliousness and kidney complaints. Those who use them say they cannot be too highly recommended. Those afflicted should give them a fair trial, and will become thereby enthusiastic in the praise of their curative qualities.—Portland Argus.

OBITUARY.

We have this week to perform the sad task of announcing the death of one of our oldest residents, Mr. EDWARD RUTLEDGE, Sr., who departed this life on the morning of Tuesday last, after a long and painful illness, which he bore with exemplary Christian fortitude, at the age of 74 years. The deceased was born in the County of Fermanagh Ireland, in the year 1808 and emigrated to Canada in the year 1831, and first settled in the Township of Goldburne, where he resided four years. From thence he removed to the County of Leeds where fifteen years of his life were passed. He then removed to the County of Grey where he resided up to the time of his death.

The deceased was the father of 14 children, 9 of whom (3 sons and 6 daughters) still survive him. In his death his children lose an affectionate parent, his acquaintances a true friend, and the community at large an esteem citizen. He was followed to his last resting place by a large concourse of mourning friends and relations, showing the high estimation in which he was held. Mr. McDiarmid preached an impressive sermon from Hebrews xi. 4. "By faith Abel offered unto God a more excellent sacrifice than Cain, by which he obtained witness that he was righteous, God testifying of his gifts; and by it he being dead yet speaketh."

The deceased had been for many years a devout member of the Methodist Church, and died in the "sure and certain hope" of a happy immortality, believing fully in the blessed promises contained in that Good Book, of which he was an ardent student.

PICTURESQUE CANADA.

Mr. J. W. Hunt, the gentlemanly agent of the art publishing company, of Toronto, who is now delivering parts 3 and 4 of the above work, placed them on our table on Thursday last. Did we not know to the contrary, we would say unhesitatingly that the work was got up in England. We have seen nothing to equal it on this side of the Atlantic. The letter press is the best we have seen for many a day, and engravings are simply superb. Most notable among them are the Falls of Montmorency; Falls of St. Anne; Falls of St. Fereol; Falls of Lorette; view of cape Rouge and Diamond; a moonlight view of the St. Lawrence, showing the light ship, &c; the Chaudiere Falls near Quebec; with a number of minor views, descriptive of Lower Canada and French Canadian Life. Alltogether the work is a credit to the publishers, and in fact to the Dominion, and should receive the best support of our people.

We this week publish a communication referring to an article that appeared in our columns in last week's issue. We would commend it to the careful consideration of our business men There is no doubt but that the business of Markdale could be largely increased had we better roads. We know of no investment that would return a larger per centage for the outlay than a few hundred dollars judiciously expended in the improvement of the roads spoken of, and would seriously advise all interested (and who in Markdale is not) to see to it that the matter is not allowed to drop, otherwise thousands of dollars that would assuredly come to Markdale, will undoubtedly go elsewhere.

One of the pleasantest affairs we have participated in for some time in the shape of a supper, took place at the Revere House, Markdale, on Friday last, the 24th ult. Upwards of 70 of the employees of the T. G. & B. Railway, with some invited guests met at the above hotel for the purpose of enjoying themselves and presenting the Road Master, Mr. H. Bagnall, with a gold watch, as a slight token of the high esteem in which he was held by them. After doing full justice to the bivalves, which were placed before them in Mrs. Sproule's best style, the business of the evening commenced by calling Mr. Tansley, of Shelburne, to the chair, and Mr. Phillips, of , to the vice chair. After the usual loyal toasts had been drank and responded to then came the toast of the evening, "Our Guest," which was drank with all the honors and the following address was read by Mr. Hacking.

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen:

Considering the immense load of responsibility that rests upon us all it cannot be deemed unreasonable that, like the passengers on our trains, we should have opportunities for rest and refreshments. Even the Iron Horse has to be coaled up some times and we are not made of iron. It is the nature of railroad men to fraternize. They are linked together by the strongest ties—railroad ties, I may say, and as they travel over life's track to the grand terminus, they may surely be excused for forming a junction on the road as we have to-night.

As the occasion which has called us together to-night is known to you all, it would be a waste of your time to make any explanation. It is at all times a pleasing task to do honor to those we esteem, but the pleasure increases when we find this esteem is shared by so large a body of my co-workers and subscribers as in the present case. I will not dilate on the many good services rendered us by our good friend Mr. Bagnall, or the upright and manly conduct that has characterized his course since he has been our overseer, and winning for him the esteem of us all. Were he not present, more might be said, as it is we must be content It is now the happy task of Mr. Tansley to present you. Mr. Bagnall, in the name of myself and the subscribers with a gold watch.

Time, we are told, was made for slaves, but its exponent, in the shape of a gold watch, has seemed to some of your friends as a fitting present to the one who is supposed to keep the time for us.

Now, sir, may your life be long to look on it as a feeble token of the high estimation formed of you by so many of your fellow workmen; and when it shall please the great Master Workman of the Universe to remove you from this life, may the watch descend as an heir-loom to your children, and stimulate them to follow the course that won for their ancestor the praise and respect of his fellow men.

Mr. Bagnall, in rising to respond, showed that he was deeply moved by the substantial token of the good will entertained toward him by his subordinates, and expressed his gratitude in a brief but heart-felt manner for the honor done him. He stated that his heart was too full to allow him to give utterance to all he felt.

The watch, which was a very handsome one, cost $80. The presentation was made by Mr. Tansley of Shelburne.

The Officers and Directors of the T., G. & B. Railway, was responded to by Messrs. Hunter, contractor, and Wanless, Inspector.

The Press. Responded to by Mr. Morgan, of the STANDARD.

There were several other toasts, but as our space is limited we are compelled to omit them, and simply give the names of the various speakers, as follows:— Messrs. Pickett, Allen, Scott, McKitrick, and Mr. Fox, Jeweller, Orangeville: Mr. McRae, the popular Reeve of Glenelg, was present by special invitation, and made one of his usual vigorous speeches. Mr. Meldrum, Agent of Flesherton Station, made a few remarks, and gave a recitation, which was well received.

The evening's enjoyment was enlivened by an occasional song from Messrs. Ashdown, Walker, McAuley, C. Bagnall, Beaton, Gibson, Arnold, Tansley, Hyland, Wanless and others. Mr. Hyland's singing with "Bone" accompaniment was exceedingly good and appeared to be highly appreciated. Mr. Wanless sang "My Ain Fireside" with fine effect, arousing many latent feelings. We regret that Mr. Cæsar was unable to attend, his absence being caused by family affliction. The night's festivities were brought to a close by passing a vote of thanks to the Chairman, Mr. Tansley, and drinking his health in a bumper, and singing the National Anthem.

The proceedings throughout were marked by the best of order and good feeling. The "boys" went in for a good time, and they had it.

P. T. BARNUM FALLS INTO LINE.

Scanning our various exchanges, we notice especial distinction given in prominent New York dailies to Barnum, Bailey & Hutchinson's strong endorsement of St. Jacobs Oil as a pain-reliever. They too, have fallen into line, it would seem.—Cincinnati (O.) Enquirer.

BUNESSIN.

On Tuesday evening a deputation from the Priceville Branch of the Bible and Tract Society held a meeting in the church here. Mr. Wm. Young was called to the chair, and the meeting was opened with devotional exercises. Mr. Irwin, Secretary, read the annual report, and showed samples of books kept in Depository. Addresses were delivered by the members of the deputation and also by Mr. Geo. Binnie, who spoke of the practical usefulness of the Society, in a local point of view; the benefits derivable from it in the circulation of well selected books at wholesale prices, and recommended the Society to the support of the community in the objects aimed at. The Chairman, Mr. Young, referred to the importance of the Bible, the need for acting on its injunctions, and expressed his pleasure at the peculiarly unsectarian nature of the objects and aims of the Association. A liberal collection was taken up at the close, and not only so but collectors were appointed on behalf of the Society to wait on those well disposed for further contribution.

This is the third year running that what may be called an annual branch meeting of the Priceville Society has been held at Bunessin, and from the appreciation with which the deputation has hitherto been received it is very likely that future years will find the Priceville Society "pegging away" a good deal in the direction of Bunessin.

DIPHTHERIA.

The latest and most successful treatment for this dreaded disease has lately come to our knowledge, and having interviewed the man who says his life was saved by the new treatment we feel confident it is our duty to give the facts to our readers, that they may investigate for themselves. The circumstances are as follows; Amede Chartier, of West Farnham, P. Q., recently had diphtheria; he became so bad off after a relapse that all hopes of his recovery was abandoned by his physicians and friends, and as a last resort a brother of the patient said that he had a bottle of Kendall's Spavin Cure and wished to try it. He applied it to the neck, and then reduced a little, and the patient after some difficulty succeeded in gargling it in the throat He soon noticed some improvement, and by continuing its use a complete cure was effected, and now he says he knows it saved his life. The above remarkable experience led us to investigate farther, and we found that Kendall's Spavin Cure has the most remarkable effect on human flesh of any remedy of which we have ever heard, and we have become soundly converted to the opinion that no remedy has ever been discovered which possesses such remarkable qualities for the diseases of man as well as beast. Every one should cut and paste this into a scrap-book.—Tunis.

CORRESPONDENCE.

NOTICE.—We wish it distinctly understand that we do not hold ourselves reponsible for the opinions expressed by our correspondence

To the Editor.

DEAR SIR,—The village of Dundalk, as you well know, is noted for its athletic sports, and in common with such pastimes the national game of Canada was introduced under the name of "The Garnett Lacrosse Club," with duly appointed officers, and a Treasurer who manipulated the funds for the benefit of the club. (This is sarcasm.)

After the season was over the members naturally wished to hear how the club stood financially, and were informed there was eleven dollars and a few cents to the good. At a general meeting of the club our lamented Treasurer was requested to pay the balance to our worthy banker here to the credit of the club. But from present appearances such a catastrophe will not occur, and some of the boys are sorrowing over broken bones in the interest of the game, and have had to be fed with a spoon.

JINKS.

Dundalk, Feb. 28th, 1882.

To the Editor.

I noticed an article in the STANDARD of Feb. 24th urging the business men of Markdale to subscribe to the improvement of 6 and 7 sideroad, from the Valley to the 7th concession, Euphrasia, with a view to bring trade to Markdale. This is a matter that should be looked after at once, as there is a large and fertile tract of country that should do their trading at Markdale; but at present have to go three or four times the distance to Meaford, Thornbury or Collingwood, because there is no road passable, with anything like a load, to Markdale.

As this matter has been broached I will, with your permission, Mr. Editor, give you my idea of the best route to tap this trade; having lived here for over twenty years, and having given a good deal of attention to road matters in this vicinity. I think your readers that are interested and aware of the facts will agree with me that there is a better outlet than the one mentioned. The beginning of the route referred to has been surveyed by Euphrasia Council and is now being advertised. It commences in the Valley at 3rd and 4th sideroad running south to town line, connecting with a road already established in Artemesia, going up the mountain one lot from townline to the Meaford Road. This road is admitted to be up the most favorable pass of the mountain, and although yet a new road it is the best out of the Valley for miles either way. When on the Meaford Road there is a choice of markets, viz: Markdale or Flesherton This road not yet being opened up, very few of the inhabitants of Kimberly and surrounding country are aware of so favorable an outlet. If the money and labor now being subscribed for 6 and 7 sideroad were expended on this road it would accommodate all that the other road would, and as many more from the other end of the Valley, besides all from over the Valley on fourteenth concession. The road now mentioned can be built for a great deal less money, besides being a great deal better when built. I have seen parties from Kimberley who will subscribe liberally for this new road; the saw miller, particularly is very anxious for this road to be built, as he would then ship all his lumber at Markdale instead of at Thornbury as at present.

While referring to this road perhaps it might not be out of place to suggest to the Councils of both Townships the propriety of closing the townline across the Valley, as it is considered impassable, and adopt this new road instead.

Ayer's Hair Vigor,

FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

IT is a most agreeable dressing, which is at once harmless and effectual, for preserving the hair. It restores, with the gloss and freshness of youth, faded or gray, light, and red hair, to a rich brown, or deep black, as may be desired. By its use thin hair is thickened, and baldness often though not always cured. It checks falling of the hair immediately, and causes a new growth in all cases where the glands are not decayed; while to brashy, weak, or otherwise diseased hair, it imparts vitality and strength, and renders it pliable.

The VIGOR cleanses the scalp, cures and prevents the formation of dandruff; and, by its cooling, stimulating, and soothing properties, it heals most if not all of the humors and diseases peculiar to the scalp, keeping it cool, clean, and soft, under which conditions diseases of the scalp and hair are impossible.

As a Dressing for Ladies' Hair

The VIGOR is incomparable. It is colorless, contains neither oil nor dye, and will not soil white cambric. It imparts an agreeable and lasting perfume, and as an article for the toilet it is economical and unsurpassed in its excellence.

Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis, Pains in the Throat and Chest, relieved and cured by the use of Dr. Carson's Pulmonary Cough Drops. The most reliable testmony has been received as to their efficasy. In Bottles, 50 cents. A. Turner and Co. Special Agent Markdale.

Horace Greeley's bad penmanship has passed into a proverb. No description of it without a fac-simile of the writing could convey any idea of its illegibility. It is charitable, however, to the old philosopher to suppose that the fault lay with the pens he had been accustomed to use, but what a world of grief and trouble would have been saved to the compositors if he had written his editorals with an Esterbrook Falcon Pen.

We were under the impression that Markdale and vicinity could boast of some of the tallest men in Ontario, but we had a call from a gentleman on Monday last, who stands 6 foot seven and one forth inches in his boots McLaughery Wright and others of that ilk must now take a back seat.

The next sitting of the Court for the 5th Division of the County of Grey will be held at Markdale, on the 20th of April next. This will give a great advantage to the citizens of Markdale and surrounding country, as many would rather allow small accounts to remain uncollected than be put to the extra expense of going to Flesherton or Dundalk.

Mr. Samuel McCaw, the well-known Conductor on the Whitby and Lindsay Railway, says Dr. Carson's Stomach and Constipation Bitters cured me of Dyspepsia. I always keep them in the house, and consider them invaluable as a family medicine. A Turner and Co., Special Agent, Markdale.

We have often been told that undertakers, when saying their prayers, send up a petition that the season might prove unhealthy. Of course we do not vouch for the truth of the saying, but if they do, they are no worse than the toomb stone men. Only think of it, one of them had the audacity to inform us he would get up our head stone in the spring.

OFF TO MANITOBA.—Many of our citizens will regret to know that Mr. Rowe, who has been practicing his profession here for the past few months, has decided upon going to the Great Lone Land. Though only here for a short time he made many friends by his corteous and gentlemanly disposition. He carries with him the good wishes of the residents of Markdale.

A PUBLIC MEETING should be called of the citizens of every city, town and village in the Dominion, to consider what should be done to prevent the hair from turning Gray—and falling out. If this important question received their earnest consideration they would unanimously decide that science had at last discovered something that would answer this purpose—and furthermore would recommend Cingalese Hair Renewer as being this something for restoring the hair to its natural color, and prevent its falling out. 50 cents per bottle. For sale by all Druggists.

The American Agricultural, for March 1st, just issued, contains over a hundred longer and shorter articles, giving useful, practical information for the Farm, Garden, and Household and fifty or more engravings. Among these we notice: Suggestions of and for the season; A Pioneer's Dwelling Costing $250 to $500, with Plans, Specifications, etc. (a First Prize article among 183 plans in competition); a New Disease in Diary Stock, by X.A. Willard; Important Experiments on Deep and Shallow Milk Pans, by Dr. Jenkins, of the Connecticut Agricultural Station; Stock and Grain Barn, with engravings; Sheep-herding boxes New Cattle Tie, by Prof. Shelton Kansas Agricultural College; Cutworms and other Insects, by Dr. Oember, of Georgia; Instructive Fertilizer Experiments by a Farmer, from Prof. W. DUNDALK.

(From the Herald.)

Remember the Fair Dayis on Tuesday, the 7th inst.

There are a large number of farmers going to Manitoba early in the spring.

Protan Council meeting sits in Hopeville, on Tue day the 7th inst., at Scarletts' Hotel.

John Marshall Esq., has returned from a trip on his wedding tour. We wish him and his new wife much success through life.

Our winter still keeps open, the farmers have a large quantity of wood and timber to team and would be glad to have a week or two of good sleighing.

Business in general is rather dull, on account of having no sleighing, in fact our climate seems to be gradually changing year by year, and becoming more like old country weather.

Parties who would wish to get a sample of the Celebrated French spring wheat, grown by C. Grant, Esq. of Thornbury, can be supplied by calling at the office of A. G. Hunter, Dundalk, where samples may be seen.

As will be seen by refering to our advertising columns, Mr. Geo. Rutherford, Real Estate and General Loan Agent has opened an office in Dundalk where he is prepared to Loan money at the lowest rates of interest and attend to all other business in his line, give him a call.

Mr. Samuel McDowell, son of Mr. John McDowell, is home on a visit from the North-West. He is hale and hearty and gives a glowing account of the North West, especially of the healthy climate. He having enjoyed a term of four years in Manitoba, and the North-West territory, is fully acquainted with all the particulars, and will be quite willing to give any particulars with reference to that foreign land.

Mechanical Orguinette.

An Automatic Reed Organ.

"The Orguinette may now be called a celebrated instrument. In tone it is like to the Cabinet Organ, but the organ must be manipulated by an artist in order to produce music; the ORGUINETTE is on the other hand entirely mechanical in its action, and at a trifling expense it can be made to furnish an unlimited supply of all kinds of music. —Toronto Globe."

"The Orguinette is indeed a musical wonder. It is a miniature reed organ with as strong and melodious a tone as the Cabinet Size. It surpasses the Cabinet Organ for the reason that the ignoramus in music can play it as well as the most accomplished professor. THE ORGUINETTE is strong and accurate in its mechanism, and consequently not liable to get out of order."—Montreal Gazette.

"The Orguinette is the most perfect automatic musical instrument yet have seen its repertorie is unlimited, the tone is remarkably good."—Montreal Star.

Money orders to the amount of $452.50 were issued and signed by the Reeve and Clerk.

Moved by Norton, seconded by Mr. Shute, that the above mentioned orders be paid.

Moved by Mr. Deavitt, seconded by the Deputy Reeve, that this Council adjourn till the 28th of March.

CARSON PRICE, Clerk.

THE ELECTRIC LIGHT

Superceding as it does all other modes of illumination, and rivalled only by the glorious sunshine, will not be hailed with greater joy by all other blood purifiers and tonics as the electric light is superior to the old fashioned tallow dip. Burdock Blood Bitters cures Scrofula, and all foul humors and impurities of the blood.

HELPING A CONSTABLE.

One day a Michigan Constable who had long been trying to collect a claim of $10 against a sharp citizen, went to a worthy burger and said:

"See here, Jones, I've got a plan to collect $40 off the sharper Perkins. All I want is a little help from you, and if you'll grant it I won't forget the favor."

"I'm willing—what's your plan?" replied Jones.

"Why, I want you to bet him $20 that he doesn't weigh 120 pounds. If you'll do that I can fix the rest."

"Oh, I'll do anything to help you out," said Jones, and the two walked around to the grocery where Perkins was known to hang out. After a little talk, the Constable keeping in the shade, Jones began bluffing, and when he stated his fiendish desire to bet $20 that Perkins wouldn't tip the beam at 120 pounds his greenbacks were covered before a mule could kick three times. As the money was put up the Constable slipped out for a granishee, and was back in time to serve it on the stake holder. Perkins weighed 148 pounds, and the $40 in the hands of the stakeholder eventually paid a claim against him, but it has never yet been made plain to Jones how he made anything out of it. It has always seemed to him that he was $20 out, and for fifteen long years he has refused to walk on the same side of the street with that Constable.

HAGYARD'S YELLOW OIL.

Will be found invaluable for all purposes of a family medicine. Immediate relief will follow its use. It relieves pain, cures chilblains, frost bites, scalds, burns, corns, rheumatism, neuralgia, &c. For internal use it is none the less wonderful. One or two doses frequently cure sore throat. It will cure croup in a few minutes. A few bottles has often cured asthma. Colic has been cured by a teaspoonful dose. It cures with the utmost rapidity, it is really a wonderful medicine.

The Mail says: On Saturday 20 cars of hops were shipped to east Cambridge, and twenty-five cars of hops passed through the City on the same day for England.

A RELIABLE FACT.

It is an established fact that Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam is the best cure for coughs, colds sore throat, asthma, croup, bronchitis, and all troubles arising from neglected colds. Price 25 cents.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

The most successful Remedy ever discovered, as it is certain in its effects and does not blister. READ PROOF BELOW.

FROM THE ONEONTA PRESS, N.Y.

Oneonta, New York, Jan. 6th, 1881.

Early last summer Messrs. J. B. Kendall & Co., of Enosburgh Falls, Vt., made a contract with the publishers of the Press for a half column advertisement for one year setting forth the merits of Kendall's Spavin Cure. At the same time we secured from the firm a quantity of books, entitled Dr. Kendall's Treatise on the Horse and his Diseases, which we are giving to advance paying subscribers of the Press as a premium.

About the time the advertisement first appeared in this paper Mr. P. G. Schermerhorn, who resides near Colliers, had a spavined horse. He read the advertisement and concluded to test the efficacy of the remedy, although his friends laughed at his credulity. He bought a bottle of Kendall's Spavin Cure and commenced using it on the horse in accordance with the directions, and he informed us this week that it effected such a complete cure that an expert horseman, who examined the animal recently could find no trace of the spavin or the place where it had been located. Mr. Schermerhorn has since secured a copy of Kendall's Treatise of the Horse and his Diseases, which he prizes very highly and would be loth to part with at any price, provided he could not obtain another copy. So much for advertising reliable articles.

Kendall's Spavin Cure.

New Hamburg, Ont., Dec. 28th, 1881.

Mr. F. H. McCallum, Dear Sir:—The bottle of Dr. Kendall's Spavin Cure bought of you last summer gave me the utmost satisfaction and performed a wonderful cure upon a mare nineteen years old belonging to me, which was badly spavined for ten years. She was so lame that I could hardly get her to move. The lameness is entirely gone after using half a bottle of the cure, and she is like a young horse again.

Yours truly,
J. F. ROTH.

FROM A PROMINENT PHYSICIAN.

Washingtonville, Ohio, June 17th, 1880

Dr. J. B. Kendall & Co., Gents:—Reading your advertisement in Turf, Field and Farm, of Kendall's Spavin Cure, and having a valuable and speedy horse which had been lame from spavin for eighteen months, I sent to you for a bottle by express, which in six weeks removed all lameness and enlargement and a large splint from another horse and both horses are to day as sound as colts. The one bottle was worth to me one hundred dollars.

Respectfully yours,
H. A. BERTOLETT, M. D.

Kendall's Spavin Cure.
ON HUMAN FLESH.

Thousands of trials on human flesh has proved beyond a doubt that "KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE" has sufficient strength to penetrate and virtue to cure the worst cases of rheumatism, corns, bunyons, frost-bites, or any bruise, cut or lameness which are not affected in the least by ordinary liniments. It does not blister but on the contrary removes all soreness.

St. Johns, P.Q., Oct. 27th, 1881.

Dr. B. Kendall & Co., Gents:—I have used your Spavin Cure with great success on spavins, curbs and splints. I know it to be a good remedy for ringbones, bone spavins, cuts, galls and all kinds of lameness and many other difficulties about the horse. One of my men sprained his ankle badly. I applied Kendall's Spavin Cure and I never saw anything work like it, he was well in a few days. I know it to be good for man as well as beast. I procured one of your Treatise on the Horse, by mail for 25c., and I think it was the means of saving me $100 on one horse that I treated according to the directions given in your book for displaced stifle.

Yours truly,
WM. J. PEARSON.

Dunham, P.Q., March 10th, 1879.

Dr. B. J. Kendall & Co., Gents:—About a year ago I fell in the road onto some ice and was badly hurt in the hip joint, which caused me much suffering. I tried various remedies but none gave relief, until I tried Kendall's Spavin Cure. I applied it full strength twice a day for two weeks during last October and it effected a perfect cure. I have since then been well and free from lameness. It is very valuable for man as well as beast.

Yours truly,
CHESTER K. GREEN.

Kendall's Spavin Cure.

Is sure in its effects, mild in actions as it does not blister, yet it is penetrating and powerful to reach every deep seated pain or to remove any bony growth or other enlargements, such as spavins, splints, curbs, ringbones, callous, swellings and any lameness and all enlargements of the joints or limbs, or for rheumatism in man or for any purpose for which a liniment is used for man or beast. It is now known to be the best liniment for man ever used, acting mild and yet certain in its effects.

Send address for illustrated circular which we think gives positive proof of its virtues. No remedy has ever met with such unqualified success to our knowledge, for beast as well as man.

Price $1 per bottle, or six bottles for $5. All Druggists have it or can get it for you, or it will be sent to any address on receipt of price by the proprietors, DR. B. J. KENDALL & CO., Enosburgh Falls, Vt.

M. W. DUNHAM,
Wayne, Du Page County, Illinois, U. S. A.
(35 miles west of Chicago.)

During the past 17 months 390 STALLIONS AND MARES have been imported from France to this establishment, being MORE than the combined importations of all other importers of Draft Horses from all parts of Europe for any one year.

One-fifth of the entire number of Imported French Horses in America can be seen on his farm. His Importations have included the Prize Winners of the Universal Exposition, Paris, 1878, and nearly all the Prize Horses of the Great Shows of France since his importations began. They also carried off the honors at the Centennial, 1876; and, at the Great Chicago Fair, 1881, Mr. Dunham's Herd of PERCHERONS, (in competition with the largest and finest collection of Clydesdales ever shown, consisting of the prize winners at the Great Shows of Scotland and England,) was awarded the Grand Sweepstakes Prize of $1,000 and Grand Gold Medal.

A LECTURE TO YOUNG MEN
ON THE LOSS OF
MANHOOD
WE have recently published a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical and nervous Debility, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage etc., resulting from excesses.
☞ Price, in a sealed envelope, only 6 cts., or two postage stamps.
The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicines or the use of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.
☞ This Lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

DIVANCE.

A word unspoken, a hand unpressed,
A look unseen or a thought unguessed,
And souls that were kindred may drift apart,
Never to meet or know the truth,
Never to know how heart beat with heart
In the dim past days of a wasted youth.
She shall not know how his pulse leapt
When over his temples her tresses swept;
As she leaned to give him the jasmine wreath
She felt his breath, and her face flushed red
With the passionate love that choked her breath,
And saddens her life now her youth is dead
A faded woman who waits for death,
And murmurs a name beneath her breath;
A cynical man who scoffs and jeers
At woman and love in the open day,
And at night time kisses, with bitter tears,
A faded fragment of jasmine spray.

A WONDERFUL WOMAN.

CHAPTER I. Continued.

'When I come at the usual hour,' she repeated and he, never came. It was the strangest thing—I wonder at it to this day. It was so unlike papa to hurry off abruptly in that way—never even wait to say good bye. And I used to think—but I was only sixteen and a little fool. One outlives all that when they grow up. Still, fools suffer, I suppose, as greatly as wiser people. Some of the old pains comes back now as I look at these things. How different he was—poor, impetuous boy—from the men I meet now. When I read of Sir Launcelot and Sir Galahad I think of him. And I am to marry Sir Arthur Tregenna when it pleases Sir Arthur Tregenna to do me the honour of taking me. I have kept my relics long enough—it is time I throw them out of the windows.'

She made a step forward, as if to follow the word by the deed; then stopped, irresolute.

'As Sir Arthur has not asked me yet, what can it matter ... so long, I will keep them untill he does.'

She replaced them, closed and locked the writing case, and rang for her maid. The French woman came, sleeping and blinking, and Lady Cecil sat like a statute under her hands, being disrobed and robed again for rest.

But she was in the breakfast parlour a good half hour before either her father and cousin. She was looking over a book of water-colour sketches when Lady Dangerfield entered, looking at one long, intently, wistfully—a sunrise on the sea. The baronet's wife came softly up behind the earl's daughter, and glanced over her shoulder.

'A pretty scene enough, Queenie, but nothing to make you wear that pensive face. Of what are you thinking so deeply, as you sit here and gaze?'

Lady Cecil lifted her dreamy eyes. 'Of Ireland. I have often seen the sun rise out of the sea like this, on the Ulster coast. And I was thinking of the days Ginevra, that can never come again.'

CHAPTER II.

MISS HERNCASTLE.

'Givenra,' Lord Ruysland said, in his blandest tone, and all his tones were bland, 'how soon do we go down to Sussex? I say we, of course for impovrished mendicants, like myself and Cecil, must throw ourselves on the bounty of our more fortunate relatives until our empty coffers are replenished. How soon do we go—next week?'

'Next Monday,' responded Lady Dangerfield, 'in three days. Sir Peter writes me, Scarswood has been rejuvenated, re hung, re-carpeted, re-furnished, and quite ready. We go on Monday, very many have gone. Parliament closes so delightfully early this year. I don't pretend to go into ecstacies all over the country, like Cecil here, for instance, but really, London is not habitable after the last week in June.'

'Ah! Next Monday—so soon? Then we shall not meet Tregenna in town, as I had supposed? Still—Ginevra, I write to Sir Arthur Tregenna to day—you remember Tregenna, of course. He is in Paris at present, and on his way to us, may I trespass on your hospitality, my dear, as to invite him to Scarswood?'

They were still seated, a family party of three, around the breakfast table. Lady Dangerfield glanced across at her cousin. Lady Cecil sat listlessly back in her chair, offering her little curly KingCharles a chicken wing, she held the tit-bit temptingly over Bijou's wrinkled nose, now laughing, as he leaped up angrily, while all his tiny silver bells rang, not once lifting her eyes.

'Certainly, Uncle Raoul, invite him by all means. Scarswood is big enough to hold even the great Cornish baronet. I remember Sir Arthur very well, indeed, I was mortally afraid of him in those frivolous, bygone days, and thought him a horrid prig; but of course that was all my lack of judgment. Present my compliments and remembrances, and say we will be delighted to see him at Sussex.'

'Thanks, my dear; I knew I might count upon you. Sir Peter now—'

Sir Peter will do precisely as I see fit, Sir Peter's wife answered decisively, let Sir Peter keep to his beetles and butterflies. Did you know his latest hobby was turning naturalist, and impaling horribly crawling things upon pins? Let him keep to the beetles and leave the amenities of civilized life to civilized beings. Queenie do let Bijou alone, his bells and his barking agonize my poor nerves. Have you any message to send to Sir Arthur.

'I think not. Take your chicken, Bijou and run away with Tompkins, for your morning airing in the square. Half-past twelve, Ginevra, do you drive by the ... or Chiswick or the morning party at Kew?

'The morning party at Kew. I promised Lady Chantilly not to fail her a week ago. But first, Cecil, the children's governess comes to-day, and I want you to see her and help me beside. I advertised, as you know and out of the troops of applicants, this one—what's her name, again?—Miss Herncastle—seems to suit me best. And her terms are so moderate and she plays so very nicely, and her manner is so quiet, and everything, that I as good as told her yesterday that I would take her. She comes at two for her final answer, and I should like you to tell me what you think of her.'

'And I shall go and write my letter—your compliments and kind remembrances, Ginevra, and a cordial invitation to Scarswood from Sir Peter and yourself. And you tell me Sir Peter has become a naturalist? Ah! poor little Sir Peter!'

And with a smile on his lips and a sneer in his eye, the Earl of Ruysland arose and wended his way to his study.

'Poor little Sir Petrer, indeed!

Within nine months of his accession to the throne of Scarswood, Sir Peter Dangerfield, Baronet, had led to the 'hymeneal altar,' as the Morning Post told you, Ginevra, only surviving daughter of the late honourable Thomas Clive, and relict of Cosmo Dalrymple, Esq. She was the niece of the Earl of Ruysland, she was petite, plump, pretty, poor, she was nine-and-twenty, she had twin daughters, and not a farthing to bless herself with. At the mature age of twenty four she had eloped with a clerk in the Treasury, three years younger than herself a name as old as her own, a purse as empty, and they were cast off at once and forever by their families on both sides. Their united fortunes kept them in Paris until the honeymoon ended, and then poverty stalked grimly in at the door, and love flew out of the window in disgust, and never came back. They starved and they grubbed in every ... watering place, they bickered, they reproached, they quarrelled and recriminated, and one dark and desperate night, just five years after his love match, Cosmo Dalrymple, Esq., stirred half an ounce or so of laudnum into his absinthe, and wound up his chapter of the story.

Mrs Dalrymple and the twins, two blackeyed dolls of four, came back to England in weeds and woe, and the paternal roof opened once more to recieve her. Very subdued, soft of voice gentle of manner, and monstrously pretty in her widow's cap and crapes, little Mrs. Dalrymple chanced one day at a water party in the neighbourhood to meet the Sussex baronet, Sir Peter Dangerfield. Is there a destiny in those things that shade our ends without vilition of our own?—or is it that we all must play the fool once in our lives? Sir Peter saw—and fell in love. Before Mrs. Dalrymple had been twelve months a widow, she was again a wife.

Five years of married life, and living by her wits, had sharpened those wits to an uncommon degree. She read the baronet like a book. He was a miser to the core, mean beyond all adinary meanness, half monkey, half tiger in his nature, and her plumpness and prettyness, her round, black eyes, her faltering voice, and timid manner dad their work. He fell in love, and before that first fever of that hot fancy had time to cool, had made her Lady Dangerfield, and himself miserable for life

She was nothing that he thought her, and everything that he thought her not. She was a vixen, a Kate who no earthly Petrochio could tame. She despised him, she laughed at him she was master and mistress both, she flirted, she squandered his money like water, what did she not do? And the twins, kept in the background in the halcyon days of courtship, were all at once brought forward, the black frock was thrown aside, gay tartans, muslin and silks bought, and a governess engaged. Scarswood was thrown open to the county, a house in May-fair leased, parties, dinners, concerts, operas—the whole round of fashionable liferun. And her poor relatives fixed upon him like barnacles on a boat. The earl of Ruysland made his houses, his horses, his servants, his cooks his banker his own, without a thought of gratitude, a word of thanks. His wife sneered at him, her high titled relatives ignored him, men blackbaled him at their clubs, and the milk of human kindness had turned to buttermilk in his breast. He became a misanthrope, and buried himself down at Scarswood, did humbly as his lady ordered him, and took, as you have heard her say, to impaling butterflies on pins. If our fellow-creatures torture us, it is some compensation to torture, in our turn, bugs and beetles, if nothing better offers.

Lady Cecil came sweeping down stairs presently—tall, and slim, and white as a lily. Her India muslin, with its soft lace trimmings, trailed in fleecy clouds behind her—all her lovely hazel hair hung half-curled in a rich bronze mass over the pearly shoulders. A Mechlin scarf hung about her more like drapery than a shawl, and a bonnet, a marvel of Parisian handicraft, half pointless, half lilies of the valley, crowned that exquisite, gold-hued head.

The drawing room was deserted—Lady Dangerfield was not yet down. Lady Cecil was two-and-twenty, Lady Dangerfield five-and-thirty, and for every ten minutes we spend before the glass at twenty, we spend an hour on the wrong side of thirty. She took a book and sank down among the amber satin cushions of a dormeuse near the open window, and began to read. So she had sat, a charming vision, for upwards of half an hour, when her cousin, in pale flowing silks, youthful and elegant, floated in. ...

'Have I kept you waiting, Queenie? But that tiresome Delphine has no more eye for colour or effect than—'

'Miss Herncastle, my lady,' Soames the footman, interrupted.

And my lady stopped short and whirled around.

'Ah yes—I had forgotten. Will you take a seat for a moment, Miss Herncastle? I was really in such a hurry yesterday, when I saw you, that I had no time to speak of anything but terms. We are overdue as it is, but—I think you told me you never were governess before?'

'I never was, my lady.'

Only five short words, but Lady Cecil laid down her book and looked up surprised into sudden interest. It was such a sweet voice—so deep, so clear, so musical in its timbre. She looked up and saw a tall, a very tall young woman, dressed in plain dark colours, sink into the seat lady Dangerfield had indicated by a wave of her pearl gloved hand.

'Then may I beg to know what you did do? You are not, excuse me, very young, seven and twenty now, I should think?'

'No, my lady, three-and-twenty.'

'Ah, three-and-twenty, and going out as governess for the first time. Pray what were you before?'

Lady Cecil shrank a little as she listened, Ginerva went to work for the prosecution in so deliberate, so cold-blooded a manner. She looked at the governess, and thought, more and more interested, what a singular face it was. Handsome it was not—never had been—but some indescribable fascination held Lady Cecil's gaze fast. The eyes were dark, cold, brilliant; the eyebrows, eyelashes, and hair of jetty blackness; the face like marble—literally like marble—as changeless, as colorless, locked in a passionless calm.

'A strange face—an interesting face,' Lady Cecil thought; 'the face, if I am a judge, of a woman who has suffered greatly, and learned to endure. A face that hides a history.'

'I was a music teacher,' the low, melodious, even tones of Miss Herncastle made answer; 'I gave lessons when I could get pupils. But pupils in London are difficult to get. I saw ... in the 'Times' for a nursery governess, and I applied for it.'

'And you are willing to accept the terms I offered yesterday?'

The terms were so small that Lady Dangerfield was absolutely ashamed to name them before her cousin. At heart, and where her own gratification was not concerned, she was as great a miser as Sir Peter himself.

'I will accept your terms, my lady. Salary is not so much an object with me as a home.'

'Indeed! You have none of your own, I presume?'

'I have none, my lady.'

She made the answer quite calmly, neither voice or face altering.

'You are an orphan?'

'I am an orphan.'

'Well,' Lady Dangerfield said, 'your recommendation are certainly unobjectionable, and I don't see why you would not suit. Just open the piano, Miss Herncastle, and play some little thing that I may judge of your touch and execution. If there be one thing I wish you particularly to attend to it is my children's music and accent. You speak French?'

'Yes, my lady.'

'And sing?'

There was an instant's hesitation—then the reply came:

'No, madame, I do not sing.'

'That is unfortunate. Play, however.'

She obeyed at once. She played from memory, and chose an air from Schubert's—a little thing, but sweet and pathetic, as it is the nature of Schubert's music to be. It was a favorite of Lady Cecil's as it chanced, but never had the pearl keys, under her fingers, spoke in music a story half so plaintive, half so pathetic, as this. The slanting June sunlight fell upon the face of the player—that fixed, dusk, emotional face, with its changeless pallor; and more and more interested, Lady Cecil half rose on her elbow to look.

'That will do,' Ginerva said graciously; 'that's a simple melody, but you play it quite prettily. Cecil, love, what do you think? Miss Herncastle will suit very well, will she not?'

'I think Miss Herncastle quite capable of teaching music to pupils double the age of Pearl and Pansy,' replied Lady Cecil, decidedly. 'Miss Herncastle, is it possible you do not sing? You have the face of a singer.'

Up to this moment Miss Herncastle had not been aware a third party was present. She turned to Lady Cecil and the large electric eyes, so dark under their black lashes, met the soft hazel ones full.

'I do not sing,'

'Then I have mistaken a singing face for the first time. Ginerva, I do not wish to hurry you, but if we go at all—'

'Good Heavens! yes!' cried Lady Dangerfield, glancing in sudden hurry at her watch. 'We shall be frightfully late, and I promised Lady Chantilly—Miss Herncastle I forgot to ask—do you object to the country?'

'On the contrary, I prefer it.'

'Very well, then; the sooner you come the better. We go to our place in Sussex next week—you will find your pupils there. Suppose you come to night—you will be of use to me in the intermediate days.'

'I will come to-night, my lady, if you wish it.'

'To-night, then. Soames, show Miss Herncastle out. Now then, Queenie.'

* * * * * * *

'And what's your opinion of the governess? What are you thinking of as you lie back in that pretty attitude, with your eyes half closed, Lady Cecil Clive? Are you really thinking, or is it only to show the length of your eyelashes?'

Lady Cecil looked up. They were rolling along as fast as two high-stepping roans could carry them, Kew-ward.

'I was really thinking, Ginerva—thinking of your governess.'

'You do my governess too much honor. What were your thoughts of her, pray?'

'There is something strange about her—something quite out of the governess line. It is an odd face—a striking face—a face full of character. It has haunted me ever since I saw it—so calm, so still, so fixed in one expression. That woman has a history.'

'Really, then, I shall countermand my consent. I don't want a nursery governess with a history. What an imagination you have, Cecil and what awful nonsense you talk! A striking face!—yes, if you like, in its plainness.'

'I don't think it is plain.'

'Perhaps you think it pretty?'

'No; pretty is a word I would never apply to Miss Herncastle. Herncastle!—a sounding appellation. Whom have I seen before that she resembles?'

'For pity's sake, Queenie, talk of something else. Suppose, when you get down to Scarswood, you turn biographer, and write out my new nursery governess' history from her own dictation. I daresay she's the daughter of some Cheapside grocer, with a complexion like her father's tallow candles, and whose piano-playing and French accent were acquired within the sound of Bow Bells. Queenie,' abruptly—'I wonder if Major Frankland will be at Kew to-day?'

Lady Cecil looked grave.

'I don't like him, Ginerva—I don't like the way he behaves with you—oh, yes, Ginerva, I will say it—nor the way you behave with him.'

'And why? How does Major Frankland and my lowly self behave?'

'You hardly need to ask that question, I think. You flirted with him when you were fifteen, by your own showing; you flirted with him in the first year of your widowhood, and you flirt most openly with him now that you are a wife. 'Ginerva,' with energy, 'a married flirt is in my opinion the most despicable character on earth.'

'An opinion which, coming from my Lady Cecil Clive, of all people, should have weight. Isn't there an adage about setting a thief to catch a thief? How true these old saw are? You don't mean to flirt, I suppose, when you are married?'

'Don't look so scornful, Ginerva—no I don't. If ever I marry—what are you laughing at? Well, when I do marry, then—I hope—I trust—I feel that I shall respect—and love my husband, and treasure his name and honor as sacredly as my soul.'

'Meaning, I suppose, Sir Arthur Tregenna?'

'Meaning Sir Arthur Tregenna, if you like. If I ever become the wife of Sir Arthur, I shall never let any living man talk to me, look at me, act to me, as that odious, bearded, sleepy eyed, ex-Canadian major does toward you. Don't be angry, Ginerva, dear; I mean this for your good.'

'No doubt. One's friends are always personal and disagreeable and prosy for one's good. ... time, I am quite old enough to take care of myself.'

'Ah, Ginerva, age does not always bring wisdom. And Sir Peter is jealous—poor little Sir Peter! It is unkind, it is a shame; you bury that poor little man alive down there, and you dance, and walk, and flirt with Frankland. I say again it is a real shame.'

Lady Dangerfield leaned back in the barouche and laughed—laughed absolutely until the tears started.

'You precious Queenie—you Diogenes in India muslin and Limerick lace! That poor little Sir Peter indeed, and Miss Herncastle, too! all low and abject things find favor in the sight of Lady Cecil Clive. Sir Peter! as if I cared what that odious little wizen-faced butterfly-hunting imbecile thought! Major Frankland is one of my oldest, one of my dearest friends, with whom I shall be friendly just as long as I please, in spite of all the husbands alive. And to think of a sermon from you—from you, the most notorious flirt in London—on flirting! And Solomon says there is nothing new under the sun!'

Lady Cecil made a restless movement, and under the white fringe of her parasol her fair face flushed.

'Ginerva, I am sick—sick of having myself called that. And I am not a flirt, in your sense of the word. I do not lead on men to gratify my own petty vanity, to swell the list of a vain, empty-headed, empty-hearted woman of the world's triumphs. I only like to have people like me—admire me, if you will; and when gentlemen are pleasant and dance well, and talk well, I can't be frigid and formal, and talk to them on stilts. It's they who are stupid—moths who will rush into the candle and singe their wings, do what you will. The warning is up, "Dangerous ground," but they won't be warned. They think the quicksand that has let so many through will hold them. They are not content with being one's friend—they must be one's lover. And then when one is sorry, and says 'no,' they rush off to Spitzbergen, or Spanish America, or Central Africa, and one is called heartless and a coquette. It's my misfortune, Ginerva, not my fault.'

Again Ginerva laughed.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

COTTAGE CHEESE.—Wherever a cow or cows are kept, the cream is regarded as the important part of the milk, while the skim milk goes to the pigs or the poultry. Of course it is thus utilized and ultimately comes around as food, but it may be better to make a more direct use of it. The skim milk contains a valuable portion of that most nutritious food; in taking the cream, only a part of the nutriment is removed. The skim-milk, is allowed to become slightly sour or "clabbered." The pan is then set upon a cool part of the stove to warm gently, or upon the top of a kettle of boiling water. It should get no warmer than the heat of new milk, when the whey will appear clear and separate from the curd. When separation takes place pour the whole into a bag of thin material, and hang to drain. When it ceases to drip, turn the curd from the bag and mix with salt and a little sweet cream.—

WHAT THE LADY ASKED THE BURGLAR.

A certain well-known lady, living up on the avenue recently found herself and family of little ones compelled to pass the night without the protection of a man in the house, her husband being in the North. Being a good shot, she was not alarmed, however, but put her revolver handy when she retired at night. About midnight she heard a noise as if some one was trying to get into the house. She went softly on to the gallery, revolver in hand, and sure enough, there was a man down at the window prying open the shutter with a long knife. After watching him for a moment undecided what to do, knowing that if she chose she could kill him, she leaned over the railing and called out, "Shall I shoot you, sir?" The astounding question caused the man to stop work. He turned and looked up at her, but made no pretense to run. She then fired at him, and he retreated to the fence, where he insolently regarded her in the moonlight. The brave little woman, not a whit discouraged, then determined to show him that she could scare him if she pleased, so, taking good aim, she put a tiny bullet through the rim of his hat. In less time than could be told the would-be burglar was over the fence and out of sight.—New Orleans Picayune, Feb. 2.

MAINE NEWS.—Hop Bitters, which are advertised in our columns, are a sure cure for ague, biliousness and kidney complaints. Those who use them say they cannot be too highly recommended. Those afflicted should give them a fair trial, and will become thereby enthusiastic in the praise of their curative qualities.—Portland Argus.

MAJOR SANGSTER AND THE MULE-WHACKER.

Major Sangster, says the 'Chicago Inter Ocean,' who is known in military slang as 'bantam,' was returning one day recently from Bismarck, to Fort Lincoln, which is across the river, and the ambulance in which he was riding wat delayed by a team and wagon driven by one of the class known as mule-whackers in this country. The driver of the waggon and mule whacker got into a wordy conversation, and Major Sangster got very indignant at what he believed to be impertinent language and unwarranted interference in his journey. He jumped from the ambulance a Tom Thumb in size, but a Goliath in fury, and exclaimed, 'Get that wagon out of the way!' the mule-whacker looked at him rather quizzically and asked, 'who the deuce are you?'

'I am Major Sangster of the army, sir, and I want you to get the wagon out of the way. The mule-whacker spit a mouthful of tobacco on the road and remarked: 'Do you know what I will do with Major Sangster of the army, sir, if you don't make less noise with your mouth!' 'What would you do!' inquired the Major, looking as large and as fierce as possible. 'I'll set a mouse trap and catch you, Major Sangster of the army, sir, and give you to my puppy to play with.'

THE ELECTRIC LIGHT

Superceding as it does all other modes of illumination, and rivalled only by the glorious sunshine, will not be hailed with greater joy by all other blood purifiers and tonics as the electric light is superior to the old fashioned tallow dip. Burdock Blood Bitters cures Scrofula, and all foul humors and impurities of the blood.

HOW TO REPORT A WEDDING.

"I say?" said the reporter, "I don't know whether that is right."

"Don't know whether what is right?" demanded the city editor.

"This wedding. I went there tonight, and they gave me a heap of rot about their frocks; but I don't know whether it comes out straight or not. Now here is Mrs.——I've got her in a pannier silk, trimmed a la gross grain, with black point lace underskirt and box-plaited hair. Does that sound natural?"

"Who sent you to a wedding?" asked the city editor, contemptuously. "Don't you know that gross grain is a color? That was a gross grain box-plaited dress, trimmed a la black point lace, and her hair was combed en pannier. You ought to know better than to get things mixed up that way. Who else did you get? How was the bride dressed?"

"I've got her all right," replied the West End reporter. "She wore a white bouffant, with a Princess of Thule veil; the underskirt cut decollette around the bottom, and trimmed with a basque at the sides."

"That's better," said the city editor, encouragingly. "That sounds something like. How was her hair?"

"Her hair was shirred at the sides and corsaged on top."

"I don't believe that's right," observed the city editor. "Read that again."

"It was corsaged at the sides and shirred on top," said the West End reporter, referring to his notes.

"Of course," smiled the city editor. "It makes all the difference in the world. You never saw a woman with her hair corsaged on top in your life

A RELIABLE FACT.

It is an established fact that Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam is the best cure for coughs, colds sore throat, asthma, croup, bronchitis, and all troubles arising from neglected colds. Price 25 cents.

Friday, March 10th, 1882

No small amount of excitement was created throughout the Dominion, upon the reception of a cablegram announcing that another attempt had been made on the life of our beloved Queen, happily, however, as in the other four attempts, without doing her any injury. Rumors of all sorts are rife, and the cause of the attempt was attributed to the Fenians, Nihilists, Communists, &c., &c. But further investigation appears to undoubtedly establish the fact that the would-be assassin is insane, and is not connected with any of the above named societies, but simply acted from an insane impulse over which he had no control.

Our Flesherton contem appears to be somewhat riled at a movement that is now on foot to improve a certain road, so as to enable the inhabitants of the Queen's valley to bring their custom to Markdale, and insinuates that the scheme originated here with a view of injuring Flesherton. We can assure the Advance man that he is completely at sea. Not a man in Markdale has moved in the matter. It first took shape in the valley, and as will be seen by referring to a communication in another column, for the reason, that the people of the aforesaid locality are under the impression that they can dispose of their produce to better advantage, and get cheaper and better goods, in our village than elsewhere, and as a public journalist we thought it our duty to give our support to any movement that has a tendency to further the interests of the place in which we live.

Just at this particular time it may be well to note the fact that the law provides that "if any clerk or assessor makes any unjust or fraudulent assessment, or copy of any assessor's roll, or wilfully and fraudulently inserts therein the name of any person who should not be entered, or fraudulently omits the name of any person who should be entered, or wilfully omits any duty required of him, he shall on conviction thereof before a court of competent jurisdiction, be liable to a fine not exceeding $200, and to imprisonment until the fine is paid, for a period not exceeding six months, or to both such fine and imprisonment at the discretion of the court." And it is further provided, that a fine not exceeding $100 shall be imposed on those assessors and clerks who refuse or neglect to perform any duty required of them.

MANITOBA.

All classes appear to be affected, to a greater or lesser extent, with the Manitoba craze; but the object of the great majority of those who have gone and are about to go this Spring, we believe to be speculation. If this is really the case there will soon be an end of the excitement and a re-action will soon take place.

What, we would like to ask, is to keep up the extensive towns that are being surveyed, the lots in which are being sold and re-sold at such exorbitant prices, if the country is not settled with bona fide farmers whose intention is to gain their living by farming. We fear that this undue excitement is anything but beneficial to the country, and that the majority of those who imagine they are making a fortune will, in a few months, find themselves utterly ruined. It is our opinion that any family who have a comfortable home in Ontario, should consider well the social, educational, religious and other privileges they now enjoy, before pulling up stakes and removing to a new country.

REVOLUTIONIZING "TIME,"

CONCLUSION OF MR. SANDFORD FLEMING'S ARGUMENT.

2. Cosmopolitan time to be based on the diurnal revolutions of the earth as determined by the (mean) sun's passage over one particular meridian to be selected as a time-zero.

3. This time-zero to coincide with the prime meridian, to be common to all nations for computing longtitude.

4. The time-zero and prime meridian for the world to be established, with the concurrence of civilized nations generally.

5. Twenty-four secondary or standard hour meridians to be established, fifteen degrees or one hour distant from each other, the first being fifteen degrees from the prime meridian.

6. The standard hour meridians to regulate time at all places on the earth's surface.

7. The twenty-four standard meridians to be denoted by symbols, and, preferably, by the letters of the English alphabet which, by omitting J and V, are twenty-four in number. The letters are to be taken in their order from east to west. The zero-meridian to be the letter Z.

8. The hour of the day at any place on the earth's surface to be regulated by some one of the standard meridians, generally by the standard nearest such place in longtitude.

9. It is proposed to distinguish that interval of time between two consecutive passages of the (mean) sun over the prime meridian by the term "Cosmopolitan Day."

10. The Cosmopolitan Day is designed to promote exactness in chro[illegible] employ-ed in connection with synchronous observations in all parts of the world, and for scientific purposes generally.

11. Local days to commence twelve hours before and end twelve hours after the (mean) sun's passage over each of the situated meridians. The local days to be distinguished by the letters of the twenty-four meridians which determine them.

12. Local days will be reduced to twenty-four in number within the period of each diurnal revolution of the earth. They are to be regarded in the same light in all ordinary affairs as local days under the present system.

13. The hour of the Cosmopolitan day to be known by the letters of the alphabet in their order from A to Z (omitting J and V,) corresponding with the twenty-four hour meridians When the (mean) sun passes meridians G and N, it will be by time or N time of the "Cosmopolitan Day"

FLESHERTON.

From our Correspondent.

The social under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Association of the Presbyterian Church, Flesherton, held on the 24th ult., was an immense success.

The meeting was called to order at an early hour by Rev. Mr. Wilson, who stated that he held a good paper in his hand, and that the audience might expect a treat such as had not been in store for any other gathering for a long time; that he also felt sure of the success of any undertaking that the ladies took an active part in. He would omit his (the Chairman's) speech until later in the evening, and would call on the Quintette Band to open the proceedings. They were followed by Miss A. Philp with a song; reading, by Mr. J. Anderson; Millie Vandusen, song; reading, Mr. McMaster, entitled George Washington, which illustrated the pains that have to be taken to make children understand, much more to comprehend what is told them. A recess was then taken for tea, after which Mr. Rutledge came in for a recitation, which "brought down the house;" music by the Quintette club; reading, Mr. G. L. Dodds, entitled David and Goliath; song, Miss Christoe; reading, Mr. A. R. Fawcett, which was very amusing; recitation, Mr. McDougal, Markdale; song, Miss A. Anderson; recitation, Mr. A. Thompson; song, Millie Vandusen; music, string band; recitation, Mr. J. Richards; reading Mr. Rutledge; recitation, Mr. McDougal. By special request, Mr. Doll was called to his feet, but stated that owing to the lateness of the hour he would not give the speech he had in store for them; but at some other time he would be happy to deliver it. Several of the above pieces were enchored, and if a vote had been taken I have no doubt but that this entertainment would have been unanimously declared to be the one of the season. It is certain the efforts of the ladies were crowned with success. Proceeds, $27.

BREVITIES.—Mr. Wm. Cullen and Son leave for the North West this week; Mr. Herron and Mr. Gamey left on the 28th ult.; James Burnet leave in a few days; Messrs. Thomas McGirr, R. Hooper, G. L. Dodds and family leave on the first of April. Mr. Dodds will sell by private sale all his household furniture, which is almost new and of a good quality. Any one requiring such should call and see what he has to sell. Suitable time to purchasers will be given. He will sell cheap as he does not intend taking any of the furniture with him.

R. J. Sproule has a great clearing sale for thirty days. People say he is just slaughtering goods.

EUGENIA.

From our own Correspondence.

The Manitoba fever has reached this Neighbourhood in its most virulant form neither the old nor young seem to be proof against it. Quite a number are prepared to go off about the first of March. Kimberley is also infected.

Scarlet fever is still lingering around here. In our perambulations in the vicinity of Vandeleur we notice extensive preparations for building in the spring.

The Eclipse Saw Mill yard is stocked with an immense quantity of logs of superior quality of Pine, Butternut, White Ash, Cherry, &c. The boom has surely struck Vandeleur.

It is generally reported that Vennor has come out at the right end of the horn in his weather prognostications for the last week or two. Is that so? Hope Mr. Editor you are able to get around again, you know it don't do for Editors to get sick—we have tried it and there is no fun in it.

Correspondence.

NOTICE.—We wish it disinctly understand that we do not hold ourselves reponsible for the opinions expressed by our correspondence

To the Editor

SIR,—In looking over the columns of your valuable paper of March 3rd, we were really amused when we read an article with the signature "An Old Resident of the Valley." At first we thought we would pay no attention to it, but on second thought we came to the conclusion that it would not be right to let it pass unheeded, as your readers were left with the impression that this new and only route would accommodate the whole Valley. In the first place he speaks of the large tract of country that should do their trading at Markdale. We agree with him there. He says the above route would give us the choice of two markets—Flesherton and Markdale. Now, Mr. Editor, for the benefit of your numerous readers and the worthy pioneer living in the Valley in Artemesia, I would say that we have a good road direct from Kimberley to Flesherton; a much better road than the other would be if thousands were expended on it. But that is not what we on the 6th and 7th sideroad and vicinity want. We want to go up 6 and 7 sideroad more direct to Markdale for several reasons, viz:—It is a nearer and better market for our produce, and we can get what we want and cheaper than in any of our neighbouring towns. I was about to say something of the roundabout way to get to this new route from 6 and 7 sideroad and vicinity, but time and space will hardly permit. But a word or so as to this new surveyed line, as that is all that it is, and in the opinion of the residents of Kimberley and vicinity of the line (with a few exceptions,) all it ever will be, as we are strongly opposed to building roads for the benefit of people living in an adjoining township when we are not at all benefitted by it. And furthermore, from what we hear of public opinion of the residents of the township of Euphrasia is that every member of the Council Board, from the highest to the lowest, that goes for the establishing and expending Township money on that forced road, will sit there for this year only. Our worthy pioneer says the road would accommodate all over the Valley on the 14th concession of Artemesia, who has that line opened across the Valley via Connel's deviation to Vandeleur P. O., which is more direct to Markdale than via 3rd and 4th sideroad in the depths of the Valley. He suggests the propriety of closing the townline across the Valley. Why, Mr. Editor, an absurd impossibility. I would say that our subscription has now reached over $70 at home and some more to see yet.

A RATEPAYER OF EUPHRASIA.

FOUND.—The body of Mr. Wm. Morgan, missing since Thursday evening, Feb. 16th, was found in the river this morning near the stern of the City of Owen Sound. The money he was supposed to have in his pocket was found on him, amounting to $7.95. We regret if the information given us last week that he had been drinking on the night of his disappearance should have caused any to form a wrong estimate of the character of Mr. Morgan, as we understand that he has been uniformly steady and respected by all during the many years of his residence in town.—O. S. Times.

HERE, IN OUR OWN TERRITORY

It can almost be asserted that St. Jacobs Oil works wonders. Shortly before the New Year, when I visited my family in Mitchell, I found my son Edward, a lad little more than ten years old, very sick. He suffered with rheumatism, and so terribly, that he was perfectly stiff in his limbs, could not possibly walk and had to be carried from place to place. At once I sent for some St. Jacobs Oil, used it according to directions, and in a few days could see evidence of considerable improvement. On the tenth of this month I again visited my family and was astonished to find him well and hearty. He once more has fresh color in his face and can go to school again. Whenever the old trouble threatens to return relief is immediately secured by the use of the celebrated St. Jacobs Oil. From sheer Joy over this result I cannot withhold recommending St. Jacobs Oil to suffering humanity as a true benefactor. DREADFUL OCCURRENCE AT SINGHAMPTON.—On Monday the 27th February, at about 9 o'clock a.m., a Mrs. Riddell of this village, was observed rushing out of her house in flames. Some neighbours hastened to the spot, and after extinguishing the fire conveyed her into the house, and laid her on a bed in a perfectly nude state, and Dr. Snell was soon on hand, who pronounced her recovery almost an impossibility. The poor woman is dreadfully burnt about the breast and bowels so much so that her bowels absolutely protrude, and she is quite unable to give any account as to how the accident occurred. The only account that can be obtained is from the children, of whom there are six, Mr. Riddell not being present. The children state that they were melting spruce gum on the stove, and that somehow it caught fire, that she seized the vessel to throw it out, but in proceeding to the door her clothing caught fire, that she thus fell and became one mass of flames. This is the only account that can be gathered of the sad affair. Her recovery is pronounced hopeless, and her appearance is frightful.

Feb. 28th 2 o'clock p. m.—A telegram has just come to Maxwell, Mrs. Riddell worse, not expected to live over 4 o'clock.

4 o'clock.—Mrs. Riddell still alive—no hopes. Dr. Snell and Barr in attendance.

The weather here is quite spring like. The snow is all gone.

Scarlet fever and diphtheria are very prevalent, and several deaths have resulted therefrom in this neighbourhood.—Cor. O. S. Times.

Catharthic Pills

Combine the choicest cathartic principles in medicine, in proportions accurately adjusted to secure activity, certainty, and uniformity of effect. They are the result of years of careful study and practical experiment, and are the most effectual remedy yet discovered for diseases caused by derangement of the stomach, liver, and bowels, which require prompt and effectual treatment. AYER'S PILLS are specially applicable to this class of diseases. They act directly on the digestive and assimilative processes, and restore regular healthy action. Their extensive use by physicians in their practice, and by all civilized nations, is one of the many proofs of their value as a safe, sure, and perfectly reliable purgative medicine. Being compounded of the concentrated virtues of purely vegetable substances, they are positively free from calomel or any injurious properties, and can be administered to children with perfect safety.

AYER'S PILLS are an effectual cure for Constipation or Costiveness, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Loss of Appetite, Foul Stomach and Breath, Dizziness, Headache, Loss of Memory, Numbness, Biliousness, Jaundice, Rheumatism, Eruptions and Skin Diseases, Dropsy, Tumors, Worms, Neuralgia, Colic, Gripes, Diarrhœa, Dysentery, Gout, Piles, Disorders of the Liver, and all other diseases resulting from a disordered state of the digestive apparatus.

As a Dinner Pill they have no equal.

While gentle in their action, these PILLS are the most thorough and searching cathartic that can be employed, and never give pain unless the bowels are inflamed, and then their influence is healing. They stimulate the appetite and digestive organs; they operate to purify and enrich the blood, and impart renewed health and vigor to the whole system.

REST AND COMFORT TO THE SUFFERING

Brown's Household Panacea has no equal for relieving pain, both internal and external. It cures pain in the Side, Back or Bowels, Sore Throat, Rheumatism, Toothache, Lumbago and any kind of a Pain or Ache. "It will most surely quicken the Blood and heal, as its acting power is wonderful." "Brown's Household Panacea," being acknowledged as the great Pain Reliever, and of double the strength of any other Elixer or Liniment in the world, should be in every family handy for use when wanted "as it really is the best remedy in the world for Cramps in the Stomach, and Pains and Aches of all kinds," and is for sale by all Druggists at 25 cents a bottle. 20-ly

Mothers! Mothers!! Mothers! Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with the excruciating pain of cutting teeth? If so, go at once and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately—depend upon it; there is no mistake about it. There is not a mother upon earth who has ever used it, who will not tell you at once that it will regulate the bowels, and give rest to the mother, and relief and health to the child, operating like magic. It is perfectly safe to use in all cases, and pleasant to the state, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States. Sold everywhere at 25 cents a bottle. 90 ly

NEARLY A FIRE.—On Wednesday morning the cooper shop owned by Mr. T. Mullarky, had a narrow escape from destruction by fire. The fire originated from the stove pipe, and when first discovered, by Mr. Wm. Carter, about two feet square around the pipe of the inner side of the roof was in flames. Being afraid to leave the shop to seek assistance, thinking the fire would make too much headway, he succeeded, unaided, in subduing the flames before much damage was done.

A PUBLIC MEETING should be called of the citizens of every city, town and village in the Dominion, to consider what should be done to prevent the hair from turning Gray—and falling out. If this important question received their earnest consideration they would unanimously decide that science had at last discovered something that would answer this purpose—and furthermore would recommend Cingalese Hair Renewer as being this something for restoring the hair to its natural color, and prevent its falling out. 50 cents per bottle. DUNDALK.

(From the Herald.)

Mr. Parsons announces in this issue of the HERALD that he has the largest and best selection of field and garden seeds ever brought into Dundalk.

Mr. Wm. Nelson, who is about removing to the North-West is selling off at cost. Big bargains may be had by calling on him.

Mr. J. McQuarrie, Main St., Dundalk, has flour for $5.75 per barrel, and everything usually kept in a first-class grocery at prices that defy competition. Give him a call.

A hard change in the weather since our last issue.

Owing to the bad state of the roads, our fair was poorly attended, not much stock offered for sale, there were quite a number of buyers.

Mr. Jas. Hanna has sold his blacksmith shop, and house, to Jas. Mulholland, of Melancthon.

There is a great amount of sickness at present in the western part of the township.

The HERALD is becoming more popular every week. It is the intention of the publishers to make it an indispensible article in every family, we would be pleased to have our readers send us items of news from their neighbourhood.

Mr. D. McDonald, of Osprey, sold his entire horse, well known by the name of Young Scotland's Glory, to an American for $350.

We had a visit from our friend H. Graham, of the city of Toronto, he looks hale and hearty and seems pleased with city life.

The best and most satisfactory move our Council could make, would be, to make one leading road out through the centre of the township, from Dundalk, to Hopeville, then all parties throughout the township would be mutually benefited, we cannot see why this very important matter should be neglected so long, we trust that our Council will consider the matter and that they may devise scheme whereby the township can afford to have at least one good road.

John McDowell Esq., is getting on well as favorable as could be expected.

Mr. Wm. Nelson is expected home from Manitoba this week, to wind up his business in Dundalk, and return to Manitoba at an early date.

Mechanical Orguinette

An Automatic Reed Organ.

"The Orguinette may now be called a celebrated instrument. In tone it is akin to the Cabinet Organ, but the organ must be manipulated by an artist in order to produce music; the ORGUINETTE is on the other hand entirely mechanical in its action, and at a trifling expense it can be made to furnish an unlimited supply of all kinds of music. —Toronto Globe."

"The Orguinette is indeed a musical wonder. It is a minature reed organ, with as strong and melodious a tone as the Cabinet Size. It surpasses the Cabinet Organ for the reason that the ignoramus in music can play it as well as the most accomplished professor. THE ORGUINETTE is strong and accurate in its mechanism, and consequently not liable to get out of order."—Montreal Gazette.

"The Orguinette is the most perfect automatic musical instrument yet invented its repertorie is unlimited, the tone is remarkably good."—Montreal Star.

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE SEASON.

March is the first spring month, and by this time all the plants for the season's work should be well matured. The farmer who plans little, often does but a small amount of the work that pays the best. He should be fully aware of the importance of being ready for work when the time comes. In some parts of the country there is a homely phrase, "Getting a good ready." It is not scholarly, but very expressive. It really means making thorough preparation, and in doing this there will be men to hire, seeds to provide, implements to buy, and a general overhauling and putting in readiness of all the machinery of the farm. The matter of hired help is an important one, and requires much thought. There is a great difference in hired men; they range all the way from the thoughtful, conscientious man who is as much interested in the success of the farm as if it was his own, to the shiftless, indifferent, and and some times bad man, who cares for nothing but his pay, and is not fit to have a place on any farm, especially if there are children in the farmer's household. This is a more important matter than many suppose. Aside from the danger to the morals of young people from improper language and acts, a man who is not kind to them has no business on a place where there are children. One of the best workmen we ever knew utterly ignored the children, taking no more notice of them than if they were so many stones. We are not aware that he was ever unkind to them, but the little things soon became afraid to go near him, and would run away whenever he approached. We would not have such a man on the farm. Some men are dear at any price, while others are worth much more than the wages that they are paid. Between these two extremes is the great mass of farm laborers, and it requires more than a passing glance to engage the best men. The farmer who will be particular enough to have only good men about him, will also know that they must be treated as men, and from them he will receive, in return, the thoughtful service of men, instead of the bare labor of their hands.

The surface water should be let off from the grain and other fields before the ground is entirely thawed. All drains required frequent inspection, especially at this time, when the outlets may be clogged by ice and snow. Clover may be sown this month. A very even cast is obtained by sowing upon a light fall of snow on a still day. —American Agricultural for March.

SHREWDNESS AND ABILITY.—Hop Bitters so freely advertised in all the papers, secular and religious, are having a large sale, and are supplanting all other medicines. There is no denying the virtues of the Hop plant, and the proprietors of these Bitters have shown great shrewdness and ability in compounding a Bitters, whose virtues are so palpable to every one's observation.—Examiner and Chronicle.

HAGYARD'S YELLOW OIL.

Will be found invaluable for all purposes of a family medicine. Immediate relief will follow its use. It relieves pain, cures chilblains, frost bites, scalds, burns, corns, rheumatism, neuralgia, &c. For internal use it is none the less wonderful. One or two doses frequently cure sore throat. It will cure croup in a few minutes. A few bottles has oft n cured asthma. Colic has been cured by a teaspoonful dose. It cures with the utmost rapidity, it is really a wonderful medicine.

HAGYARD'S YELLOW OIL.

Is at the head of the list for all purposes of a family medicine. It is used with unprecedented success, both internally and externally. It cures sore throat, burns, scalds, frost bites; relieves, and often cures asthma.

WHAT TO STUDY.

Pope, the poetical philosopher said, "The proper study of mankind is man," and yet, how little is the real science of man studied. If people understood and heeded the laws of health, and if when out of sorts would resort to a natural remedy like Burdock Blood Bitters for the many ills that flesh is heir to might be effectually remedied. It invigorates and regulates all the secretions to a heal-

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

The most successful Remedy ever discovered, as it is certain in its effects and does not blister. READ PROOF BELOW.

FROM THE ONEONTA PRESS, N.Y.

Oneonta, New York, Jan. 6th, 1881.

Early last summer Messrs J. B. Kendall & Co., of Enosburgh Falls, Vt., made a contract with the publishers of the Press for a half column advertisement for one year setting forth the merits of Kendall's Spavin Cure. At the same time we secured from the firm a quantity of books, entitled Dr. Kendall's Treatise on the Horse and his Diseases, which we are giving to advance paying subscribers of the Press as a premium.

About the time the advertisement first appeared in this paper Mr. P. G. Schermerhorn, who resides near Colliers, had a spavined horse. He read the advertisement and concluded to test the efficacy of the remedy, although his friends laughed at his credulity. He bought a bottle of Kendall's Spavin Cure and commenced using it on the horse in accordance with the directions, and he informed us this week that it effected such a complete cure that an expert horseman, who examined the animal recently could find no trace of the spavin or the place where it had been located. Mr. Schermerhorn has since secured a copy of Kendall's Treatise of the Horse and his Diseases, which he prizes very highly and would be loth to part with at any price, provided he could not obtain another copy. So much for advertising reliable articles.

Kendall's Spavin Cure.

New Hamburg, Ont., Dec. 28th, 1881.

Mr. F. H. McCallum, Dear Sir:—The bottle of Dr. Kendall's Spavin Cure bought of you last summer gave me the utmost satisfaction and performed a wonderful cure upon a mare nineteen years old belonging to me which was badly spavined for ten years. She was so lame that I could hardly get her to move. The lameness is entirely gone after using half a bottle of the cure, and she is like a young horse again.

Yours truly,
J. F. ROTH.

FROM A
PROMINENT PHYSICIAN.

Washingtonville, Ohio, June 17th, 1880

Dr. J. B. Kendall & Co., Gents:—Reading your advertisement in Turf, Field and Farm of Kendall's Spavin Cure, and having a valuable and speedy horse which had been lame from spavin for eighteen months, I sent to you for a bottle by express, which in six weeks removed all lameness and enlargement and a large splint from another horse and both horses are to day as sound as colts. The one bottle was worth to me one hundred dollars.

Respectfully yours,
H. A. BERTOLETT, M. D.

Kendall's Spavin Cure.
ON HUMAN FLESH.

Thousands of trials on human flesh has proved beyond a doubt that "KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE" has sufficient strength to penetrate and virtue to cure the worst cases of rheumatism, corns, bunions, frost-bites, or any bruise, cut or lameness which are not affected in the least by ordinary liniments. It does not blister but on the contrary removes all soreness.

St. Johns, P.Q., Oct. 27th, 1881.

Dr. B. Kendall & Co., Gents:—I have used your Spavin Cure with great success on spavins, curbs and splints. I know it to be a good remedy for ringbones, bone spavins, cuts, galls and all kinds of lameness and many other difficulties about the horse. One of my men sprained his ankle badly. I applied Kendall's Spavin Cure and I never saw anything work like it, he was well in a few days. I know it to be good for man as well as beast. I procured one of your Treatise on the Horse, by mail for 25c., and I think it was the means of saving me $100 on one horse that I treated according to the directions given in your book [illegible] stifle.

Yours truly,
WM. J. PEARSON.

Durham, P.Q., March 16th, 1879.

Dr. B. J. Kendall & Co., Gents:—About a year ago I fell on the ice onto some ice and was badly hurt in the hip joint, which caused me much suffering. I tried various remedies but none gave relief, until I tried Kendall's Spavin Cure. I applied it full strength twice a day for [illegible] in October and it effected a perfect cure. I have since then been well and free from lameness. It is very valuable for man as well as beast.

Yours truly,
CHESTER K. GREEN.

Kendall's Spavin Cure.

[illegible] is a [illegible] and [illegible] powerful penetrating [illegible] liniment [illegible] bones, calluses, swellings and any lameness and all enlargements of the joints or limbs or for rheumatism in man or for any purpose for which a liniment is used for man or beast. It is now known to be the best liniment for man ever used, acting mild and yet certain in its effects.

Send address for illustrated circular which we think gives positive proof of its virtues. No remedy has ever met with such unqualified success to our knowledge, for beast as well as man.

Price $1 per bottle or six bottles for $5. All druggists have it or can get it for you, or it will be sent to any address on receipt of price by the proprietors, DR. B. J. KENDALL & CO., Enosburgh Falls, Vt.

The Purest and Best Medicine ever Made.

A combination of Hops, Buchu, Mandrake and Dandelion, with all the best and most curative properties of all other Bitters, makes the greatest Blood Purifier, Liver Regulator, and Life and Health Restoring Agent on earth.

No disease can possibly long exist where Hop Bitters are used, so varied and perfect are their operations.

They give new life and vigor to the aged and infirm.

To all whose employments cause irregularity of the bowels or urinary organs, or who require an Appetizer, Tonic and mild Stimulant, Hop Bitters are invaluable, without intoxicating.

No matter what your feelings or symptoms are what the disease or ailment is use Hop Bitters. Don't wait until you are sick but if you only feel bad or miserable, use them at once. It may save your life. It has saved hundreds.

$500 will be paid for a case they will not cure or help. Do not suffer or let your friends suffer, but use and urge them to use Hop B[itters].

Remember, Hop Bitters is no vile, drugged drunken nostrum, but the Purest and Best Medicine ever made; the "INVALIDS FRIEND and HOPE" and no person or family should be without them.

D.I.C. is an absolute and irresistible cure for Drunkeness, use of opium, tobacco and narcotics. All sold by druggists. Send for Circular. Hop Bitters Mfg. Co., Rochester, N.Y and Toronto, Ont.

A LECTURE TO YOUNG MEN
ON THE LOSS OF
MANHOOD

WE have recently published a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical and nervous Debility, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage etc., resulting from excesses.

Price, in a sealed envelope, only 6 cts., or two postage stamps.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicines or the use of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

This Lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

Address
The Culverwell Medical Co.,
41 Ann St., New York.
Post Office Box 450.

$66 a week in your own town $5 outfit free. No risk. Everything new. Capital not required. We will furnish you everything. Many are making fortunes. A WONDERFUL WOMAN.

CHAPTER I.—Continued.

'My dear, what eloquence! Why weren't you lord, instead of Lady Cecil Clive?—you might take your seat in the House, and amaze that noble and prosy body by your brilliant oratory. Queenie, answer me this—truly now—were you ever in love in your life?'

Under the white fringe of that silken screen, her parasol, once more that delicate carnation flushed all the fair 'flower face' of La Reine Blanche. But she laughed.

'That is what lawyers call a leading question, isn't it Genevra? Who falls in love in these latter days? We talk of settlements, instead of turning periods to our lover's eyes; we go to St. George's, Hanover Square, if an eligible parti asks us to accompany him there; but as for getting up a grande passion—not to be thought of—bad style and obsolete. Somebody says in Coningsby, "Passions were not made for the drawing-room," and I agree with that somebody. I don't mean to be cynical, Ginevra, I only state plain facts, and pity 'tis true.'

Lady Chantilly's morning party was doubly pleasant for being about the last of the season, and Major Frankland was there. He was a tall military swell, with heavy blonde moustache, sleepy cat-like eyes, a drawl, and an eye-glass. It seemed the most natural thing imaginable that Lady Dangerfield should receive her Neapolitan ice from his hand, and that he should lean over her chair and whisper in her pretty pink ear while she ate it.

'We always return to our first loves, don't we, Lady Cecil?' laughed the Honourable Charles Delamer, of the F. O., eating his ice; and taking his seat by the side of Lord Ruysland's daughter. 'as faithful as the needle to the north star is old Frankland to the idol of his youth. Apropos of first loves, Lady Cecil,' looking up artlessly, 'whom do you suppose I met at Her Majesty's last night?'

The Honourable Charles, one of the 'fastest,' most reckless young fellows about town, had two blue eyes as soft and innocent as the eyes of a month-old babe, though how Mr. Delamer preserved even the outpard semblance of innocence at eight-and-twenty it would be difficult to say.

Lady Cecil laughed. She liked Charlie for this good reason, that he had never fallen in love with her.

'Not being a clairvoyant I cannot say. You must have met a great many people I should think. I know you never came near our box.'

'No,' Mr. Delamer said; 'I did not visit your box. He wouldn't come.'

'Who wouldn't come? Name this contumacious subject.

'O'Donnell.'

'Who?' suddenly and sharply she asked the question. 'Who?'

'O'Donnell—Captain Redmond O'Donnell, of the Third Chasseurs d'Afrique—Le Beau Chasseur, as they call him—and the best fellow the sun shines on.'

She was always pale as a lily—La Reine Blanche—was she really paler than usual now? Charlie Delamer wondered. Was it only the shadow of the white parsol, or—

There was a pause—only for a moment, but how long it seemed. Coote and Tinney's band discoursed sweet music, fountains flashed, birds sang, flowers bloomed, June sunshine steeped all in gold, and under the leafy branches Lady Dangerfield was strolling on the arm of Major Frankland.

Mr. Delamer, just a thought startled, spoke again.

'You know O'Donnell, don't you? In Ireland, was it? I think he said so last night.'

'Yes—I know—I mean I knew Captain O'Donnell slightly once. It is over six years ago though—I should have thought he would have forgotten the circumstances by this time.'

'Men who have been so fortunate as to know La Reine Blanche don't forget her so easily. Since you honour him by your remembrance, it is hardly strange if he recollects you.'

'If I remember him, Mr. Delamer Redmond O'Donnell saved my life!'

'Saved your life! By Jove! the lucky fellow. But these dashing, long-sword, saddle-bridle Irishmen are always lucky. And the fellow said his acquaintance was but trifling.

Lady Cecil laughed—not quite so musically as usual.

'Trifling! Perhaps Captain O'Donnell rated his services at the valuation of the thing saved. And he is in England. How curious. I fancied him—soldier of fortune—free lance that he is! for life out there in Algiers.'

'He goes back shortly. He is a born fighter, and comes of a soldierly race. The O'Donnells have been soldiers of fortune for the last three hundred years, and asked no fairer fate. He leaves England soon, places his sister with some friends in France, and goes back.'

'His sister—the Rose, of whom he used to speak—of whom he was so fond?'

'Yes; I heard him call her Rose.'

'You heard him! She is here, then! And what is she like? Redmond O'Donnell's sister'—with a little laugh—'ought to be pretty.'

'Well, she is not—at least not now. She appears to be under a cloud—sickness, trouble, something—didn't talk much—looks sad and sombre, and is a brunette, with blue eyes. She is just from New Orleans—her brother went for her. I called there immediately before I came here, and O'Donnell dines with me this evening. What a prince of good fellows he was out yonder in Algiers, and the devil's own to fight. He won his way straight up from the ranks with his sword. And he saved your life! How was it, Lady Cecil?'

'Much too long a story for a morning party, with the thermometer at 90 degrees. There is Madame de Villafleur beckoning—is she not? She is. Permit me, Lady Cecil.' And taking Mr. Delamer's proffered arm, Lady Cecil sauntered over to Madame la Comtesse de Villafleur.

The rose light of the summer sunset was just merging into starry dusk, as the baronet's wife and earl's daughter drove back to Lowndes Square. Lady Dangerfield was in excellent spirits—evidently Major Frankland had been entertaining—and talked incessantly the way home; but Lady Cecil lay back among the barouche cushions, paler, graver, more silent than was her wont. She had been very much admired, as usual; she had held her court of adorers, also, as usual; but now that it was over, she looked wan, spiritless, and bored.

'And he is in England—in London!' she was thinking. 'He was at the opera last night, and saw me! And it was not worth while renewing so slight an acquaintance! To think—to think'—she set her pearly teeth hard—'to think that after all those years I should not yet have outlived that sentimental folly of so long ago?'

'How stupid you are, Queenie!' her cousin said, pettishly, as they neared home. 'I believe you have not spoken two words since we left Kew; and now that I have asked you twice if you saw Chandos Howard playing lawn billiards with Lady Charlotte Lansing, you only answer, "Yes, dear, very pretty indeed!" It is to be hoped you will recover the use of your tongue and your senses before you appear at Carlton Terrace to-night.'

With which reproach Lady Dangerfield got out and went up the steps of her own aristocratic mansion.

Soames, the footman, flung open the drawing-room door, but Lady Cecil did not enter. She toiled wearily up to her own apartment, threw off her bonnet and scarf, as if even their weight oppressed her, and crossing to the gold-and ebony writing-desk, unlocked it, and took out her treasured relics once more.

'I do not need you to remind me of my folly any longer,' she said, looking at them. 'I will do now what I should have done this morning.'

The faintly sighing evening wind fluttered the lace curtains of the open window. She walked to it, gazed for a moment at the pictured face, set her lips, and deliberately tore up into minutes fragments the note and the picture. The summer breeze whirled them off in an instant, the spray of clematis, and the dark curl of hair followed, and then Lady Cecil rang for her maid, and dressed for the evening.

'They say—those wiseacres who make books—that every life has its romance. I suppose they are right, and so for ever has ended mine. Not the white satin to-night, Desiree—the blue silk and turquoise ornaments, I think!'

At half pas eleven that night—and when had the phenomenon occured before—the Earl of Ruysland returned to his neice's house. He had written and dispatched his letter, and though Lady Cecil had sent no message to Sir Arthur Tregenna, the letter contained a most encouraging and flattering one. He had dined at his club, he had indulged in chicken hazard for an hour, and at half-past eleven stood in the moonlight at Lady Dangerfield's door. He had been up, as you know, until half-past five the preceding day, and on the wintry side of fifty late hours and dissipation tell.

'I think I will give up London life,' he said to himself, 'and devote myself to growing old gracefully. Let me accomplish this marriage, pay my debts, and with refilled coffers, and a rejuvenated reputation, betake myself to pleasant Continental Spas and Badens, and live happy for ever after. Ah, Soames, have my lady and Lady Cecil departed for the ball?'

'Not yet, me Lord—dressing, me Lord—carriage has just been ordered round, me lord.'

Lord Ruysland ascended to the silent magnificence of the long drawing-rooms. There were three, opening one into the other, in a brilliant vista of velvet carpet, lace draperies, ormolu, and satin upholstery. They were deserted now, and the gass unlit. The range of windows, seven in number, stood wide open, and the silvery light of the resplendent June moon poured in.

'Silence and solitude,' muttered the earl; 'why the duce are they all in the dark? Aw, very pretty, indeed, brilliant moon and a cloudless sky—one might fancy it Venice instead of smoky, foggy, dingy London.'

He paused. The rooms were not deserted, it would seem, after all. Out of the lace and amber curtains of the seventh and farthest window, a figure emerged and approached him. The earl's eyes turned from the crystal moon, and fixed expectantly on the advancing figure—the figure of a woman. Who was it? Not a servant, surely, with that slow and stately tread, that assured air. Not little lady Dangerfield—the figure was tall; not Lady Cecil either—even she must have stood a full head shorter than this woman. Who was it?

The long drawing room lay in alternate stripes of darkness and light. The shadows hid her for a moment, she emerged into the moon rays again, and again disappeared. Who was she—this magnificently proportioned woman, in dark sweeping drapery, with that majestic stateliness of mein and walk?

She had not seen him. For the fourth time she came into the light, then the darkness took her—a fifth time she appeared, a sixth, and then she beheld the earl standing, curious, expectant, watching.

She stopped short; the moonlight fell upon her face—pale and calm. And the Earl of Ruysland, who for the last thirty years had outlived every phase of human emotion, uttered a low wordless cry, and fell slowly back. The sound of that startled cry, low as it was, reached her ear. The woman in the moonlight came a step nearer and spoke:—

'I beg your pardon. I should not have intruded, but I thought these rooms were quite deserted.'

What a sweet voice it was! Its tones lingered pleasantly on the ear like the low notes of a flute.

Her words broke the spell that held the earl. His eyes had been fixed with a sort of fascination on her face—a look of startled wonder on his own. And Raoul, Earl of Ruysland, was not easily startled. He drew a long breath and stood aside to let her pass.

'It is I who should apologize,' he said, with the courtly deference to all women that long habit had made a second nature to him, 'for startling you in so absurd a manner. I labored under the same delusion as yourself. I fancied these rooms forsaken. Soames! lights immediately.'

The tall footman set the chandeliers ablaze and closed the curtains. But the dark-draped lady had vanished.

'Who was that?' the earl asked carlessly; 'a visitor?'

'The govenes, me lord. Me lady's new nussery gov'nes, came two hours ago, me lord, which her name is Miss Encastle.

'Is the carriage waiting, Soames?' inquired my lady, sailing in in a sea of green silk and tulle illusion, illuminated with emeralds. 'You, uncle Raoul; and at half past eleven! What miracle will happen next? You don't mean to say you are comming with Cecil and me to the Duchess of Straheam's soiree musicale?'

'I don't, indeed. Nothing is further from my thoughts than soirees musicale. Ginevra, who is that new governess of yours?' She is your governess, Soames tells me.'

'What! Miss Herncastle! Where did you see her?'

'I saw her just now, as I came in. She is a very distinguished looking person, isn't she? Nursery governesses don't usually look like tragedy queens, do they? She has a remarkable face.'

'Has she? You are as enthusiastic as Queenie. She saw her at noon and raved about her for half an hour. I must be very blind or stupid; I confess I can only see a preposterously tall young woman, with a pale solemn face.'

'Enthusiastic, am I?' Lord Ruysland repeated. 'I was not aware that I was; but I once knew another face very like it—wonderfully like it. And I give you my word of honor that as I came upon Miss—ah, to be sure—Herncastle, standing there in the moonlight, I thought I saw a ghost.'

CHAPTER III.

SIR ARTHUR TREGENNA.

Far away, along the north coast of Cornwall, not far from 'the thundering shores of Bude and Boss,' there stands a huge pile of masonry, looking old enough to have been built by the hands of the Druids, and called Tregenna Towers. Its lofty battlemented towers pierced the blue air at a dizzy heighth—its beacon a landmark fifteen miles up and down the coast. From its sea wall you look sheer down three hundred feet of black and slaty cliffs into the white surging sea below. And to the right, three miles off, lying in a warm green hollow, is Tregenna village, its clusters of stone cottages, with roses, myrtle, and fuchsias blooming out of doors the year round. Gray, lonely, weather-beaten Tregenna Towers stands, with the steady sea gale howling around it, miles of foam-white sea, and a low, dusk, fast-driving sky over all. Right and left as far as you can see, and farther, spread moors, and mines, and fisheries, all claiming for their lord, Sir Arthur Tregenna, 12th baronet of his line, and one of the very wealthiest in the United Kingdom. You may wander on for miles over those purple ridgy moors. You may ask the brown fishermen or the black miners wherever you meet them, and the answer will still be the same—Sir Arthur Tregenna is lord of all.

Only once in seven years has the master's footsteps rung through the gray, lonesome rooms of Tregenna.—He is a wanderer over the earth from the North sea to Oceanica. Since his father's death, ten years before, when was three-and-twenty, Tregenna has seen but little of him—England either for that matter. And still with loving fidelity the old servants, the old tenants and retainers, look forward to the day when Sir Arthur will bring a bride to old Tregenna, and renew its ancient splendours. For they love him very dearly. The gentlest of masters, the most Christian of gentlemen, the kindest of landlords—that is what they will tell you about him. He might have been one of good King Arthur's knights, so stainless a record so high a code of honor, so unblemished a life lay behind him. He had loved his father with a rare and great love, and upon that father's death had gone abroad, and been an exile and a wanderer since.

On the second day of July, among the passengers who arrived at London Bridge terminus, straight from Tasmania, was Arthur Tregenna. His luggage was scant, there was nothing about him to betoken fabulous wealth and he drove at once to a certain old fashioned West end hotel, that his family had used for generations. He dined, dressed, and drove to Lowndes Square. But the shutters of that aristocratic mansion were closed, the furniture gone into holland shrouds, and an old woman in patterns who opened the door informed him, that the family had left only that very morning for Sussex.

'Then ther is nothing for it but to follow,' Sir Arthur thought. It is due to her—to my promise. I shall go down to-morrow.'

He went back to his hotel in the silvery summer dusk. London seemed new to him after years of wandering through Canadian wildernesses, Mexican tropics, Indian jungles, and American prairies; its roaring, surging, ceaseless Babel stunned him. He sat in an arm-chair near the open window, the last pink flash of the dying day upon him, and a thoughtful gravity habitual to it lying on his face.

He was a very tall, a very fair man, this Cornish baronet, with deep-set gray eyes, close cropped blonde hair, blonde whiskers, and not handsome. The face of a sun-burnt student, perhaps, never that of a handsome man—a face that could set itself stern as death—a face at once stern and proud, but a face that men might trust, and women love, for all that. A face that lit into wonderful warmth and geniality when he smiled, but Sir Arthur did not smile often.

The thoughtful gravity of his face was a shade graver even than usual this soft summer evening as he sat here alone. His eyes looked wearily over the surging sea of strange faces, with something of a tired, lonely light. 'Nine-and-twenty,' he was thinking, 'and I feel as lonely in England this first day of my return as though I had never set foot in it before. It is time I gave up this Bedouin sort of life, this wandering, gypsyish, vagabond kind of existence and ranger, as our lively French neighbors phrase it, and settle down to civilized life. And yet,—I don't know—the normal life suits me after all, and I may be glad to return to it. If I find her as I half expect to find her, I most assuredly shall. A London coquette is no wife for a plain, practical man like me. And I want a wife, not a butterfly.'

SHREWDNESS AND ABILITY.—Hop Bitters so freely advertised in all the papers, secular and religious, are having a large sale, and are supplanting all other medicines. There is no denying the virtues of the Hop plant, and the proprietors of these Bitters have shown great shrewdness and ability in compounding a Bitters, whose virtues are so palpable to every one's observation.—Examiner and Chronicle.

DRAFTHORSES.

PERIENCE OF HORSE DEALERS WHO HANDLE 40,000 ANNUALLY.

The Chicago Tribune has of late interested itself to a considerable extent in the subject of Draft Horses, and to enlighten its readers in this direction, published July 16th, a three-column article, in which it appears that it had detailed reporters to interview the leading horse dealers of New York City and Chicago, who buy and sell, in the aggregate, some 40,000 horses annually, as to the following points.

If they handled the several breeds of heavy draft horses known as French or Percheon-Norman, the Clydesdales, the English and Belgian, of which breed they handled most? Why most of a particular breed? What were the particular merits that this breed more desirable, therefore more saleable, than the others, etc.? The result shown by the detailed interviews gives overwhelming evidence that the Percheron-Normans eclipse all the other breeds as favorites among the dealers, owing to their vastly superior selling qualities. The evidence condensed briefly from this mass of testimony is that those who buy their horses to wear out, greatly prefer, the Percheron-Normans to any other breed, because they are more compactly and powerful built; are more enduring, having better feet to stand the hard wear of the city pavements; have better dispositions and are willing workers; are easier keepers, and generally give the best satisfaction. The Clydesdales were frequently criticized as being slim waisted, coarsely coupled, and generally having bad feet.

The general advice of the dealers to farmers was to breed to Percheron-Norman horses in preference to any other breed with reference to raising horses to sell on the city horse markets. It was also gathered that these grade Percheron-Normans bring from $50 to $75 more than any of the other breeds of same weight and condition.

The large dealers interviewed in Chicago, with the number of horses they handle annually, were: James D. Beckett, No 877 W. Randolph st., 3,000; M. Newgass, No. 17 Morgan st., 2,000; J. S. Cooper, No. 174 Michigan ave., 1,500; F. J. Berry, No. 2 Monroe st., 1,500; Joseph Lamb, No. 133 Michigan ave., 1,800. At Mansfield, O., A. J. Heineman, 2,500. In New York City, Isaac H. Dahlman, No. 209 E. Twenty-fourth st., 10,000; A. S. Chamberlin, No. 147 E. Twenty-fourth St., 3,500; Oakley & Smith, No. 160 E. Twenty-fourth st., 3,500; Jacob Dahlman, No. 207 E. Twenty-fourth St., 2,000; and C. & H. Hayman, No. 213 E. Twenty-fourth st., 3,000. In Brooklyn, N. Y., S. Richy, No. 331 Rutledge st., 1,500; Henry Newman, No. 328 Rutledge st., 1,500; and A. M. Stein & Co., No. 229 Washington st., 3 000.

We extract from interview with Mr. I. H. Dahlman, who is the most extensive horse dealer in America, all space will permit. It is but a reflex of the other dealers' testimony. He said: "I handle between 9,000 and 10,000 horses annually on my own account. Of the dwraft horses I handle nearly all Norman-Percheron horses. These Norman-Percheron horses are docile, intelligent, broad between the eyes, and have some brain. They are easily broken and steady in harness, meaning that they don't fret when they do their work. They are powerful horses, and compactly built, short in the back, deep in the body, and broad in the chest. This gives them what we call a good dinner-basket.

They have the best feet of any horse in America. They have a high cup foot. Their feet will stand work on the pavement better than those of any other breed. They are short-coated and thin skin and stand the hot weather the best of any breed. The Norman-Percherons generally give the best satisfaction to the people who buy them to wear out. They are finely developed for their ages. I put them into the harrest work at four years old. I buy these horses because they give the best satisfaction to my customers.

Being asked about the Clydesdale horses, Mr. Dahlman said, I will not give any criticism on the Clydesdales. I buy very few of them. I prefer to pass their stable and say nothing about them.

EARLY SPRING CHICKS.

In breeding poultry, no matter whether they are high priced thorough bred stock or no, the main idea with all is usually one of profit, and the proper way to commence as well as carry it out, is to try to make a fair profit, even if all the surplus stock is sold in the market at ordinary fowl-meat prices, and not at the usual advanced prices obtained for fine, pure-bred stock. Where this is done, there is rarely, if ever, any reasonable cause for dissatisfaction. Where a person has the conveyance, there is no way in which as much profit can be made from poultry as breeding extra early spring chicks, those which are ready to market with early Asparagus, and weigh from two to four-pounds per pair or more. There is always a large demand for these young 'broilers,' and at prices which are not entirely satisfactory for the breeder, but astonishing to those who are new to the business. As they are marketed when about three months old, they have cost but little for food, and pay double and treble the profits they would if kept until fall and then sold in the market at a dollar a piece, which price is much above the average. Aside from this accidents and sickness, which is no inconsiderable item, between the ages of three months or nine months, avoided.—D. Z. EVANS, JR., in American Agriculturist for Mar.
